Art honors

Judging of the entries for the 1985 Awards for Art in the Schools took place on Friday, May 10. The judges were Ronnie Waters, art coordinator for Derby Academy; George McGoff, art instruction at Wellesley High School, and Marc Brown, author and illustrator of children's books.

Elizabeth Hurley of Cohasset won first place in the Three Dimensional Art category.

One hundred seventy-five entries were submitted from 11 school districts.

The presentation of prizes will take place on Saturday, June 28, at 10:30 a.m. at the South Shore Art Festival on Cohasset Common.

Association member

Goodwin Graphics of Cohasset has been elected to membership in the Screen Printing Association International, President John M. Crawford announced from the association's executive offices in Fairfax, Va.

According to Ron Goodwin, general manager, Goodwin Graphics was established in 1982 and specializes in the screen printing of T-shirts, active sportswear and textiles. Goodwin also announced that due to continued growth and success of the company, they have moved their headquarters to larger offices at 164 Chief Justice Cushing Highway, Cohasset, 383-6355.

Goodwin has been involved in the art of screen printing since 1971 and is very active in his community. He is a member of the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce and has recently been elected vice president of the Cohasset Rotary Club.

Screen printing is an integral part of the graphic arts and is a leading production medium for point-of-purchase advertising. Screen printers represent a multibillion-dollar industry.

The Screen Printing Association is the international organization serving the screen printing industry, with members in 84 nations. The organization's prime objective is to promote recognition of their industry and provide members with a wide variety of technical, managerial and educational information and services.

Experience Japan at home

Have you ever been served a full course tempora dinner in your own home? Or discussed marriage customs with a young Japanese woman (who is planning a pre-arranged marriage in a year or two)? If not. . .why not host a Japanese student in your home this summer, July 19 through Aug. 18.

For the sixth consecutive year, college-age Japanese students will be returning to Cohasset/Scituate through the Cultural Homestay Institute, a non-profit, educational enrichment organization. In all over 85 area families have participated in the program hosting almost 100 Japanese students.

The program is designed to give structure and flexibility to both the students and the host families. There are planned activities — daily language classes, afternoon outings or sports, a Welcome Party and Sayonara Party — with free time in the evening and on weekends. As one mother has said. "It is an experience every family, especially with children, should enjoy. Once you have a student, then you look forward to having one again!"

For further information about this summer's program, contact co-ordinators Margot Cheel (383-9184) or Jill Suddath (383-9768).

Senior Center Day set for June 5

The Cohasset Senior Center Advisory Committee is sponsoring "Senior Center Day" Wednesday, June 5, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the Second Congregational Church. Senior citizens are welcome to participate in part or all of the planned events.

The Advisory Committee learned from the senior center surveys conducted this winter that few senior citizens in Cohasset had ever visited a senior center. Two groups of six programs have been organized so that each person may choose one from each and thereby have a "sampling" of the kinds of activities that might be offered through a senior center.

A pilot exercise program at the Cohasset Community Center and a book review workshop with Cohasset Librarian Richard Hayes will demonstrate the type of networking that a senior center would encourage with other community organizations.

The Committee also hopes to create the sense of a center as a place for seniors to socialize at and find the information and assistance they might need.

The May issue of the Council on Aging's monthly newsletter "Vista" was sent to all seniors with an invitation to Senior Center Day. In encouraging them to participate the Committee said, "By coming you can help us learn more about developing the kind of Senior Center you want for Cohasset." Registration forms on the invitation should be mailed to the Social Service League at 16 Highland Avenue.

Following registration and welcoming remarks from 9 to 9:30 a.m. on June 5, participants can attend one of six workshops in Group A, meeting from 9:30 to 10:30 a.m. Those include Stenciling with Nancy Clapp, an Armchair Trip to Israel with Rev. John Benbow, Shared Housing with Henry Stowers, Making Bread with Lot Bates, Ikebana-Japanese Flower Arranging with Fran O'Toole and Handmade Miniatures with Ann Hublitz.

There will be a coffee break from 10:30 to 11 a.m. followed by Group B programs from 11 a.m. to noon. Those include Book Reviews and Library Services with Richard Hayes, Exercise for Health with Joanne Sheppard, Home Equity Conversion Plans with Representative Mary Jeannette Murray, Oriental Rug Making with Virginia Harvey, Theorem Painting with Shirley Baer and Cut-and-Pierced Lamp Shades with Betty Christofori.

A luncheon will be served from 12:15 to 1:30 p.m. with a menu of veal Stroganoff, rice Florentine, herbed carrots, rye bread, milk, iced tea and dessert. The meal will be supplied by South Shore Elder Services through their caterer Daka. This is the same food service that is used by Meals-On-Wheels and several luncheon sites at other area senior centers. A $1 donation is requested.

Entertainment will be provided during lunch by soloists from the Deer Hill School Band and by the school's Concert Choir.

Following lunch those who wish may bring a small, inexpensive, wrapped "White Elephant" gift and participate in a Chinese Auction.

Two health clinics have also been planned and may be attended on a drop-in basis during the morning. Dr. Janet Codley will conduct glaucoma screenings and Mary Anne Hansen, R.N., will tke blood pressure.

For further information, or to register, please call the Social Service League office at 383-0771 or 383-0821.

Metropathways celebration May 23

The Metropathways Program, a program in which Cohasset High School Alternative School participates, is completing its 10th successful year of serving the greater Boston area. "Metronight," a performance given by the Metropathways students, will be presented on Thursday, May 23 at 7 p.m. in New England Life Hall.

Metropathways is an urban-suburban, multiracial program funded by the Massachusetts Department of Education for students, Grades nine through 12. Over 4,000 students have participated in the program over the past 10 years. Students attend class one day a week while attending their home schools on other days, and nearly 30 schools participate. Classes such as Music, Art, Working with People, Crime and Justice, Theater and Beantown Trolley: Art Adventures of Boston, attract kids from the city and the suburbs to work and to learn together.

In celebration and recognition of the "10 wonderful years" that Metropathways has brought people together, all students presently participating in the program will sing "We Are the World" as a finale of this year's "Metronight" performance. The words and the spirit of the song are in keeping with the philosophy and the commitment of the Metropathways Program.

The public is welcome and encouraged to attend "Metronight" on May 23 at 7 p.m. at the New England Life Hall.

Democrats pleased with issues convention

form specific statements on tax reform, housing, military spending, minority rights, older Americans, rules reform, the environment, and national security, among others.

Amendments were also prepared by the AFL-CIO, which proposed language dealing with workmen's compensation and with the minimum wage, and the Massachusetts Teachers Association, which prepared an amendment on the education bill now being considered at the State House.

Meanwhile, former Governor Edward King criticized the Democrats for continuing the liberal policies of the past and for being "out of the mainstream" of the electorate. King is reportedly considering running again for governor, this time as a Republican.

In contrast, the progressive caucus said there is "clear evidence that the Massachusetts Democratic Party leadership is orchestrating a major move away from many issues they label as controversial or progressive."

The convention opened Friday night, May 17 in the Springfield Civic Center with a speech by Congressman Barney Frank, who said that one problem the Democrats had in 1984 was that "we spent too much effort trying to perfect Walter Mondale, and not enough in challenging Ronald Reagan."

The major controversy of Friday night was a charter amendment that would have added gays and lesbians as an official target group for outreach and affirmative action by the Democratic Stae Committee.

That charter amendment was resoundingly defeated, by a 3-1 vote of the delegates. The 1472-523 vote of the convention to reject that amendment was shared by the six Cohasset delegates, who all voted against the amendment.

The other major event of Friday night was the constant effort of progressive caucus members and others to get signatures on petitions so their amendments could be considered. An amendment needed 400 signatures to be considered.

Friday night and early Saturday was also the occasion for state committee people, and others who believed that few amendments were needed, to try to discourage the submittal of amendments to the convention.

However, it seems that every amendment proposed got enough signatures. Still, there were less amendments than in 1983, when almost 100 amendments were proposed. The progressive caucus and others agreed to stay within the spirit of the new platform and to limit amendments.

After the charter amendments were considered Friday night, the delegates attended the requisite parties, hosted by Senator John Kerry, the Democratic State Committee, the minority caucus, and others.

Saturday morning, many of the Cohasset delegates attended a coffee and doughnuts reception hosted by Congressman Gerry Studds, who could not attend because his plane was fogbound in Boston.

The Saturday session of the convention was dominated more by many miscellaneous speeches by various politicians than by the consideration of amendments. Chairman Atkins reminded delegates of the Celtics' game to begin that afternoon, and said they would keep delegates up-to-date of the score if the convention ran late.

Many delegates, then, did not pay close attention and constantly milled around the hall. All of the votes Saturday were by voice vote, and all but two of the proposed amendments passed overwhelmingly. There seemed to be little controversy.

"Maybe if more people at the convention took an active interest, and raised some controversy, it would raise some awareness among the regular voter, and perhaps more of them would go out and vote," said Karen Corcoran.

While most of the votes taken on platform amendments were non-controversial and were voted in without any opposition, there was some discussion and debate on nuclear power, abortion, and on foreign policy issues.

"Basically, everybody has their priority issue," said Corcoran. "My main concern is American foreign policy in Central America, which I am opposed to. I felt the platform addressed that problem very well by making a statement in support of a peaceful resolution of the crisis there."

John McNabb was a member of the environmental caucus of Massachusetts Democrats, which drafted and proposed an amendment to the platform that included language in support of strong environmental protection. That amendment received 1,000 petition signatures and was passed on a voice vote with no opposition.

Donna McGee worked as a teller of votes for the delegation from our state senatorial district, while Paul Donovan, who is press secretary for Senator John Kerry, was busy following up on convention business for Kerry.

Most delegates agreed that this year's convention was not very exciting. There is still some disagreement on whether the approach taken in this platform will be beneficial to the Democratic Party on the National level.

"The convention process is still very valuable," said McGee, who pointed out that it is an open process that encourages the participation of all registered Democrats. "The Democratic Party is still alive and well," she concluded.

Facility permit regulations

Facility permits may be obtained at the Recreation Office, 1st floor, Town Hall, Monday June 3 through Saturday, July 20, excluding Thursday, July 4.

Times: Monday thru Thursday, 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.; Friday, 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.; Thursday evenings, 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. and Saturday mornings, 9 a.m. to 12 noon.

Also Monday, July 22 thru Friday, August 9, Monday, Wednesday, Friday, only 10 a.m. to 12 noon.

Section I: You will need registration of vehicle(s), if not on Massachusetts registration, proof of residency (tax bill or rental lease); check payable to 'Town of Cohasset' (while cash will be accepted, checks are preferred); permits are issued to vehicles of residents. Each permit is $6, seniors, 63 years of age and over, will be charged $3 per permit if vehicle is registered in seniors name. All replacement permits will be $2 each.

Section II—Non-transferability: Each permit issued will, for vehicle owners, have your plate number printed on the sticker. Should you require a new permit, due to the sale of your automobile or change in plate number, please bring back a portion of the original sticker, and you will be issued a new permit for $2.

Section III—Period of Grace: Beginning May 1, of each year you will be issued (no fee) a permit for the remainder of the current season. This permit will expire on July 1, by which time you must obtain a new permit, at the established rate.

Any questions regarding Facility Permits should be directed to the Recreation Department Office, first floor, Town Hall, or call 383-6791.

Rules and Regulations

Section I Resident Permits: $6 for each permit and $2 for replacement permits, with either previous sticker or receipt from first payment.

Seniors 63 years of age and over, all permits $3 with proof of age and vehicle registration(s) in seniors name only.

Section II Sandy Beach Association Non-Resident Permits: Permits are issued only if your name appears on the list supplied by the Sandy Beach Association. One permit per family.

Section III Government Island Non-Resident: Permits are issued only if your name and name of craft appear on the list supplied by the Harbor Master. Permits are $15, restricted to Government Island and one permit per boat.

Section V Guest Permits: No guest permits will be issued.

Section VI Rentals: Families who document rentals with lease, and are renting in Cohasset for 60 days or more, may obtain a Facility Permit at the rate of resident permits.

Families who document rentals with lease, and are renting in Cohasset for less than 60 days, will be issued a letter, rather than a permit covering the time of their stay, at the rate of resident permits.

Section VII Business Owner Permits: Non-resident Cohasset business owners who desire a permit must have vehicle registered thru business and in Cohasset. One permit per business vehicle will be issued at the resident rate of $6 unless they use the landfill.

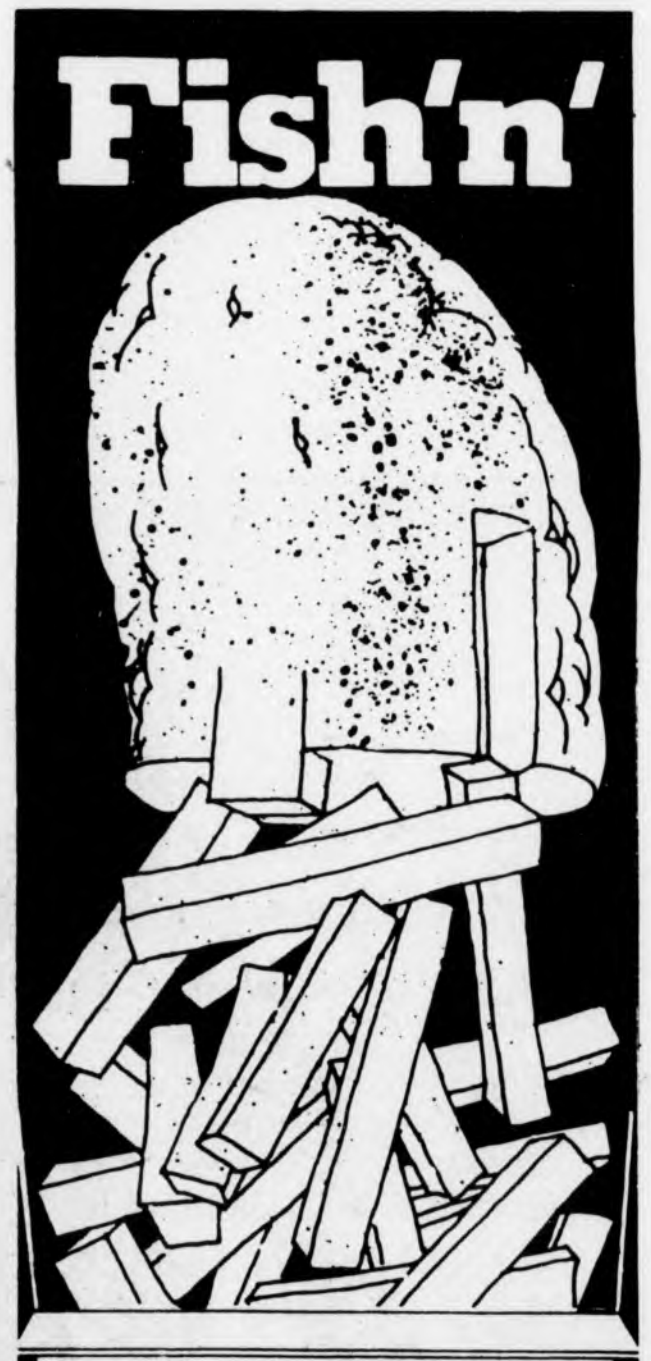
Tennis and squash tournament

The Cohasset Tennis and Squash Club ended its 1984-85 season Saturday by crowning champions in nine different divisions. The year-end tournament was the biggest in the club's history, club managers Dick and Kathy Pocock reported.

Chip Rowley of Hingham, in a Saturday afternoon marathon that lasted five hours, won both the men's AA singles and men's AA doubles championship. In the singles, Rowley beat Terry Kahn of Cohasset, 6-2, 6-7 (8-6), 6-4. Then Kahn paired with Rowley for the doubles, edging Bill Marsden and Curt Smalzel, 2-6, 6-4, 7-6 (7-4). In that match, Marsden and Smalzel fought off four match points, and came within two points of upsetting the club's top-ranked doubles team.

In the AA mixed doubles, Rob and Pam Henry upset defending champions George Fitzsimmons and Sue Shevlin, 6-4, 6-3, to win that title.

Debby Martin of Cohasset took a close match from Hingham's Kathy Reardon, 7-5, 6-2, for the women's singles title.



Mike Haughy beat Gerry Gigon for the club squash championship, 15-9, 15-11, 16-18, 18-16.

In A competition, Paul Carroll and Emmet O'Brien beat Michael Rybarski and Gary Adams in one of the tournament's closest matches, 4-6, 7-6, 6-4. The mixed doubles were taken by Terry and Rose Kahn over Jay and Mary Kakas. And the women's doubles were won by Kathy Reardon and Shelly Weier over Linda O'Loughlin and Kerry Kirkendall, 1-6, 6-4, 7-5.

Consolation trophies were won by Linda and Peter O'Loughlin and by Kathy and Bill Reardon in the two mixed doubles divisions.

So. Shore Conservatory summer program announced

The eight-week summer term will begin at the South Shore Conservatory in Hingham and Duxbury June 24 - 25.

The conservatory will offer private lessons and special classes for children and adults at all levels of proficiency. The school's professional faculty will teach Monday through Friday during the summer.

At the Hingham branch, the summer classes for children will include: a summer preschool program two, three or five mornings a week with outdoor activities stressed for three to six-year-olds; Suzuki violin or piano lessons; an introductory music class called "The Joy of Music" (three to six years); Guitar Fun; Kinder Keys (beginning piano classes for children five to seven); ballet; creative dramatics and a children's string ensemble, "Summer Strings."

Something new in children's classes will be "Music for Mom and Me" for mothers with their babies, six months to 2 1/2 years.

Sarah Smith, a Kodaly and voice specialist, will conduct the class.

Mothers and their babies will share songs, movement, games and poetry to experience the joy of music and creativity.

Kinder Keys is also a new addition to the schedule. These piano classes, limited to five children per class (five to seven-years-old), will familiarize them with names of notes, keys and notes on the staff. They will use a book called "Color My Piano Lesson." This should be an enjoyable introduction to the piano and a good preparation for either Suzuki or traditional piano lessons.

Intermediate string players in the fourth through the eighth grades will have this special opportunity for ensemble experience. This group will be directed by Barta Nevel of the Suzuki String Department. Violin, cello and viola, as well as bass players, are welcome. They will explore a variety of music literature for strings and will give a concert at the end of the eight-week program.

In addition to private instruction, adults may enjoy ballet, jazz dance, chamber music or join a jazz or rock ensemble. The Conservatory's Jazz-Rock Department employs a faculty of professionals in the field who will give private instruction in jazz piano, saxophone, guitar and percussion and conduct the jazz and rock ensembles.

The groups will give public performances during the session.

For registration information and a free schedule about the Hingham summer program, come to the office off 19 Fort Hill Street in Hingham or call 749-7565. The Duxbury branch is located in the First Parish Church on Tremont Street in Duxbury. Call 934-2731 for information about the program for the summer. Lessons will be available Tuesday and Wednesday in the Duxbury branch.

The South Shore Conservatory is a non-profit community school of the arts. It has three branches in Hingham, Duxbury and Brockton. There will be no summer term at the Brockton branch. The conservatory is funded in part by the Mass. Council on the Arts and Humanities.

Special spring historical tour Saturday

This Friday at 11 a.m. the Cohasset Historical Society and Cohasset Recreation Commission will sponsor a special spring tour of the Historical Society's two museum buildings at Cohasset Center, the Capt. John Wilson House and the Maritime Museum.

The tour will meet at the Maritime Museum on Elm Street. A donation of $1 per person will be accepted at the door.

The Capt. John Wilson House, built in 1810, was the home of a Cohasset seafarer and then remained in the Wilson family until 1912 when it was purchased by Cohasset businessman William Hamilton McGaw.

In 1936, McGaw gave the house to the Historical Society in memory of his wife, Priscilla Lothrop Collier, and it became Cohasset's first historical museum. Today, the Wilson House contains a collection of household artifacts from early Cohasset homes, including children's toys, furniture, kitchenware, and other furnishings. Artworks of local historical significance grace the walls of the house.

The Maritime Museum, dating from the latter 18th century, origninally was the ship chandlery for the Bates family schooner fishing fleet. One of the few buildings remaining from Cohasset's seafaring and fishing industry, it was given to the Historical Society in 1955 by Mr. and Mrs. William Cox and moved to its present site from the Cove.

The Maritime Museum contains numerous collections relating to the "Age of Sail" of a New England fishing village, as well as a general collection of historical artifacts from old Cohasset. Ship models, carvings, relics from shipwrecks, 19th century fishing gear, lifesaving memorabilia, old tools, stone artifacts of the Quonahasset Indians and numerous other items of historical interest can be seen at the Society's Maritime Museum.

Please call the Recreation Office to register for this special guided tour, 383-6791.

Summer Gymnastic Camp

The Cohasset Community Center is accepting registration for the Summer Gymnastic Camp. Camp will run for six weeks starting July 8. Registration may be for one week or as many as you are interested in with the cost being $40 per week, Monday through Friday from 10 a.m. to 12:30.

The daily schedule will include ten minutes of warm-ups, thirty minutes of dance and one-half hour rotations on the bar, beam, vault and mats.

All classes will be limited in size. Reservations should be made as soon as possible.

Call Ruthann Sargent or call the Center 383-0088 to register.

The Center is also offering tennis lessons in two sessions. The first session begins week of June 3, second session week of July 15. Classes will run for six weeks; one hour per week at a private court.

Sign up to learn or improve your game. The cost of six - one hour lessons is $24.

A classic 'Life with Father'

By Judith Montiminy

The final production of the current premiere season at the Nickerson Theatre in Norwell is the classic American comedy, Lindsay and Crouse's "Life With Father." Running on Broadway between 1939 and 1947, "Life With Father" brought the red-headed Day family into the lives of many. Mother Vinnie's firm-mindedness and manipulation of the stern, irascible Clarence was funny and endearing. "Father" himself was endearing in his own way as well.

The production at the Nickerson Theatre is alive with a shrewd, yet delightful Vinnie, played by Darcy Pulliam. Her mental balancing of the family books are enough to make one's head spin. Consider: if one purchases a china dog for $30, returns it in exchange for young Clarence's new suit, then the suit cost nothing.

Right? Afterall, the suit was paid for with the dog, so the store couldn't charge for the suit. And since Mrs. Day no longer owns the dog how can the store charge her for it? As she explains to her confounded, stockbroker husband, the suit would not cost him anything.

Clarence Jr. (Eric Beatty) is far less adept at handling his father. Forced to wear hand-me-down suits, young Clarence cannot do anything his father wouldn't do while in his father's clothing. Complications follow when young Clarence meets Mary Skinner (Sally Campbell) and decides he does, in fact, like girls after all. The scenes with Clarence Jr. and Mary are silly by today's standards, but within the context of the late 1880's, they are charming.

What is not charming in this production is Jim Oyster's Father. Clarence Day was a hard-driving, often pigheaded man. But beneath the surface there was always that proverbial heart of gold. He never could deny Vinnie her most outlandish wishes. He wanted his four sons to walk a very straight line, but he loved them, nonetheless.

In the Nickerson production, Oyster did not seem comfortable in the scenes he shared with his sons, especially the youngest ones. The underlying tenderness of the character was missing. Lots of shouting and gruffness were poor substitutes for the required precision and forthrightness of Clarence Day.

The pace of the play slowed during Oyster's scenes. "Life With Father" seemed to have more life to it without Father.

"It's really too bad, because the other elements of the play work well. Hingham's Joan Ferenchak Brancale's Victorian dining room set is pleasingly adorned with the knick-knacks of the era; Craig Sonnenberg's costumes serve the Day family well. Director Nora Hussey presents a good visual image of the Day family, but ran aground with the pacing of the critical scenes with Father.

"Life with Father" cast from the Nickerson Theatre production.

The supporting cast works hard. Jared Waye's son John is appropriately eager. The question is, however, why the actor was allowed to keep his dark brown hair when the Days are well-known for being a family of redheads. Even auburn tones would have been acceptable.

The two younger sons are played alternately by four young boys, three of whom come from the South Shore. Douglas Murray (Whitney) comes from Braintree; Bernard Zilinskas (Whitney) lives in Scituate; and Justin Morse (Harlan) is a first grader in Norwell. The other Harlan, Jeffrey Andrea, is a second grader in Charlestown.

"Life With Father" continues through June 8, one additional week than previously announced. Performances are Tuesday through Thursday at 8 p.m.; Friday and Saturday at 8:30 p.m.; Sunday matinee at 2 p.m.; and Sunday evening at 7 p.m.

Due to the popularity of the Nickerson Theatre, a specal two-play summer season will be inaugurated in July. Check The Mariner for further details.

Bank official's atty. asks for acquittal

Michael Collora, attorney for Hanover resident Donald Winn, says he is hopeful his client will be acquitted when the trial now underway in U.S. District Court in Boston ends as expected this week.

Winn, a senior vice-president of Rockland Trust Co., was charged last December with failure to report large cash transactions totaling over $700,000 and was indicted by a federal grand jury on 15 felony counts.

The federal government, under a 1970 law, requires banks to report all cash transactions over $10,000 to the Internal Revenue Service.

Collora said the case against Winn was based on canceled checks of large sums of money issued by Michael Del Greco, a Quincy coin dealer, to his customers. Del Greco had allegedly issued the checks to dealers for gold and silver he purchased from them. His customers later were reported to have cashed the checks, ranging from $10,000 to $75,000 at the Rockland Trust Co. Government officials charge that the bank took the checks and gave the customers cash for them without filing the required reports for the IRS.

"Winn was charged with causing the bank to not report the transactions but that's not true," Collora said in a telephone interview late Monday. "There was a misunderstanding on what had to be reported and what didn't."

The trial, now in its second week, took a surprising turn last Friday, when Collora introduced evidence that the Rockland Trust Co. gave treasurer's checks, not cash, for Del Greco's checks. Collora said he discovered the information when he spoke with Hingham branch manager, Carmela Osgood.

"We began to have a sense of what was taking place when we talked with the branch manager. She said they never gave cash for checks over $10,000. We began examining the paper work and then subpoenaed the appropriate documents," Collora explained.

He said the amount of cash given on large checks presented to the bank ranged from $98 to a single instance of just $10,000. "The rest was in treasurer's checks."

Refusing to comment on the progress of the federal court trial, Collora said. "I certainly hope Winn will be acquitted."

Winn, 47, the owner of Hanover Coin on Rte. 53, is on leave of absence from the Rockland Trust Co.

At the time of the indictment last December, Rockland Trust treasurer Alan Peterson maintained the bank's support of all its employees, including Winn.

Peterson said at the time, "The bank continues to believe none of its employees knowingly has done anything wrong."

Summer Street screen porch approved

The Zoning Board of Appeals granted a special permit May 7 to Charles and Elizabeth Fink to reconstruct an existing screened porch at 17 Summer Street.

The porch is located within the flooplain and watershed protection district. The current porch is ten feet by sixteen feet. It is screened and supported by a pipe frame with an awning. According to the applicants, it is in a state of decay.

The proposed reconstruction will produce a porch which will be sixteen feet by sixteen feet, contain fixed windows and skylights. It will not be heated, nor will it be insulated. It will contain electrical outlets, as does the existing porch. The Finks indicated that the porch is utlizied four to five months a year and the reconstructed porch will be used eight to nine months of the year.

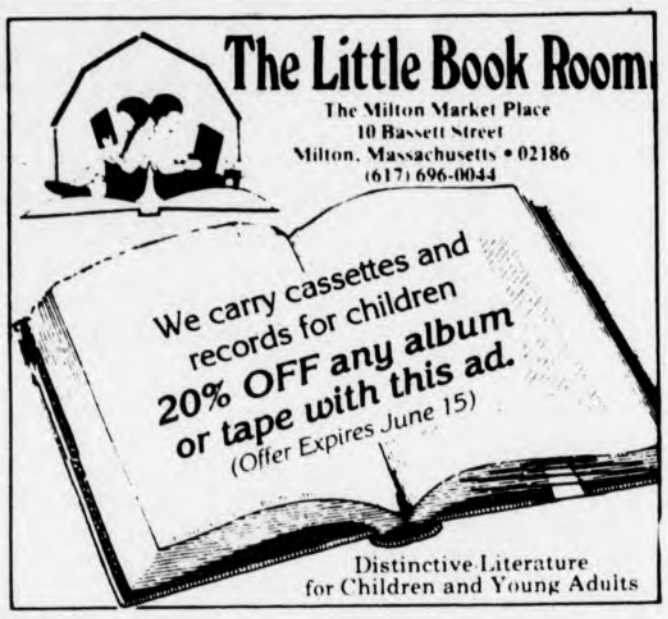
The current porch is supported by a five-foot, one-inch by one-foot, nine-inch footing and two posts. The proposed reconstruction proposes the removal of the two posts and the addition of four eight-inch concrete tube footings which will be eight inches above grade and lie within the flooplain.

The Board of Health indicated no objection to the application.

Based on the hearing held April 4, the zoning board found that the land is not subject to flooding or tidal action, and is ten feet above mean sea level; the proposed construction will not obstruct or divert flood flow; the proposed system or drainage will not cause pollution; and the proposed use of the land does not derogate substantially from the purposes of the floodplain and watershed protection district.

The board then voted to grant the special permit for the reconstruction of the screened porch.

Screened porch on Lothrop Lane ok'd



In a May 3 decision, the Zoning Board of Appeals granted a special permit for construction of an addition to the screened porch at 36 Lothrop Lane.

The applicant, Lucille McLoughlin, requested a permit to build the porch addition in the floodplain.

Contractor Earle Higgins presented several drawings to the board, detailing the nine foot by forty-four inch screened porch. Two of the porch footings would be constructed within the floodplain. Higgins explained the addition would be used as a porch only.

The Board of Health had submitted no objections to the plan, and the Conservation Commission had previously voted that the construction would have a neglible impact on the floodplain.

The zoning board members found the land is not subject to flooding; is ten feet above mean sea level; the construction will not obstruct or divert flood flow; the system will not cause pollution; and the proposed use of the land does not derogate substantially from the purposes of the floodplain.

Carol Barrett focuses on nursing education

By Charlotte Carney

It was a proud day for Christine Barrett, a senior at Tufts University, and the entire Barrett family, when Mrs. Carol Barrett, Director of Nursing Staff Education at Brigham and Women's Hospital, received an honorary induction into Sigma Theta Tau, the Alpha Chi Chapter of the National Society of Nursing.

Carol and Jeremiah Barrett reside with their three children at 156 Linden Avenue.

This prestigious honor is given to those who have demonstrated outstanding contributions in their field.

The Alpha Chi Chapter of the National Society of Nursing is affiliated with the Boston College School of Nursing in Chestnut Hill.

Carol Barrett has stayed dedicated to her profession for more than 25 years.

"I decided to go into nursing in high school," said Mrs. Barrett. Back in the fifties, women did not have the choices that they have today. "I stayed focused in nursing education. I feel that in any profession, one must stay 'focused' to achieve your ultimate goals."

Mrs. Barrett, after receiving her diploma in nursing in Hartford, Conn., went onto Boston College for her B.S. and then to Boston University where she received her Masters in nursing.

Learning is a never-ending situation and Mrs. Barrett is presently continuing her education at the Harvard School of Public Health.

As with most women who must learn to juggle family, home care, and career, "a 14-hour day is not unusual for me," Mrs. Barrett admitted. "As in the case of most 'A' type behaviors, I have to be careful not to take on too many things at one time."

Mrs. Barrett seems to be doing quite well with maintaining her career and family obligations.

Presently, she is also a consultant for Medcom Inc., a company which produces educational audi-visual software for nursing procedures.

As if she possessed any 'spare time,' Mrs. Barrett also volunteers her energies as a member of the Cohasset Emergency Medical Advisory Committee. This group was formulated by selectmen about a year ago to study the town's EMT and ambulance service.

If success can be measured by one's contribution to society and personal integrity, then Carol Barrett is truly a 'successful' person.

PATCHES by Lois Martin

Someone cares about how you sleep

This is personal. But there's no reason it can't be personable as well.

It's about you and me and our relationship with our beds, so it's important.

. . . Because May is Better Sleep Month. While you've been wagging your head in disbelief about Philadelphia or whining about your dandelions, I have been reverently observing Better Sleep Month . . . all by myself, I might add.

The subject was raised by a news release sent to me from the Better Sleep Council, headquartered in Arlington, Virginia. I confess I was not aware of its presence. The council says it's "the media's source of information on sleep."

PATCHES

Hey, I should admit it. My knowledge of sleep is based on my singular experience. Obviously my awareness of the subject is more shallow than my ignorance of it.

So I called Leanne Monroe, the nearly jubilant representative of the council's public relations branch. She said the organization is a non-profit one supported by the National Association of Bedding Manufacturers. Her job is to highlight the role of bedding, the whole structure. I would hope so.

People spend time, she said, making the bed pretty but they never think about what's underneath. I for one have avoided that as not being any of my business.

Leanne confided that she, herself, had slept on the same mattress 15 years or so without realizing the lumps and bumps involved in her night's rest. She's replaced those now, so you needn't worry.

The council provides information, like "The Complete Book of Sleep," and "Good Night, America." These help poor sleepers understand and overcome problems.

But I'd guess the first thing they might blame is your mattress. my foundation is going to be maligned by strangers, albeit non profit ones, supported by bedding makers.

I've never bought the story about the sandman. The council uses the myth as an introduction to its news release. I think you go to bed and you're on your own going to sleep. It's entirely personal.

I don't do dust ruffles, though I can imagine the advantage to having dust condolidated all in one area. And I could not be classified as a utilitarian sleeper. That is, I don't consider a bed to be a hard, healthy mattress with one sheet and one blanket.

My bed means more than that to me. It is sometimes a refuge, always welcoming and the place where I entrust my body for the night.

The quality of my sleeping accommodations is directly related to its coziness. Some might say my mattress, in addition to being too long in one place, is exemplary of that attributed to Momma Bear. Soft, so you envision yourself slipping from sight. Nice.

I have long endured unkind remarks from people about my sleeping habits. They have ridiculed me for my early-to-bed tendencies, suggesting that if Americans spend one third of their lives in bed, I am the exception by not waiting until night to do so.

In part that is due to other factors. Those aren't included under the auspices of the council. They are: a warming nightie and clean sheets. Those combine often and early to anesthetize me. I have, unfortunately, answered a lot of phone calls while under the effects of sleep. There are subtle nuances conducive to sleep, rain on the skylight, wind whispering or whistling, unnerving during blizzards, calming on a balmy night.

Probably the sleep experts have statistics on the relevancy of day or night people with types of mattresses hard or soft, or rippled.

They've studied the sprawlers opposed to the people who doze off and awake without having disturbed a spring. They can spot someone who sleeps and then wakes for an hour or so before drifting off again.

This I know. Nappers are probably night poeple. No daytime person would waste the peak time by losing consciousness in the middle of the day. But I've envied people who can lie down and be gone or sit in a chair and pick up rest at whim.

Not I. Bed is a commitment and a respite. Naps are boring and leave me trying to wake up right through supper.

But if you sleep, you are not alone. Perhaps, that should be rephrased. If you sleep, the Better Sleep Council in Arlington, Virginia, cares about how you do it.

There's a disappointment in store for the person who takes the council's "Bedtime Trivia Quiz," however.

There are no answers that I could find for the important questions. I have no avenue now of knowing what kind of bed President and Mrs. Reagan sleep on . . . "king size top-of-the-line, dual king adjustable or futon," whatever that may be.

MUSINGS

By John H. Cutler

☐ The National Council of Teachers of English recently announced its annual awards for misuse of the English language. The Defense Department won honorable mention on several counts: for calling peace "permanent pre-hostility"; for referring to combat as "Violence processing," and for calling civilian casualties "collateral damages."

☐ The Nuclear Age is here to stay, but I'm not sure that we are. If we are not careful all men will be cremated equal.

☐ Except from the Gastonia (NC) Gazette: "The Japanese team wants $2,500 plus broad and room."

☐ Headlines that make you look twice:

Mother of 12 Puts off Marriage. San Jose (CA) Mercury.

Grandma Told to Produce Indian Tots. Ft. Lauderdale (FL) Daily News.

☐ A cubic inch of topsoil can contain literally billions of creatures--everything from worms, ants, mites, springtails and nematodes, to a vast array of bacteria, fungi and viruses.

☐ Your children may live to see the first man on Mars and the last elm tree in the U.S. They may also live to see the last Right Whale. Only 200 of these whales are extant.

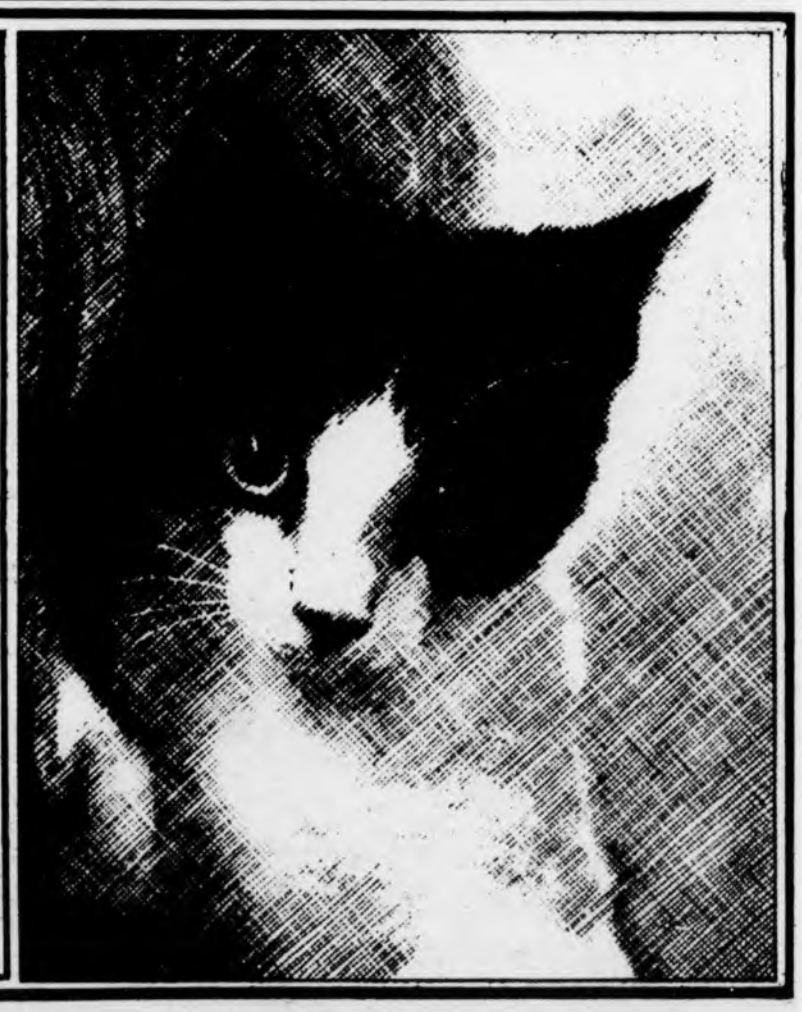
☐ Two marriages in five end in divorce. The other three fight it out to the end.

☐ Since the beginning of time, most wars have been fought over religion, but Napoleon said, "Religion is what keeps the poor from murdering the rich."

☐ Some wise guy said, "A man in love mistakes a pimple for a dimple."

☐ Did you know that Daniel Webster was at his oratorical best when he had a drink or four.

☐ John Sears brings this one back from a recent trip to New Zealand: "A continental breakfast in that country is a roll in bed with honey."



☐ Somewhere I read about an irate landowner who posted the following sign on his property: "No hunting or fishing. Survivors will be prosecuted." One morning while I was walking on the beach in the Bahamas, I actually saw the sign: "No Trespassing. Guard Dogs. Survivors will be prosecuted."

☐ When your superior receives you as an equal you are already his superior.

FROM THE KITCHEN

by JOAN PINKHAM

Shedding our bulky down coats often reveals a bulge here and there a skimpy bathing suit or tennis shorts can't hide. Aware that if the east wind ever stops blowing in off the ocean long enough, now is the time to shed a few pounds. We watched with envy the other night as a slim, young thing reached for another of Pat's buttery brownies, all the while telling her menu for lunch that day — bread pudding and chocolate cream pie! Reeling from that calorie-laden tidbit, we next heard from the trim fellow who passed up the bountiful buffet offered at the restaurant where they went for Mother's Day. Having had breakfast much earlier, he devoted himself to a huge slab of chocolate cake topped with a mound of ice cream. Ann Grassie will tempt many of us with this recipe, but, after all, strawberries aren't in season for too long, so how about a slice of her

STRAWBERRY CHIFFON PIE

1½ T plain gelatin
1 c. crushed strawberries
1/2 c. sugar
1 c. whipped cream (Ann uses cool whip)
1 egg white, beaten stiff
1 baked pie shell, 9"

Soak gelatin in 1/4 c. cold water. Set aside. Sprinkle sugar over berries, let stand until sugar is dissolved. Add gelatin mix which has been softened over hot water, to strawberries, stirring well. Add beaten egg white and whipped cream to berries and fold in with spatula. Place in cool pie shell and cool in refrigerator at least three hours. Top each slice with cream and a berry on top.

Devastatingly slender, though usually seen sipping from a glass of champagne and munching on caviar on toast, is Alexis on TV's saga, "Dynasty." Visions of doing the same are soon forgotten after reading that the spring catch of caviar from the Iranian deep-water end of the Caspian Sea is being sold at discount in New York's specialty stores. Caviar is harvested twice each year — from September to late November and again from the end of February through May. The best beluga caviar is $272 a pound ($320 after May 31). Keep these bargain rates in mind if you feel a craving and reach for a second serving of Ann's pie if you must indulge. While on the subject of pies, it's a treat to have this "never fail" recipe for pie crust which Virginia Henrich is sharing with us. Elsie B. Shepherd of Pembroke, her mother, used to make her pie crusts this way:

Salt, approx. 1/2 tsp.
1 lb. lard

In a measuring cup break one egg. Fill cup with water to make one cup of liquid. Mix flour and lard until well blended, until about the size of a pea, using a fork. Stir, adding water and egg mixture slowly. This makes two double crusts and the mix can be stored or frozen in refrigerator.

Sinfully rich, but oh so good is this recipe which I gleamed from our daughter-in-law, Katie. Diets were cast to the wind during the buffet she served as we gathered at their Ft. Devon's home following the promotion ceremony for one of our sons. Some of us puzzled over why such a delicious dessert should have such a strange name as

HAMMER CAKE

2 pkg. Lady Fingers
2 pkg. instant chocolate pudding
1 Cool Whip, 8 oz. container
6 Heath Candy Bars

Mix pudding as directed on pkg. Break candy bars into small pieces. In 9x13" pan, layer as follows:

1 pkg. Lady Fingers
1/2 pudding
1/2 Cool Whip
1/2 candy bars

Repeat layers and refrigerate.

Thanks to our readers, we now have a few answers for you for the questions asked in the column in the May 8 edition of the Mariner. Margaret C. has been making the Lemon Grapenut Pudding for 40 years, since she was a bride in Framingham, and says: "It's supposed to curdle when you add the milk to the lemon juice, but when you put it in the oven it comes out delicious" . . . Maureen Garretson, whose family owns acres of bogs in Marshfield, says cranberry growers do not find it profitable to freeze and market their product and we can only do what her family does; fill our freezers with freshly harvested berries in the fall.

Saltwater Fish Finder

Cod: Good jigging on cod from the bell at Green Harbor, H-Buoy off Scituate and on Stellwagen Bank.

Pollack: Small pollack are in the bays from Quincy to Plymouth area with larger fish up to 30 lbs. on Stellwagen Bank.

Mackeral: Huge schools of mackeral are roaming the 60 ft. depth waters from the bell off Green Harbor to Minot Light with peak fishing around the H-Buoy at Scituate. Jigging with 3 to 6 oz. jigs and Xmas tree rigs is best.

Striped Bass: Stripers (one per person) with a 24" limit on size, are showing up on Cape Cod Bay. Shore fishing will produce best results as these school bass are feeding along beaches on the inner bay. School bass are now in the North River and around Powder Point Bridge in Duxbury.

Blue Fish: Should be on the south side and Horseshoe Shoals, off Falmouth with larger fish on Middleground off of Martha's Vineyard.

Fluke: 2 to 4 lbs. fish and a few larger are moving into Buzzards Bay and boat fishing has been steady.

Flounder: Good flounder fishing around Boston Harbor, Quincy Bay, Hingham Bay, and Duxbury Beach area off of High Pines. Other than these areas fishing has been slow.

Tautog: Large fish continue to be caught in the Duxbury Bay area and off Duxbury Beach, but with the spawning season upon us this will slow down.

Politicus — by David A. Mittell, Jr.

The marathon as a run to 'A City Upon A Hill'

The venerable Boston Marathon has lately joined the Red Sox and the Patriots as a favorite whipping boy of our sportswriters—those alleged journalists Ted Williams used sarcastically to call "knights of the keyboard." After five years of hypercritical commentary, reckless injury has been done both to the Marathon and to the fine people, past and present, in charge of it.

There are two schools of critical thought with respect to the Marathon, neither of which in my view have much merit or much sense of the spirit of the event. The first is the (Globe sportswriter) Will McDonough School which says: ". . . put the Marathon under a microscope, hound the bastards at the B.A.A. who run it, harp on every mistake, and eventually [as I understand him] hope to take the thing by eminent domain" . . . apparently to be run in the 21st century by the people who run the M.B.T.A. and the M.D.C.

At the bottom the hypercritical reporting of McDonough and others is wrong because it forgets that the Marathon is, and its organizers hope to be, a sporting event. Its essential beauty is 8,000 runners, from college students to cancer patients to dry drunks to world class performers, running to finish—a tiny few of them also running to win.

Let me illustrate with a personal revelation, the sort I don't usually care to put in this space. I have run four Boston Marathons. My best time was in 1979. 1979 was a year of a very painful personal break-up. Completing the Marathon, and doing so in personal record time, represented a determination to prevail in the real "marathon," life. Every person who ever ran Boston has a similar story to tell, or a better one. A million spectators seem to understand that, but Will McDonough seems not to. McDonough seems to think that if one Rosie Ruiz jumps into the race at the finish line or one organizer gets arrested the next week for drunken driving, that the Marathon and its organizers are comprised.

That is not at all the case. When a Rosie Ruiz breaks the trust of an honest event with a dishonest act, no aspersion is cast on the honest event. When the frailties of hundreds of organizers, thousands of runners, and millions of spectators converge on Hopkinton Green at noon on Patriots' Day, the story is not inevitable human error, the only story is human triumph.

The second major school of critical thought with respect to the Marathon is the circa 1985 attitude of Will Rogers of "Gimme, gimme, gimme, money, money, money or I won't play in your sandbox anymore." This is the attitude of world class runners who demand to be catered to lest they not run Boston and (so they threaten) make it a second class event. They point to the fact that the New York, Montreal, and other marathons now offer major prize money.

I will grant that there is a thrill being a damn fool amateur (what one of my inlaws calls "just a lifelong jock-sniffer") running in the same event with the best runner in the world . . . in 1979 it was Will Rogers. It is sort of like suiting up with the Celtics for the seventh game of the playoffs against the Los Angeles Lakers.

But what the 1985 Will Rogers (the 1975 Will Rogers was a different sort) does not appreciate is that what has made the New York Marathon great is the amateur race, not the professional race. New York is amazing because of its 15,000 also-rans, not because of the handful of prize money winners; and Boston is number one for reasons that have nothing to do with prize money.

What will happen I believe, if Boston offers prize money, if it imitates the pack of professional races that got famous imitating Boston, will be a bidding war for prize money. If Boston offers $50 thousand to the winner, New York will of course double it, then some entrepreneur from Topeka will double that, and the pressure on Boston will be to match the highest bidder in order to stay "number one."

Before we enter such a bidding war for elite runners, I think we need to remember that Boston is the "city upon a hill." Boston didn't start the American Revolution by looking to see what Montreal was doing. Nor did it create the Boston Marathon by checking with New York first. The future of our Marathon, it seems to me, will be assured by adhering to the ideals of sport that made it great in the first place, and by, when necessary, being the "city upon a hill" that dares to differ from the pack.

That is particularly so today, when, from peewee hockey to world class running, there is so little sport left in sports. It is particularly so given that within four weeks there is going to break the greatest scandal professional baseball has known since 1919.

If I were running the Boston Marathon, here is how, consistent with the historic spirit of the event, and consistent with our leading role as the "city upon a hill" I would handle the question of prize and expense money:

First, I would pay the travel expenses of the 100 most deserving runners. Not the fastest runners, but the most deserving. I'd pay to bring a few Ethiopians here as well as a few blacks from South Africa. Then I'd pay to bring a few circa 1972 Will Rogerses—promising runners on the way up.

Then I would offer prize money in the form of charitable contributions to be given in the name of the winners to organizations selected by the winners. I'd give, say, $10,000 to a charity selected by the men's winner and $10,000 to one selected by the women's winner. And the same to charities selected by the male and female of the following: the wheelchair winners, the senior winners, the first foreign finishers (to a charity in their native land), and to the first Massachusetts natives to finish. Finally, I'd give the first male and female students to finish $10,000 scholarships.

Thus, I would be throwing out $120 thousand in "prize money," and doing it in a way that would be consistent with the ideal of sport and with the concept of Boston, the "city upon a hill." And I'd not give it a second thought if I displeased a few elite runners and sportwriters.

"... Not to worry folks ... just a little adjustment on the doohickey here ... There won't be any charge ..."

'Life With Father,' hilarity and humanity

"Life With Father," the American comedy classic written by Howard Lindsay and Russel Crouse, opens at the Nickerson Theatre on Wednesday, May 1 as the final production of the current premiere season for Norwell's professional theatre company. The production has been extended an additional week, through June 8.

Directed by Nora Hussey, the cast of "Life With Father" will feature Jim Oyster as Clarence Day, Sr., the irascible head of the Day family; Darcy Pulliam as Vinnie, his firm-minded wife; Eric Beatty as Clarence Day, Jr., the oldest Day son; Jared Waye as the teenage John Day; and Douglas Murray alternating with Bernard Zalinskas as Whitney, and Justin Morse alternating with Jeffrey Andrea as Harlan, the youngest Day sons.

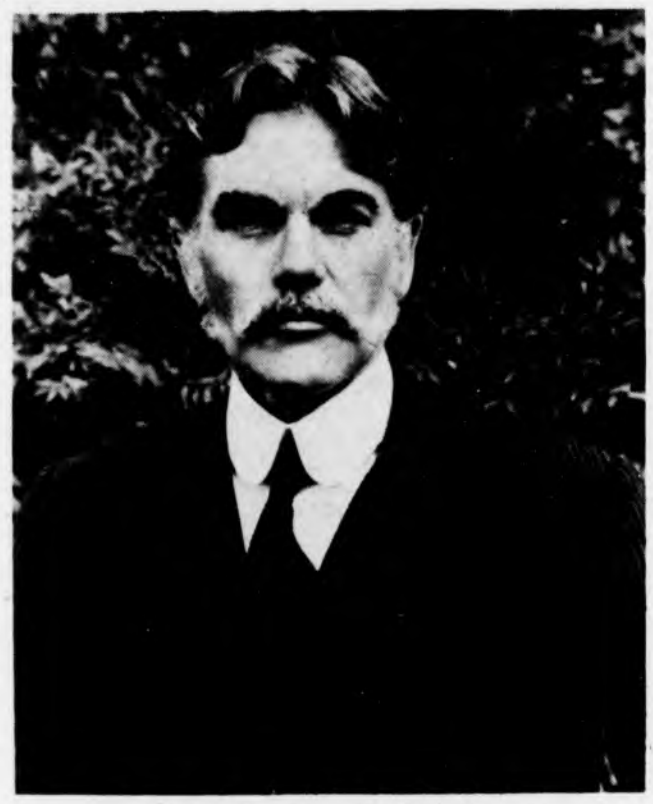
Others in the large cast include: Pat Dougan (Cora), Sally Campbell (Mary Skinner), William Miller (Reverend Lloyd), Robert Bouffier (Dr. Humphreys), Ed Fee (Dr. Somers), Patricia Pellows (Margaret), Lisa Foley (Annie), Robin Poley (Delia), Linda Bisesti (Nora) and Regina Reagan (Maggie).



Nora Hussey has been directing and teaching in New England for the past four years. As directorial assistant to Derek Wolcott at Boston University, Ms. Hussey directed the world premieres of "I Like to Watch" and "Will o' the Wisp." She is a two time recipient of the Boston Theatre Critic's Circle Award for Best Director in the small theatre category.

Jim Oyster was last featured as Walter in the Nickerson Theatre production of "The Price." Mr. Oyster has also appeared in many Broadway productions, including "Who's Who in Hell" with Peter Ustinov, "Hostile Witness' with Ray Milland, and "The Prime of Miss Jean Brodie" with Zoe Caldwell. He has also appeared prominently in most of America's top regional theatres including New England summer theatres in Dennis, Falmouth, Williamstown, and the Bershire Theatre Festival in Stockbridge.

Darcy Pulliam was most recently seen in New England last season as Toinette in "Imaginery Invalid" at Theatre-by-the-Sea in Portsmouth, N.H. and as Edith in "High Spirits" at the Berkshire Theatre Festival. Prior to these performances, Ms. Pulliam played Cora in "Life With Father" with Jose Ferrer and Kim Hunter at the Coconut Grove Playhouse. Her other regional credits include "Mahoganny" and "Identity Crisis," both at the Yale Rep.

Based on the heart-warming sketches that Clarence Day wrote about his own family, "Life With Father" tells the hilarious and utterly human story of the adventures of the red-headed Day family, headed by the man who became "Father" to thousands. This captivating American comedy has universal appeal, recalling a leisured pattern of family life drawn from a bygone era in American history. The Days are totally understandable human beings, zestful in characterization and surrounded by an aura rich in Americana. "Life With Father" has become a favorite comedy performed all over the country — with 3,224 performances in New York alone, making its Broadway's longest running play!

Lindsay and Crouse was one of American's most successful writing teams. In addition to "Life With Father," Lindsy and Crouse authored such hit plays as "State of the Union," which won the Pulitzer Prize in 1946; "The Great Sebastians," and "Tall Story," and the books for such hit musicals as "Anything Goes," "Call Me Madam," and "The Sound of Music." In 1959, Lindsay and Crouse were honored with a special 'Tony' for a play-writing collaboration that has spanned more than thirty years.

Jim Oyster is 'Father'

"Life With Father" will continue at the Nickerson Theatre through Saturday, June 8, one additional week than previously announced. Performances are Tuesday through Thursday at 8 p.m.; Friday and Saturday at 8:30 p.m.; Sunday matinee at 2 p.m. and Sunday evening at 7 p.m. Tickets for Friday and Saturday evenings are $15; for all other performances, $12.

The new Nickerson Theatre is conveniently located just off the southeast Expressway, Route 3, Exit 14, in Accord Park, Norwell.

For a detailed brochure on the new season, write or call the Nickerson Theatre, 30 Accord Park Drive, Accord (Norwell) MA 02018, Tel. 871-2400.

A Free Seminar:

Retirement Financial Planning.

This special seminar is not just another talk on IRA's and Keogh's – although both can make significant contributions to your nest egg. It's a step by step guide, complete with worksheets, to help you determine your current and future direction. An opportunity for you to create your own economic roadmap toward a more secure retirement.

You'll get a clearer picture of your resources – where savings, insurance, social security and investments fit into your plan. You'll learn about the effects of inflation and current legislation. And about one of the wisest retirement products available today: annuities.

You'll understand exactly why they're so attractive and how they work to help you meet your needs. You'll see why their tax advantages, guarantees, interesting payout options, and the potential for competitive tax-deferred growth make such financial sense today.

There will be ample time for questions and answers. This vital seminar is free, but reservations are essential. To make yours, call or mail the coupon today.

You have six seminars to choose from:

A TWO-DAY TREASURE HUNT

From the bookshelf . . . keys to success

By Peggy Beals

"What man really fears is not so much extinction, but extinction with insignificance." Ernest Becker

Iacocca, by Lee Iacocca: One of the advantages of having an unusual name, nobody is likely to ask "Iacocca who?" Lee Iacocca has stormed public consciousness since asking for government help to salvage Chrysler, and bringing it off. This latest product of his immense energy has been criticized as "preaching" and we all know how popular that is, but continues to be a best seller and to be read by an interesting variety of people.

There is plenty of preaching here because the man has strong beliefs and wants to reinforce them. He believes in hard work, having learned from the example of his parents. He espouses a close family life. He keeps his hands clean, figuratively speaking. Most any one of these makes him an exception in these post Watergate times, when one big name after another hits the headlines for some piece of sleaze.

I found it an interesting book to read, admitting to skipping over each detail in Iacocca's battles with the hierarchy at Ford. He's out front with his feelings and freely admits when he thinks he made a dumb mistake. It's worth reading if only to meet a big person who made it in American business by being decent.

Which called to mind other books on the business/decency theme. Another tremendous best seller, made into televison shows, is In Search of Excellence by Peters and Waterman, from which the quotation at the head of the column was taken. They set out to look at successful businesses and find out what made them successful. They were pleased to find basic principles operating in quite diverse businesses. Simplicity. Persistence. Quality. "They fawned on their customers. They listened to their employees and treated them like adults." Quick action was another common denominator. Successful companies didn't waste months making studies, analyzing, recommendations. They acted. There are a lot of charts and heavy sections here, but like Iacocca's tiffs with Ford, you can grasp the essence without absorbing each note.

Two other books have helped many people improve their performance in business and in other relationships. Sneering at both is popular; they're the stuff of derision and jokes which haven't hurt their popularity at all. How To Win Friends and Influence People by Dale Carnegie is still the textbook at courses designated to teach the simple principles of getting along with others. The preponderance of court cases, and the rising number of divorces indicates perhaps the information is still as needed as it was in MCMXXXVII. As of Oct. 1, 1937, a total of 608,222 copies had been printed, in 26 editions, not a risk a publisher takes for a loser. The material in it is simple: hints on how to act towards others, and it is an old maxim that it is our actions that shape our character.

The other oldie is Norman Vincent Peale's The Power of Positive Thinking.

It, too is ridiculed, but ponder. What quality do attractive people have? They're positive! What quality do the people share who have a lot of personal troubles and you have the impulse to leave the room when they come in? They're negative. Positive thinkers are up-and-at-'em people and that's the kind that's good for business.

One more little sleeper that keeps getting reissued as it is rediscovered. David Dunn's Try Giving Yourself Away simply recommends reaching out, being bold enough to risk rejection and help other people as way opens.

Moving lightly along to murder, two goodies to recommend: Simon Brett, delightfully sophisticated British writer. I read Situation Tragedy and shall seek more.

The Man In The Grey Flannel Shroud by Orenstein is also very entertaining.

Cohasset Worship . . .

St. Stephen's

Money and faith - An interesting meeting course designed to help us understand how to make decisions about our money based on our Christian commitment will be taught by John Seavey and includes four sessions on Wednesday evenings. May 22, 29, June 5 and 12 starting at 7:30 p.m. and ending at 9:30 p.m.

Memorial Day observances - Monday, May 27, Memorial Day, the Rector will offer the closing prayer at the harbor, ending a parade which will have taken the participants to each cemetery in town where those who served our country will be remembered.

Sunday, May 26 - 8 a.m. Holy Eucharist 10 a.m. Holy Eucharist and Sermon.

Host family: Ed and Kay Lincoln

Lessons: Acts 2: 1-11; 1 Corinthians 12: 4-13; and John 20: 19-23.

First Parish

Canvass success - As of Monday, May 13, we had received 116 pledges and gifts totaling $49,094. This is a 55 percent increase over last year! We expect to receive an additional 70 pledges and gifts. If the same increase holds, these will total $17,414, putting our grand total at $66,508. Wow!

It's vitally important that we all continue to carry through to realize our success. So far, canvassers who have some calls to make, please complete your visits! Friends and members, if we have not yet received your pledge and you would like to make one, please call the church office.

R.E. Director needed - The United First Parish Church in Quincy is looking for a R.E. Director for their 30-40 students. This position is part time requiring about 16 hours a week. We are looking for a person with good interpersonal skills, a solid understanding of Unitarian Universalism and one who is energetic and genuinely interested in children. Interested persons should call or send resumes to Carla Keto, 338 Granite Street, Quincy, Mass. 02169.

South Shore Cluster - The next meeting of the South Shore Cluster will be held Thursday, May 23 at Channing Memorial Church, 45 Webster Street, Rockland. Call the church office for reservations. Note that this is the fourth Thursday, not the third. Social Hour is at 6:30 p.m. with dinner at 7 p.m. Cost is $4. The program will feature Carol McDade, chair of the Sanctuary Planning Committee of the Community Church in Boston.

Diabetes Workshops - will be scheduled in June on four consecutive Wednesdays if enough interest is expressed. Call 383-0771 or 383-0821.

Second Congregational

Clothing for church world service - If your home spring cleaning has produced a pile of outgrown or outdated clothing, bring it to the church this Sunday for the Church World Service drive. Clean useable clothing for either sex and all ages is stockpiled by C.W.S. to be airlifted anywhere in the world when disasters such as earthquakes strike. Thanks for your help.

Food for the pantry - Non-perishable food is always needed by the Quincy Crisis Center. Food brought to the church kitchen will be delivered promptly to people who need it.

Pancake breakfast - The Junior High Pancake Breakfast will be on Sunday, May 26 from 8 a.m. to 9:30 a.m. in Bates Hall. Tickets may be purchased this Sunday in Bates Hall during the Fellowship Hour. Also, tickets are available by calling Claudia Story, 383-6976 or may be purchased at the door on May 26. Price: adults, $3 -- children, $1. Come and bring the family and an extra friend.

Deacons - Please note the change: our next meeting will be on June 4 at 8 p.m. The location will be announced prior to the meeting.

Community center programs beginning

Gynmastic camp

The Cohasset Community Center is now taking registrations for the Summer Gymnastic Camp. Camp will be run for six weeks starting July 8. Registration may be for one week or as many as you are interested in with the cost being $40 per week, Monday through Friday from 10 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.

The daily schedule will include ten minutes of warm-ups, thirty minutes of dance and one-half hour rotations on the bar, beam, vault, and mats. All classes will be limited in size, so we urge you to reserve space as soon as possible.

Contact Ruthann Sargent or call the center at 383-0088 to register.

Tennis lessons

The Center is also offering tennis lessons in two sessions. The first session begins the week of June 3 and the second session begins the week of July 15.

Classes will run for six weeks, one hour per week at a private court. Small, individualized classes ensure a good basis for this lifetime sport.

Sign up to learn or improve your game. Cost of six one-hour lessons is $24.

Surplus cheese and butter

The Social Service League will be distributing government surplus cheese and butter the last week in May.

Recipients must demonstrate their participation in any of the following: Food stamps, AFDC, Welfare, SSI Disability, Medicaid, Head Start, Fuel Assistance, WIC, Veteran's Aid, or Unemployment; or, declaring that their family size and gross income falls within the current Fuel Assistance Program Income Range, i.e., household size for one equals income range, $7,470; for two, $10,080; for three, $12,690; for four, $15,300.

If you qualify, call the office at 383-0771 or 383-0831 in order to request the food items and arrange for pick up.

A woman's decision to 'stop the killing' in war

By Jane Lane

Fifteen years ago, Elizabeth Jane McCarthy was tired. A student nurse at Massachusetts General Hospital, she was "sick and tired" of coming home every six months for a funeral.

From her graduating class of 100 in 1966, four classmates were killed in Nam. Allen Keating had been class president, but McCarthy knew them all. She was tired of death.

Within a few weeks, this 20 year-old girl had walked into an Army recruiting station and enlisted. She hadn't even finished her nursing education, but Nam wouldn't wait.

"My parents were mad," she recalled. "They signed the papers, because I wasn't old enough to enlist without their permission. We never talked much about it. But they were mad."

"I was standing at Allen's grave over on Joy Place. That was it. I decided then I wanted to go to Vietnam. I didn't want to kill anyone, I wanted to stop the killing. I wanted to help."

The Army helped her financially, and she finished her nursing studies. And then McCarthy was signed on for an additional two years. In August, 1969, she was commissioned a Second Lieutenant and was stationed at Walter Reed Hospital in Washington, D.C.

There, she was part of the intensive care recovery room, treating Vietnam soldiers, "fresh from the war. Sometimes we saw them three days after their casualty," she said.

"For the first time, I saw some really awful things, double amputees, guys with some really bad wounds," McCarthy added.

Her thrust into the stateside of war was hectic, scary and pushed McCarthy into a world she didn't know. "I worked very hard, and I was very scared," she said. "A lot of these guys died.

"But socially, I remember we got to be friends. They weren't my patients. These guys were my friends."

McCarthy dated several of the vets whom she had treated at the hospital, amputees who remained for a year or more.

This class is in a class by itself

Every class that passes through Cohasset High School earns a reputation of sorts.

Some are noted scholars. Some are particularly athletic, others dramatic.

The about-to-be graduates of 1985 will be noted as "the class with personality."

That's the unanimous decision of administrators and teachers who have worked with and watched this class develop from a gangly group of seventh graders, to a mature and enthusiastic gathering of graduates.

Yes, they have experienced much success as scholars, dramatists, and athletes. But while there is no one standout from the crowd, school officials agree these kids are among the nicest to ever walk in the front doors of C.H.S.

Guidance Director Jack Leary explains that about 80 to 82 percent of the graduates will attend college next year. "That's pretty average " he says, noting that last year's class had a higher-than-average number of college-bound classmates.

And Principal Richard Streeter says the two National Merit semi-finalists are on a par with previous years. Most years, Cohasset will have one, two or three semi-finalists in the group.

Several seniors participated this year in the state finals of the high school drama competition. Likewise, there were a number of male and female senior class athletes on this year's championship basketball squads and other successful teams.

It wasn't so much their accomplishments, as their inherent qualities that separated this class from their predessors. Intangibles - pride, personality and spirit, will be remembered when this class becomes part of high school history.

Restraining order frees launch area

The posts and rope surrounding the boat launching area at Parker Avenue is down for now. And selectmen intend to make sure they're never hoisted again.

After talking with Parker Avenue resident William Figueiredo last week, selectmen decided Friday the best course was to issue a court order, demanding the resident not erect the barricade again.

Predicting a high concentration of boaters and traffic in that area over the holiday weekend, selectmen were eager to see the launching area free from obstructions, including Figueiredo's makeshift fencing.

Although Figueiredo agreed to take down the cement posts and ropes which blocked the launching area, selectmen decided a court order would legally bind the resident to that promise. Friday, Selectman Frank England, with knowledge of the other four board members, called Special Town Counsel Mark DeGiacomo and requested he file a complaint against Figueriedo.

A temporary restraining order was issued that same day by the Norfolk County Probate Court, which prohibits Figueiredo from installing the barricade again.

According to Atty. DeGiacomo, a hearing on a preliminary injunction is scheduled for June 3. Atty. DeGiacomo has been representing the town in matters regarding Figueriedo for several years.

At the selectmen's meeting last week, Harbormaster Harry Ritter called the matter to selectmen's attention. Although selectmen had received several complaints by residents unable to launch their boats and turn their cars in the area, Ritter said the matter required immediate remedy.

He urged selectmen to demand that Figueiredo take down the posts and ropes, saying they were impeding access onto town property. Ritter said last week that area had been surveyed in recent years and it was determined to be town-owned land. Figueiredo was trespassing on town property, he added.

Selectmen decided last week to have more police patrols in the area, to ensure that the ropes remained lowered.

Several selectmen talked throughout the week to Figueiredo, who maintained the barricade was erected to protect his land from encroachment. He defended his actions, saying the posts were installed on his property, not the town's.

Selectmen Chairman England, who talked with Figueiredo Friday, said the move for a court order was made with an eye toward the future. "He said he'd keep the ropes down Friday, but what would happen if the ropes were back up Saturday? We (selectmen) were concerned, because this is the only public boat launch in town. We wouldn't have any recourse if he put the ropes back up because the courts are closed on Saturday," England said.

England said the order to DeGiacomo to proceed with court action was done with the knowledge of all the selectmen.

Atty. DeGiacomo said he received the order on Friday after Selectman England told him, "they were particularly concerned about the Memorial

No more filling!

The town is getting tough.

After repeated and unsuccessful attempts to stop wetlands filling, the town's zoning officer and conservation commission are going to court.

This time, the town has said that several persons are filling in wetlands without prior consent. And Zoning Officer Edward Poskus, who has written letters to the alleged offenders, has gone to court seeking a criminal complaint.

The first case involves Joal Rosano of 107 Sohier Street. Poskus wrote a letter to Rosano, ordering him to cease and desist from filling wetlands on his property.

In a reply written May 9, Rosano claimed he was not filling the area, but was merely constructing a new lawn on the easterly side of his property.

Rosano reiterated this week he has never filled the wetlands area, and noted he was optimistic he could avoid litigation against the town.

The conservation commission voted last week to have town counsel take action against Rosano. According to Chairman Merle Brown, the wetlands violation came to their attention through Zoning Officer Poskus. Members of the commission then toured the area and determined that the wetlands at 107 Sohier Street had been filled without consent.

Golden asked to help

Water Commission Chairman Peter Pratt has requested state Senator William Golden's assistance in ensuring the clean-up of all toxic substances within Wompatuck State Park.

In a letter to the Senator May 21, Pratt noted, "As you know, many hundreds of acres of the park are directly linked hydrologically to the Aaron River Reservoir, the primary drinking water supply source for the Town of Cohasset. Prudently protected, the reservoir may, during adverse weather conditions, provide water for many more citizens in the South Shore area."

Pratt acknowledged that some stores of toxic materials had been removed since they were discovered many months ago. But many remain, he added, noting that some bunkers still contain "abandoned and potentially harmful items such as electrical transformers, unused motor vehicle parts and other materials."

The commission chairman stated that Cohasset officials still have not received a full inventory of what is stored in the park bunkers, what plan has been devised for removal of all improperly stored materials, and an assessment of the degree to which areas around the bunkers may have been contaminated.

Court order

The town was ordered in September, 1984 by a superior court judge to "strictly comply" with the provisions of the state open meeting law.

In a decision made by Judge Walter Steele at that time, the following order was issued: "The Board of Selectmen of the Town of Cohasset is ordered to strictly comply with the provisions of G.L., c.39, s23B in all future meetings."

This decision was rendered after several members of the Cohasset firefighters union complained that selectmen discussed a fellow member's job status in closed session, without prior notification to the firefighter.

The session at that time concerned firefighter John Boswell, who was suspended by Chief Martin Dooley for violation of sick leave compensation. In an executive session with the chief, selectmen at that time discussed the suspension, without Boswell's attendance or knowledge.

When the union brought the suspension to court, they also sought a separate complaint against selectmen for violation of the state Open Meeting Law. Although Judge Steele rejected the union's request to overturn the suspension, he formally reprimanded the board for violating the open meeting law.

Town Counsel Richard Henderson said in light of this previous reprimand, the current review of another alleged violation may be affected. He said the district attorney, who has been requested to review the May 4 and 6 minutes of the selectmen's executive sessions, may acknowledge the presence of that prior reprimand made September 14. An explanation could be put forward, Henderson said, that the most recent alleged violation involved a different board of selectmen.

Henderson also noted that he planned to meet with town boards, committees and employees to discuss the responsibilities and duties of the open meeting law.

Harborview access

A fire department captain informed the Housing Authority last week that equipment has been hampered in its response to emergency incidents at the Harborview Housing for the elderly.

Capt. Mark Trask wrote to the authority members, explaining that "access by emergency vehicles have been restricted and on one occasion blocked from entering the driveway by vehicles parked in the driveway."

According to the captain, the access is hampered by limited road width, increased use of vehicles by residents, and limited parking facilities.

The fire department requested that the authority take immediate steps to ensure the safety of the residents by: prohibiting parking in the driveway in favor of the lower parking area adjacent to the community building and the area to the rear of Court 4; that additional parking spaces be developed and identified; and that the driveway be widened five feet for its entire length.

Selectmen meeting briefs

New town meeting signs

Residents will now have shining reminders to go to the Special Town Meeting.

Board of Selectmen Chairman Frank England announced Tuesday night that the high school shop will provide six huge white signs with printing that reads, "Cohasset Town Meeting, High School, June 17, 1985."

England said that half of the signs will have gold reflective lettering, and the other half will have large black raised lettering.

All the signs will be placed in conspicuous spots about town on the Friday before the meeting, he said.

Beechwood signs

Speeders on Beechwood Street are endangering the lives of children, according to a resident's letter addressed by selectmen Tuesday night.

Alice McWilliam, 110 Beechwood St., wrote the selectmen May 9 to request "Children at Play" signs and reduced speed limit signs on the section of her street that is opposite Norman Todd Road.

McWilliam writes that Beechwood and Norman Todd are part of a small neighborhood where many young children ride bikes. These bikers are being endangered by motorists who use Beechwood Street as a "shortcut."

She explains, "Drivers that want to get ahead of another vehicle on Norman Todd Road will speed down this section of Beechwood Street to beat it. Thus, this street turns into a speedway. There is also a blind curve near 110 Beechwood St. which makes it extra dangerous."

She says that her neighbors share her desire for the signs to be posted at both ends of the street before summer.

The selectmen were informed that Cohasset Police Department Safety Officer Clifton Jones is in favor of reduced speed signs, but hasn't specified what that speed should be yet.

The selectmen said they would rely on the police and highway departments' joint solution to the speeding problem. The issue has been taken under advisement.

Court order blocks fencing

Day holiday," he said. "The Board of Selectmen were concerned that the citizens of the town would have a problem launching their boats at the site throughout the weekend."

Atty. DeGiacomo continued, "Unfortunately, a suit against Mr. Figueiredo had to be filed to protect the town."

The attorney was scheduled to meet with selectmen Tuesday night in executive session to discuss pending litigation.

Figueiredo would not comment on the weekend events.

School officials will remember this personable class

"This class was probably one of the nicest groups of kids I have ever worked with," Leary stated last week. "They were extremely outgoing, friendly, and they cared about each other. They are sensitive kids who wanted to help others."

He added, "they were the most personable kids I have had the occasion to work with in a long time. They're a fine group of kids."

Health Education Director Michael Gill enthusiastically agrees. "There are a lot of really nice, personable individuals in this class.

"From what I saw, this was not a clique-y type of class," he adds. "They seemed to accept each other as they were. Other classes divided into separate cliques. This class wasn't like that. Everyone was accepted. I really enjoyed this class. They were a fun class."

An "entertaining" bunch of kids is how he describes this latest class to exit CHS. Their instructor since eighth grade, Gill says he will also remember their prowess and skills as athletes.

"Especially the girls," he notes. "There were some really superior athletes. They were on the basketball and softball teams. They played together and they hung around together. They were a special bunch, outstanding athletes who I really enjoyed."

In regard to their concerns and problems, Gill said the subject of drinking and driving will long be remembered as THE topic of the class of 1985.

"I've seen a lot of support in favor of responsibility in dealing with issues of driving and drinking," he says. "I'm not saying this class is dry. But they have shown a lot of responsibility by working on drinking and driving projects this year. We've done a lot of talking, and I think they'll be responsible for their actions in the future."

He describes the future graduates as earnest, well-meaning, and "happy-go-lucky."

"But they're serious when they have to be. They're a bunch of individuals who enjoy life, but know there are a lot of responsibilities facing them," he adds.

Principal Streeter is actually reserving most of his comments for Class Night, June 6. That is traditionally a time for wit, a bit of sarcasm, and a lot of memories for class members and staff.

"Sometimes the only comparison between classes at the high school, is that they were all born at a certain time," he says.

On Class Night, Streeter traditionally "rips apart the yearbook" and treats the students to some untypical ribbing. "They have their chance to poke fun at the administration, and this is my chance to get back. It's all done in fun," he adds.

Future graduates beware. Principal Streeter has a knack of uncovering those "little things" about a class that have remained hidden from the administration in previous years.

"The class at this point is enthusiastic and feeling like the best class to ever walk out of this school," Streeter states. "On June 6, I will do my best to deflate that feeling."

Senior Center Day is June 5

The programs and activities planned for Senior Center Day, Wednesday, June 5, at the Second Congregational Church, are being offered through the generosity of many Cohasset and South Shore professionals, crafts people and others with expertise in a field of interest. Those who attend may select two programs out of a total of 12.

In addition, they may have their blood pressure checked by Cohasset's Public Health Nurse Mary Anne Hansen, or have their eyes tested for glaucoma by Dr. Janet Codley.

The Senior Center Advisory Committee invites not only senior citizens to attend this special event, but also anyone in the community with an interest in the development of a senior center for Cohasset.

Following is a list of the programs and activities:

Group A Programs, 9:30 to 10:30

STENCILING: Nancy Clapp, well-known South Shore stencil artist, will present an informative program on stenciling from its use in Colonial times (she wears traditional Colonial garb) to the present. She will demonstrate cutting a stencil, mixing colors and the various techniques of applying the paints on the object to be stenciled.

ARMCHAIR TRIP TÓ ISRAEL: Sit back and enjoy this travelogue with Rev. John Benbow who took a fascinating journey through Israel during the summer of 1984. He has compiled a scrapbook of prints and original sketches which he will share with you in his informative, relaxed manner.

HOUSING OVERVIEW I: SHARED HOUSING: Henry Stowers, Housing Specialist with South Shore Elder Services, will present a new concept in living styles which combines privacy and companionship. He will show slides of several successful congregate, or shared housing arrangements around the state where independent seniors share dwelling space and household expenses and responsibilities.

MAKING BREAD: Lot Bates will share his techniques for making bread, one of his favorite pasttimes. He will demonstrate the kneading process, show samples of bread rising, and slice up samples of fresh-baked varieties. He might even be persuaded to share some of his recipes!

IKEBANA: JAPANESE FLOWER ARRANGING: Ikebana is the ancient floral art of Japan. Only a few materials such as branches, leaves, blossoms or flowers are used to create stunning arrangements which are expressive in their simplicity. Fran O'Toole learned this unique art during the time she lived in Japan. She will create several arrangements and if you've seen her work, you'll know that it is very beautiful to watch.

IT'S A MINIATURE WORLD: Ann Hublitz will present slides covering handmade miniature period rooms from the late 16th to the early 20th century, including Queen Mary's dollhouse located at Windsor Castle, England, and Madurodam, a historically correct reproduction of an average Dutch city with everything on a scale of 1:25. In addition, a special group of dollhouses borrowed for the ocassion from several South Shore collectors of miniatures will be on display.

COFFEE BREAK - 10:30 TO 11

Fresh-baked goodies from volunteer bakers will be served with coffee and iced tea between Group A and Group B programs. If it's a sunny day the refreshments will be served outside the front of the Congregational Church.

Group B Programs, 11:30 to 12:00

BOOK REVIEWS: Cohasset Town Librarian Richard Hayes will review a mixed selection of several recent, outstanding books. Reading enthusiasts who choose this program are encouraged to come prepared to share one or two of their recently read or all-time favorite books. Mr. Hayes will also give an update on library services for seniors, most notably, large-print books and talking tapes for those with visual impairments.

EXERCISE FOR HEALTH: Joanne Sheppard is an exercise specialist who teaches at the Cohasset Community Center. This program will demonstrate the benefits of appropriate movement exercises — the exhilaration of feeling better by increasing circulation and by improving the range of joint function. Joanne is known for her imaginative use of music with exercise and she will have a special selection for Senior Center Day.Comfortable shoes with dresses or slacks will be fine for this program.

HOUSING OVERVIEW II: HOME EQUITY CONVERSIONS: State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray (or in the event the Legislature is in session that morning, her very able Legislative Aide Nancy O'Toole) will present a comprehensive update on the several equity conversion plans that provide homeowners on fixed budgets with an income flow based on the value of their homes. These include reverse mortgage/equity loans, sale/leaseback arrangements and deferred payment loans.

ORIENTAL RUG MAKING: Virginia Harvey teaches Oriental rug making in the Hingham High School Adult Education Program and at the Hersey House Senior Center. Her presentation includes an overview of the craft, its origins, the authenticity of

by Dr. Kevin M. Neill, Chiropractic Physician

ADJUSTMENTS VS MANIPULATION

There is a clear distinction between chiropractic "adjustments" and "manipulation." An adjustment is the application of a rapid, sudden precise force (known as a "dynamic thrust") to a specific point of the vertebra. It has primary intention of allowing the body to remove nerve interference. It is the body's reaction to the applied force which, as a secondary effect, realigns structure. Manipulation, on the other hand, is often a non-specific, generalized procedure that resets bones, increases range of movement and realigns joint structure. Its intent is to stimulate or inhibit body functions. For example, a practitioner who massages, then twists the neck and head to bring about a greater range of movement, would be performing a manipulation.

The "thrust of the matter" is that different problems require different approaches to correct the situation. The science of chiropractic offers numerous options that are natural, knifeless and drugless in the attempt to achieve success. If you have been experiencing difficulty, we suggest you call the COHASSET CHIROPRACTIC OFFICE, 760 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy., Suite 12. Let us show you how a chiropractic approach can provide the answers you seek. Tel. 383-1211, 1214. Daily by appt. Unusual and difficult cases invited.

Selectmen set responsibilities for search group

By Elisabeth Gorfinkle

Tuesday night the Board of Selectmen reserved the right to reject all proposed applicants found by the new Fire Chief Search Committee.

The board voted to charge the committee with finding five applicants, two more than the past search committee produced. And unlike the past, the selectmen can refuse to pick from the group. The committee can be sent back to the drawing board as many times as the selectmen see fit.

Board of Selectmen Chairman Frank England had suggested that the board be able to add proposed applicants to the committee's list. His idea was strongly opposed by selectmen Mary Jane McArthur and Rocco Laugelle, who argued that such a measure would negate the committee's purpose of finding a replacement for Cohasset Fire Department Chief Martin Dooley.

McArthur added that the committee should be left to research for a competitive salary range by making comparisons with nearby towns. The selectmen are basically amending the charge used by the last committee and are making only minor changes. England said the document will be approved at next week's meeting. Then, June 10, the committee will come before the board to discuss its duties outlined in the charge.

Selectman Diane Sullivan had asked her board to discuss the charge last night, even though it wasn't on the agenda. Her reasoning was that the committee should receive its responsibilities as soon as possible, in case Dooley finds a new position well before his contract ends Dec. 31.

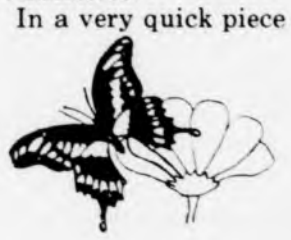
In other business, the selectmen voted to forego considering seniority when appointing captains as acting fire chiefs, when the real chief is out of town. Instead, the board will select them on a rotating basis.

A letter will be sent to Chief Dooley explaining the change.

The selectmen must await an okay from a labor counsel, before applying the same rule to the police department.

The selectmen accepted the resignation of Town Government Structure Committee member Charles Aronovici.

They then decided to send a memo to each town committee chairman asking him to notify the executive secretary, even in emergencies, before contacting Town Counsel. According to Sullivan, it has informally been brought to her attention that a number of boards are neglecting this policy. Sullivan added that the town's photo copier is also being used for unofficial business. A sign will be posted near the machine that requests only copies pertaining to town affairs be made by members of committees.



In a very quick piece of business, the selectmen voted to approve the inclusion of an article for a $213,000 high school senior scholarship fund in the June 17 Special Town Meeting warrant. Article 35 is the Hardy Trust Agreement founded by Margaret Mary Hardy of Cohasset.

Three bids for thousands of dollars worth of highway department equipment were awarded by the selectmen Tuesday night.

All awards made were based on recommendations of Highway Department Surveyor Harold Litchfield, who was praised highly for his fine selections.

A bid for a hydraulic spreader was awarded to Dyar Sales & Machinery Co., North Reading, for $6,871. Rodman Truck Center, Inc. in Foxboro and Walpole will receive $36,638 for a truck chassis and dump body. And Bartlett Consolidated Inc., Plymouth, will be awarded $8,420 for steel beam guard rail.

the patterns, and a demonstration of the technique used to create these handsome and one-of-a-kind rugs. Samples of her completed work will be on display.

THEOREM PAINTING: Have you always wondered how the beautiful theorem paintings you have seen were made? Then join this group where Shirley Baer will demonstrate the steps involved in painting on velvet. Theorem is an art dating back to the 1800s and still practiced today. Shirley will have various samples of her theorems on display.

CUT AND PIERCED LAMPSHADES: These intricate shades are a real work of art and create a different look with a lamp on as well as off. Betty Christofori will discuss this craft, giving a detailed demonstration of the step-by-step process of making one. Samples of her lovely shades will be on display.

A spirited Madame Marguerite Dirivachter is joined in a celebration of her 100th birthday at Cohasset Knoll Nursing Home. Joining the festivities on Tuesday were: (L to R) Marjorie G. Giffen, longtime friend; Freida Jetter, and Carl Dreyfus who has known Madame since he was two.

LUNCHEON - 12:15 to 1:30

A delicious hot meal will be served at the First Parish House with a menu of veal Strogonoff, rice Florentine, herbed carrots, rye bread, milk, iced tea and vanilla pudding with coconut. The lunch will be supplied by South Shore Elder Services through their caterer, Daka. This is the same food service that is used by Meals-On-Wheels and several luncheon sites at other area senior centers. A $1 donation is requested.

ENTERTAINMENT: Members of the Deer Hill School Band and Chorus, under the direction of Ruth Dalbeck and Jack MacInnis, will perform during lunch. Mrs. Dalbeck will direct a flute duet, a saxaphone trio and an ensemble of flutes and clarinets. Mr. MacInnis will conduct the members of the school's Concert Choir in several special selections.

CHINESE AUCTION - 1:30 to 3

Those who wish may bring a small, inexpensive, wrapped "White Elephant" gift and participate in a lively, fun auction after lunch. Virginia Riley will be the audtioneer.

The Committee asks that registration forms, which were included in the May issue of "Vista," be mailed to the Social Service League (16 Highland Avenue) this week.

Registrations will also be taken by phone at the League Office, 383-0771 or 383-0821, or on Senior Center Day between 9 and 9:15 a.m. Pre-registering would be most helpful.

La Leche League meets June 11

The Scituate area La Leche League will meet Tuesday, June 11, at 7:30 p.m. at the home of Cathy Coyle, 245 First Parish Road.

The topics for discussion will include The Art of Breastfeeding and Overcoming Difficulties and Nutrition and Weaning.

Pregnant women and new mothers and their nursing babies are welcome to attend the informal discussion where experienced nursing mothers offer information and support and share their on-hand nursing knowledge.

For more information or help with any breastfeeding problems call in Scituate, 545-0815; in Norwell, 659-1345, or in Marshfield, 837-9255.

The Law and You

by Richard Price, Attorney-at-Law

DO NOT DISCARD

If there is one message that every lawyer would want to deliver to his client in a product liability case it would be to not discard the evidence. When an accident occurs, it is natural to wish to be rid of the offending product. The success or failure of a lawsuit, however, will often depend on having the offending product available for examination by experts who can determine what went wrong. With older products, retention of evidence is crucial. The manufacturer may argue that the product was damaged through age and the company should not be held responsible for injury. The most telling rebuttal to this argument is evidence which demonstrates that the defect existed at the time of manufacture.

One should think of "do-it-yourself" in the legal area as often as you might consider it in the area of surgery. It may, in fact, be true as facetious as it sounds that the results of both these methods could be equally devastating. The law is a complex matter and one that should be entrusted to professional, experienced and competent advisors. THE LAW OFFICES OF RICHARD PRICE, 760 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy., Rt. 3A, Cohasset, 383-9882 is available to serve your legal needs with the expertise you deserve. THE GRAND TOUR

The English came up with the concept of the grand tour, more than 400 years ago. The original grand tourists were, in the main, members of the British aristocracy. They were usually the eldest sons of wealthy families who were sent abroad to complete their education. Today's grand tour travel of Europe is of infinitely greater variety and range. The rule is that one cannot see or do it all on a single tour. Selectivity becomes the name of this international game. It is better to experience a few places in depth than to rush all over the map. It was also part of the formula of the original grand tour to stay in one country long enough and get involved it its culture before moving on the next.

At COLPITTS TRAVEL CENTER, we are very knowledgeable about tours to all parts of the world. Whether for business or pleasure, we can handle all the arrangements. ☐An exciting birthday party was held recently. . .anyone know who turned 90 and had a huge party held in his honor? Mr. William Forest, father of Evelyn Pearson, that's who! Held at Evelyn's house, the gala was put together by her brother William Forest of Norwell and her sister Marilyn Dwyer of Pembroke. There were grandchildren that came from everywhere, and great grandchildren (including one that is 22 years-old), too. Mary Jeanette Murray was there to present a proclamation, and President Reagan sent a birthday wish as well. Even Mr. Forest's younger brother was there. He is 77. Happy birthday to Mr. Forest from all of us.

☐Congratulations to Robert V. Cullinane, II, Anthony S. Dellorfano, Theodore M. Jones, and Paul J. O'Leary who all graduated recently from Xaverian Brothers High School. There were 227 graduates in the class.

☐Cohasset Central Market wants to be sure that Mrs. Price's kindergarten class gets the thanks that is due them! The display that was all about the firehouse was theirs, and surely was fine art work!

☐Ann Leonard really did it this time! She won the Outstanding Athlete Award at the third annual Senior Olympics. She is a 71 year-young gal, mother of three, grandmother of four . . .she really spread her victories over track and field events by winning a first in the mile run; a second in the softball throw, a first in the javelin throw, a second in the mile walk, and a first in the running long jump. On top of all that to win the Outstanding Athlete Award, whew! Congratulations to our Senior Olympic champ.

☐Karen A. Lipsett, a senior at Skidmore College in New York, received the American Institute of Chemists Award from the Niagara Chapter to the most outstanding senior in chemistry.

☐Congratulations to Jonathan Tufts Woods, who recently graduated from Ohio Wesleyan University, located in Ohio.

☐This Saturday is the last day the boat owners have to pay the mooring fees, and a decal will be displayed to show that the bill has been paid. Could mean removal if the fee isn't paid, so don't forget!

☐Dave Barcomb has led the Williston Academy baseball team in batting this spring, with an average of nearly .500. He has been among the prep school leaders in batting all season.

Dave, who has had a fine year at Williston starting in football, basketball and baseball and achieving academic honors, will enter Trinity College in Hartford, CN, in the fall.

☐MaryJo Mahoney of Cohasset, a second-year student in the Associate degree program in Animal Medical Technology at the University of Maine at Orono, is finishing a seven-week internship at DiaMed, Incorporated, a research laboratory in Windham, Maine. ior to her work at DiaMed, she worked for seven weeks in a veterinary clinic in the area.

MaryJo will graduate from the University in May and plans to return in the fall to complete the Bachelor degree program in Animal and Veterinary Sciences.

Among the local graduates are: Gary Carlson, class vice president; Sarah L. Luadli; and Miss Diane Thayer.

☐ Brett W. Wetzell, son of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Wetzell of 56 Jerusalem Road, Cohasset, was graduated Saturday at the 152nd Commencement Exercises of Suffield Academy, Suffield, CT.

As an undergraduate Wetzell participated in the Admissions Tour Guide Program and was active in Varsity Football, Varsity Hockey and Varsity Basketball. He will attend Ithaca College in the fall.

☐ Massachusetts Martime Academy Cadet David H. Sargent of Cohasset, has been appointed to the Cadet Officer Position of Company Discipline Officer for the upcoming academic year.

The appointment took place at the recently held Change of Command Ceremony on the Academy Parade field. Cadets appointed at this time will hold their rank through their upcoming senior year, and relinquish it prior to their graduation in the Spring of 1986. They are selected on the basis of their performance in the Regiment over the past three years. A total of 112 appointments are made from the total student body of approximately 800.

Adorned in fashions from Johnny Appleseeds are members of the Cohasset Garden Club. Sitting (L to R) are: former president Joan Shockman, Pres. Mary Larson, and former president Jo-ann Haynes.

☐Congratulations to Mrs. Wool, the teacher in the Business Department at the High School, on the arrival of their son, William Charles Wool, III. With a heavy name like that, William is sure to be a success in whatever he sets out to do. He'll certainly make Mom and Dad and sister, Mary Elizabeth, happy and keep them busy.

☐The PSO held a "Teacher Appreciation Day" last week, and appreciate it they did! All of the teachers thought that the time and effort taken in their behalf was a nice thought and they were a pleased group, indeed.

☐It was really nice of the Richard Brown family to donate a Texas Instruments computer and $100 as a farewell gift to Cohasset High school. The Browns will be moving to San Francisco in July.

☐Congratulations to Mike DeSantis, William Langmaid, Greg Igo, Karin Isele, Tracy Fitzpatrick and Amy Duncombe, all of whom received Rotary Club scholarships. The total amount given in scholarships by the Rotary amounted to $12,000.

☐To all of the Ride-A-Bike participants a remainder — After you have collected all of your pledges, return them to your school.

☐Congratulations to Elizabeth Hurley who won first place in the three dimensional art category in the 1985 Awards for Art in the Schools Contest that took place recently.

☐Happy Birthday, Ann.

☐Beach stickers are going to be ready next week, June 3, to be exact. They will be at the Town Hall again this year — weekdays and Saturday, until noon. Summer has arrived when we put the new sticker on!

☐That's the news from here. Keep it coming!

First Parish Sea Fair June 8

The First Parish Unitarian Church in Scituate will hold its annual Sea Fair Saturday, June 8, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Co-chairpeople for the day are Marla Minier of Scituate and Anne Thome of Marshfield.

Highlights will be games, face-painting, and pony rides in the morning for your children, lunch in the Galley and myriads of hand-mades, home-bakeds, and second-hands at bargain prices.

A new table at the Sea Fair will be devoted to Attic Treasures. Several "cuts" above the White Elephants, Attic Treasures will feature a semi-gilded birdcage, glassware and china, student musical instruments, and other items of considerable value.

Among the plants offered will be tomatoes, green peppers, egg-plant, myrtle, daylillies, black-eyed Susans, raspberry canes, and herbs.

Handcrafted items will include unique gift ideas for young and old made by the Church Alliance members. Mouth-watering baked goods — cookies, pies, breads, and jams — will come fresh from the oven. Chances on the food basket will be drawn at 2 p.m.

There will be plenty of hot coffee, cold drinks, hamburgers and hot dogs, and a special soup-'n-salad bar in the Galley.

First Parish Unitarian is located on First Parish Road, across from Gates School, next to the Lawson Tower.

Host an Italian exchange student

Foreign exchange may mean the international money market in some quarters, but to families who participate in a visiting student program, the term foreign exchange takes on a more personal meaning. That is the conviction of Donna Bonica, who is coordinating host family arrangements for 33 Italian students who will be in the Marshfield and Scituate area from Aug. 1 to Aug. 31.

This kind of foreign exchange means giving and receiving in very human terms; to give a foreign student the chance to learn about American life; and, through the student, to receive a fascinating glimpse of life in another country.

"Host families provide room and board for the time the students will be here. That, plus a natural sharing of family life is all that is required," according to Bonica, who represents Interstudy, the sponsoring agency. "Families can be of any age, without children, with young children, with children who are grown and away from home. Young married couples can participate, as well as retired people or single parents. What we are looking for is a willingness to share lives."

All 33 Italian students have studied English for several years and are between the ages of 15 and 21. Their classroom program will include four weekday morning sessions (9 a.m. to noon) at the North Community Church in Marshfield Hills. Transportation to and from class by host family carpool is arranged by Interstudy. Families are reimbursed for gas mileage.

One full bus tour, as well as an afternoon field trip, is planned for each week. In addition to the weekly trips and a three-day bus tour to Montreal, students can participate in many other activities available in the area.

Prior to the students' arrival, all host families will attend an evening orientation at which time Interstudy representatives will thoroughly review the entire schedule of events and insurance coverage provided. Students' rules are also reviewed.

By Interstudy regulations, students may not driv while here, nor may they drink, unless they are of age and that is part of the host family's custom. Students bring their own spending money with them and are accustomed to our climate.

The welcome and farewell parties highlight the students' stay in this country and are attended by students and all host family members.

Transportation to and from the airport upon arrival and departure is by chartered bus and conducted by Interstudy representatives.

"We need 33 families from the Marshfield/Scituate area," said Donna Bonica. "This is an excellent way for a local family to travel abroad while staying at home."

Anyone interested in becoming a host family is urged to contact Donna at 837-5563 or by writing her at 22 Liberty Rd., Marshfield, MA 02050. A mutually convenient appointment will be arranged in your home, at which time you will receive the name of your prospective family member.

A fitting tribute

From all accounts, Cohasset's Memorial Day observance was a poignant and moving tribute to our town's veterans.

Under shimmering blue skies and warm temperatures, the Kevin Barry Bagpipers were a favorite of parade participants, as well as the distinguished performers of the Deer Hill School band.

Our thanks are extended to the American Legion Post for once again providing us with a memorable observance of this most worthy day.

There was something unique about Monday's parade, a fact brought to our attention by Elizabeth Jane McCarthy, the day's guest speaker. A faithful parade marcher since 1972, Dr. McCarthy said at that time, there were maybe three Viet Nam vets in the entire ensemble. Each year, more and more men joined their ranks. At this year's event, several of the former combat soldiers proudly wore their jungle fatigues.

Dr. McCarthy said the sight of these Cohasset men brought tears to her eyes.

We were lucky enough to catch her after the parade; to talk with this sensitive, talented woman about the year she spent as a nurse in Viet Nam.

She talks easily about her experiences, sometimes painfully graphic about the sights and feelings associated with that war. She is a remarkable woman whose only intention was to help the young men wounded and dying in that foreign land. As she said, "I didn't want to kill anyone, I didn't want anyone to be killed. I just wanted to help."

As a nurse, she saw these 18 and 19 year-old youths shot up, frightened, alone and afraid to die in a war they didn't understand.

She told us, "the Army was real smart. They knew what they were doing drafting 18 year-old kids. These kids didn't know what they were doing, they simply obeyed orders. It was the 25 year-olds who stayed home and protested a war being fought by kids."

Dr. McCarthy is more than a little bitter about the Viet Nam experience, but is satisfied she did her best while she served there. She helped in the best way she could, through her medical skills.

Depressed, angry and alone, Dr. McCarthy had a difficult time surviving the first few months home. She didn't understand her reactions, not until friends and former Viet Nam comrades shared their similar experiences. She then realized they were going through the same pains - re-entry into a world hostile to what they had lived through for the past 12 months.

She came through that experience and survived. Dr. McCarthy is a warm, compassionate, caring individual who will no doubt succeed in whatever she endeavors.

The Viet Nam war left a bitter taste in the mouths of many veterans, and those who stayed behind to condemn it. But perhaps in some way it helped shape the heroes of the future, people like Dr. E. Jane McCarthy.

McNabb explains investigation

Letters

To the Editor:

I would like to take this opportunity to explain why I decided to ask the District Attorney to investigate apparent violations of the Open Meeting Law by the Board of Selectmen.

It is clear that the Selectmen discussed the following subjects in Executive Session—closed to the public and the press—on May 4 and May 6: the professional qualifications of candidates for Town Accountant and Executive Secretary, the salaries for those positions, the consolidation of those positions, and the appointment of a certain person to those positions.

The Open Meeting Law, M.G.L. Chapter 39, sections 23A, 23B does not authorize Executive Sessions to discuss any of those subjects. The Selectmen called those Executive Sessions to discuss "contract negotiations and litigation." Contract negotiations are not authorized in the law as a reason for Executive Sessions. The minutes of the May 4 meeting do not show any discussion of any pending litigation, and it is hard to see how any of those subjects could relate to any pending litigation.

When the Selectmen voted unanimously in open session on May 9 to consolidate those two positions and to offer the position(s) to a certain person, the votes were taken with no discussions. The discussion and decision on that subject had evidently been made in those previous Executive Sessions, in secret.

Apart from the question of whether these meetings were held in violation of the Open Meeting Law, which appears to be the case, we should consider why it is important for such discussions and decisions to be held in public, and why secret meetings should be discouraged.

Public business should be discussed in public. Selectmen are public officials elected by the voters, who expect their elected officials to be accountable to the electorate. Secret meetings allow elected officials to be less accountable, since the public is not thus fully informed or involved in such decision-making. The voters, the taxpayers, have a right to know what their elected officials are doing, and why.

The subject of these discussions, particularly the decision to consolidate two vital executive positions of town government, must be considered public business to be considered in public. It is wrong, as well as in apparent violation of the law, for such discussions to be held in secret.

I wrote to the District Attorney because that is the procedure under the Open Meeting Law for enforcement, and because I felt that official recognition of this situation would be the appropriate way to emphasize the seriousness of the situation and to hopefully discourage non-compliance with the law in the future.

Sincerely,
John K. McNabb, Jr.

Town gets tough on wetland filling

May 7, Poskus wrote to Rosano requiring that all filling be stopped, and that any fill dumped into the area be removed within three days.

Brown stated that because the order was not complied with, the commission decided last week to have town counsel proceed with legal action. "We decided that town counsel should proceed with court action against Mr. Rosano, so that the fill will be removed from the wetlands," Brown said.

In the meantime, Poskus filed for the issuance of a criminal complaint against Rosano in Quincy District Court. A hearing on the request was scheduled for June 26.

According to Town Counsel Richard Henderson, a copy of the town's zoning bylaws are filed with the court. Poskus then filled out a complaint form against the Sohier Street resident. An informal hearing before the court clerk will determine whether a formal complaint will be issued against Rosano, Henderson explained.

But the town is not pointing its finger at Rosano alone.

Poskus recently mailed several certified letters to residents accused of filling their wetlands property. May 9, Poskus informed Frank Williams of Chief Justice Cushing Highway that "there has been a filling operation going on your property at 3A."

Noting the property owner had no previous permission from the conservation commission or the zoning board of appeals, Poskus demanded that the filling be ceased. He also required that all fill be removed from the Route 3A property within three days of the notice.

May 7, Poskus wrote to Theodore Ingemanson Jr., stating that he had illegally filled wetlands property at 441 King Street. "It is my understanding," Poskus wrote, "that you are filing a Notice of Intent with the Conservation Commission, along with making an application for a Special Permit with the Zoning Board of Appeals."

Prior to any town action, Poskus demanded that Ingemanson remove all fill deposited on the property within three days.

The latest letter was dated May 21 to Mrs. Theresa Williams of 137 North Main Street. Poskus noted, "It has been observed this date that there has been a filling operation going on at your property at 3A. I find no record of permission from the Conservation Commission or a Special Permit by the Board of Appeals to carry on this operation."

The zoning officer then notified Mrs. Williams that the operation be stopped immediately, and all fill be removed within one week.

Poskus serves as the town's building inspector and zoning officer for town agencies, such as the conservation commission, concerned with the zoning bylaw.

A difficult decision

After three or four months, she realized that her experience and skills were helping a lot of veterans, without the constant reminder of a war. She decided to back off from her impetuous decision to go to Nam.

As hard as she tried, she could not get out of her original commitment, and her orders were finalized. She would be flying from D.C. to Nam in October, 1970. Her flight would take her to California, then straight to Hawaii, and a connecting trip landed her in Saigon.

After three days of processing with the chief nurse in Vietnam, McCarthy received her assignment. Another flight brought her to DaNang, where she would be part of the emergency room staff at the 95th Evacuation Hospital. At 22 years-old, she would be spending one year, holding young men while they die, treating others for wounds from which they would never fully recover.

"How does a 22 year-old girl from Cohasset, tell a 19 year-old grunt that he doesn't have a foot or a leg anymore? I can't tell you how many times I just had to hold onto him, until he died. What was I doing there? What were these kids doing there? I have no idea," she wondered.

The day after she landed, McCarthy was at work in the hospital, treating soldiers flown directly from the battlefield. A chopper pad at the hospital was in constant use.

"My responsibility there was to evaluate each patient, check their injuries, start an I.V. and redo any bandages. All amputees had bandages that had to be redone immediately. I began my own system of triage, where I would start with the head, and work my way down. I'd talk to the patient, then check the arms for injuries, blood pressure and I.V.'s. Usually the lower injuries on the body were the worse, the grossest. By the time I had checked everything else, I was prepared for the worse part," McCarthy said.

She, along with two other nurses there, worked a six-day shift, from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. One day, Sunday, was her day off. Then it was back to duty, on the 7 p.m. to 7 a.m.

She remembered, "I was always tired. I needed my sleep and I never got enough."

Although she was not involved in combat, the hospital grounds were hit once, and her bunker was sprayed with smallarm fire from an unidentified source.

Despite the death, the wounds, the drugs ("heroin was easier to get than beer"), McCarthy said there was one unspoken rule of veterans throughout Nam. You never talked about the war.

"That is the weirdest thing about Vietnam," she said. "I never realized it until a couple of years ago, but we never, never, talked about what was happening. I remember sitting one night at a picnic table with two of the nurses and we were sharing a bottle of bourbon and talking about everything in the world. Everything except the war."

A snappy salute from a Marine colorguard. (Bill Quigley)

Another thing she never involved herself in was the constant, widespread drug use. "I would look outside from the hospital and see a 19 year-old kid. He'd be wearing pajamas and walking up to the wire fence that surrounded the area. This one kid I remember was being treated for an infection of the arm, probably from shooting heroin. And here he was buying smack from the local dealer right outside the hospital."

She also recalled the day she finished her shift and walked outside to sit down. She rested her weary head into her folded arms. A few minutes later, she re-entered the hospital where the chief nurse told someone in a booming voice, "guess we're going to have to ship that one back home."

McCarthy was going to make her swallow that threat. And for the next year she displayed no emotion on the job.

Until two weeks before she was to leave. She walked from the hospital door onto the hot sand surrounding the building.

"The beach in the distance reminded so much of Cohasset. It was so soothing. And I cried. I did that every day at noon for two weeks. Then I would go back into work and never tell anyone about it. I never told anyone what I did until a few years ago," she said.

Looking back on her memories, McCarthy said that was a dilemma for all Vietnam veterans. They returned from a world too unspeakable. From a desparate place no one else could understand.

When she returned to the states, McCarthy enrolled in Indiana University, where she was dating an amputee she had met while at Walter Reed. She was depressed, lonely and frightened.

"I remember one English Comp. class where we had to write a few paragraphs. All I could write were things of Vietnam. I was the class weirdo. When the teacher asked me to read my papers aloud, I couldn't without crying. I felt so alone, and I couldn't talk with anyone," she remembered.

During the next few months, McCarthy had constant nightmares, remained depressed and stopped eating. She lost 25 pounds, and decided to seek help.

A parish priest talked with her twice a week. But when a group of friends she served with in Nam came by the university on their way to Colorado, McCarthy then realized she needed to be with people who would understand.

She left Indiana for Denver, where she enrolled in the university there. For the first time, this small circle of friends talked about their days spent in the war. It was their mutual support and friendship that steadied McCarthy and allowed her to pass from a world of hostility, to one of acceptance.

"We would get together and talk about the war. Over and over and over. We'd wonder why we kept talking about it. It was so painful. But ten years later, we figured that was our system of support and it was probably a very healthy thing to have," she said.

McCarthy moved back to Washington, D.C. in 1974 where she attended George Washington University. She obtained a degree in anesthesiology and for six years worked at Walter Reed as a nurse anesthesiologist.

Last Saturday, she graduated from the Uniform Services University in Bethesda, Md. where she obtained a doctorate degree in physiology. She is currently working at the university, doing clinical research in the department of anesthesiology.

She expects to be married "in a year or so," and has achieved the rank of Major in the Army Reserves where she is Chief of Anesthiology in the Baltimore unit.

Every year, she returns to Cohasset and the Memorial Day parade. Since 1972, at her parents' urging, McCarthy has marched. "It was so different then," she recalled. "At that time, the only Viet Nam vets to march were myself and three other guys. We felt so out of it. Today, there were so many more. Three of the guys were in their boonies (fatigue uniforms). Every time I looked at them, I felt tears coming. It felt so good."

Aside from the Cohasset observance, McCarthy likes to visit the Viet Nam Memorial in Washington, D.C. Each time she views it, she sees new meaning.

"Now when I look at it, I see both ends start at the lowest point. The names of the first dead, and the last dead are at either end. Then the wall gets wider as the ground gets lower. The most names are at the middle point, when we were in the midst of the war. We didn't know how to get out of it, but more and more men were dying. We didn't know which way to go, but men continued to die," she noted.

The second memorial, dedicated this year, depicts four combat-weary veterans. According to McCarthy, "they are so realistic. You can see the sweat, feel the heat of the country. You see the veins in their arms. And the look on their faces. It's eery. They're looking right at the names on the memorial wall.

"It's a different memorial. It was a different war."

The American flag is hoisted atop the Vietnam POW flag during Monday's observance.

Ride-A-Bike information

The Cohasset Teachers Association wants to thank all the boys and girls who participated in the Ride-Bike last Sunday. Please collect the money from the people who so generously sponsored you, and bring your sponsor sheet with your returns to your teacher or Mrs. Irene Mello in the Special Needs Classroom, Osgood, or Mr. Frank Deakin, Deer Hill. Thank you!

Arbor Day

Festivities will be held Friday, May 31, at 1 p.m. All are welcome to join our children in their salute to summer.

A generous donation

Kate and Matt Brown of 42 Sohier Street in Cohasset have donated their Texas Instruments computer and four educational cartridges to the children in Mrs. Schadhauser's third grade class at the Joseph Osgood School.

In addition, their father, Mr. Richard Brown, generously contributed $100 toward the purchase of more instructional cartridges.

The Browns will be moving to San Francisco in July, and Kate and Matt wished to leave something special here to help other students learn. They also hope to be remembered as they take fond memories of their early school years at the Osgood School with them to California.

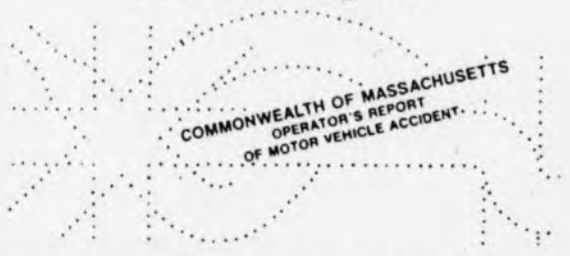
Thank you, Matt and Kate! Your gift will enrich the education of many pupils who follow behind you. Your teachers, principal and friends wish you the very best on your new venture.

Snapper Sneaker Day

School spirit soared along with 350 helium balloons last Friday as students began celebration of the annual Snapper Sneaker Day at Osgood School.

Following opening remarks by Principal John Creamer, the Star Spangled Banner was sung by John Pereira. In a special tribute to retiring Helen Pratt and June Simeone the entire third grade led by Marnie DeMichele, Johanna Horn, Carry Peters and Lindsey Tibbetts thanked the teachers for all the good memories. Having waited quietly during the speeches, the students were ready when the Special Needs class of the South Shore Collaborative signaled it was time to let the balloons which they had provided soar "with their imagination." What a colorful sight, as they drifted up towards Deer Hill!

Then it was time for the Job Trail, as class by class Michael Weydt, physical education teacher had the children line up at the start to be touched off by Mrs. Pratt, to start their quarter-mile laps. The third grades staged a tug o' war and Mrs. Manna's class were the victors. The PSO dispensed gallons and gallons of orange juice to the thirsty runners and joggers while friends and families cheered the children. All in all, a spectacular Snapper Sneakers Day!



Performance for Seniors

Members of the Deer Hill School Band and Chorus, under the direction of Ruth Dalbeck and Jack MacInnis, will perform during lunch at Senior Citizen's Day, Monday, June 3, at the Second Congregational Church. Mrs. Dalbeck will direct a flute duet, a saxaphone trio and an ensemble of flutes and clarinets. Mr. MacInnis will conduct the members of the school's Concert Choir in several special selections.

Media Fair at Deer Hill

Math league awards

Seventh and eighth grade Cohasset High School students have again particiapted in the Continental Mathematics League. Medals were presented to each grade's highest scorer, eighth grader Daniel Farwell and seventh grader Zachary Hochkeppel.

Certificates were given to eighth graders Scott Flaherty, Celia Mullen, Matthew Buckley, Nancy Riley, Diana Kornet, Michael Figueiredo and Thomas Long. Seventh graders who received certificates were Kerri Anglin, Neely Hemassi, Juliana Chittick, Jonathan DeLima and Allison Kornet.

They also competed in the annual New England Mathematics League, placing fourth in Norfolk County for the seventh graders, while the eighth grade missed fourth place by five points.

The top five scorers for the seventh grade were Zachary Hochkeppel, Brian Shultz, Kerri Anglin, Juliana Chittick and James Long. Celia Mullen, Dan Farwell, Blake Weier, Scott Flaherty and Nancy Riley were high scorers for the eighth grade.

In New England, 397 schools participated in this competition which was keen and close in Norfolk County with nine points separating first and fourth place.

Deer Hill concert

Recently the Deer Hill School had a concert at the High School on Thursday night. This concert was a huge success.

The auditorium was packed with people. The chorus sang well and the band played great.

Everyone was amazed as the chorus sang "Getting To Know You," "Something To Sing About," "Putting on the Ritz," "Red, Red Rose" and "Oklahoma."

Everyone is looking forward to next year's concert, and keep up the good work.

Science Museum visit

On May 7, the third graders of the Osgood School went to the Science Museum.

The first thing we did was to visit the planetarium where we flew to Venus, Mars, Jupiter, Mercury and the Moon. We had to find out three things about the planets. Did it have breathable air, water and a livable temperature?

We saw a transparent woman. We had been studying the parts of the body so it was interesting to see all of the body parts.

We also saw some baby chicks trying to get out of their eggs.

We saw some lungs. They showed a good lung and a bad lung. One was healthy and one was when you smoke.

The lightning show was fun but loud. We learned many things about lightning and how to be safe.

We also saw a live animal demonstration about owls and the way they live.

It was a great field trip and we want to go to the Science Museum again.

A successful meeting

The smell of popcorn attracted over 70 people to last Thursday night's annual meeting of the PSO.

A swiftly conducted business meeting to elect board members for next year and to change a bylaw extending service on the board to three one-year terms was followed by a short speech on the importance of volunteerism by incoming president, Nancy Sandell.

Then parents, teachers and administrators settled back in their seats to munch popcorn and watch "Home Movies."

Activities Chairman Mary Beth Lean and AV Director Dr. John Packard, along with many students under his direction, shot, edited and mixed a medley of videos showing Cohasset kids playing, acting, working and winning.

When the movie ended, Dr. Packard introduced John Ronan of American Cablesystems who encouraged the audience to become involved in all aspects of community TV.

Copies of the annual report summarizing the budget and committee activities for 1984-85 are available in the school offices for anyone who was unable to attend the meeting.

You've built equity in your home . . .

The equity in your home (the difference between the amount you owe on your first mortgage and what your home is really worth) is an asset often overlooked.

You worked for your home...now let your home work for you. Our loan officers will be pleased to talk with you about taking advantage of this ideal money source.

A loan on this equity can pay the tuition for your children's education, buy or build a recreational home, allow you to take advantage of investment opportunities, and even help you assume an existing mortgage on a new home. We can assist with any worthwhile financial need.

You have built equity in your home — why not use it???

A parent's guide to teenage parties

When your teen is giving a party

Plan in advance. Check party plans with your teenager and know the guest list. If you agree with who is invited, you can curb the "open party" situation.

Set a time limit. Set a definite start and ending; not too long. Consider daytime parties as an alternative to evening ones or plan an activity such as swimming, skating or renting movies.

Agree to rules ahead of time. These might include: No drugs, including alcohol; no smoking; no leaving the party and then returning; no gate crashers allowed; lights should be left on and some rooms in your house are off limits.

Know your responsibilities. The responsible adult at a teenagers party is visible and aware. Remember IT IS ILLEGAL TO SERVE DRUGS, INCLUDING ALCOHOL, TO MINORS.

You are legally responsible for anything that may happen to a minor who has been served drugs or alcohol in YOUR home.

Invite another parent or couple over. Other adults are company for you during a long evening and can be of help with problems. Also, if parents have driven teenagers to your house, you might consider inviting them in to meet you, however briefly.

When your teen is going to a party

Call the host. Before giving consent that your teenager be allowed to attend a party, make sure of the basic rules, such as parental supervision and that no alcohol will be allowed.

Check the party plans beforehand with your teenager. Know where your child is going and with whom. When taking your teenager to a party, wait to see that he or she is inside the house. If you don't know the host parents, introduce yourself.

Make it easy for your teenager to leave a party. If there is drinking or drug taking or any reason that your teenager wishes to leave a party, make an arrangement that your child can call you (or a designated adult) who will come.

Urge your teenager never to ride home with a driver who has been drinking. You might have an understanding that there will be no punishments or restrictions for a call letting you know that things are getting out of hand.

Be up to greet your teenager when he or she comes home from a party.

Parents, Parties, and the Law

Q. Are the police ever called out to assist parents when their child's party has gotten out of hand?

A. Yes. Most problems arise at parties involving high school age children and usually in situations where parents are absent. The two major problems at these parties are uninvited guests and the consumption of alcohol. I recall one incident in which a fifteen-year-old was rushed to the hospital near death because of the amount of vodka he had consumed. Again, this happened at a party where no adults were present.

Also offered is a large selection of thirst quenching soft drinks, as well as generously proportioned sandwiches and subs sure to tame the wildest appetite.

For superb pizza you'll return for time after time, the editors of this 1985 Dunn's Business Review recommend TOWN PIZZA.

Government structure groups review town engineer

The Town Government Structure Committee will continue to investigate the merits of Cohasset hiring an engineer.

The committee intends to meet with the chairman of the Conservation Commission and members of the Drainage Advisory Committee.

The idea of bringing an engineer aboard was first proposed by the Board of Health in a letter to the selectmen. It is supported strongly by the Planning Board and the drainage committee.

Planning Board Chairman Chris Bassett and liaison to the drainage committee Selectman Diane Sullivan spoke in favor of the proposed position last week.

Bassett told the government structure committee that Cohasset's extensive drainage problems can't be ironed out by the board.

She said her board doesn't have the authority to enforce town zoning bylaws on property smaller than subdivisions. And in regard to the subdivisions, the zoning bylaws don't require extensive research into drainage.

Even if the board acquired the authority to enforce stiffer drainage requirements through the incorporation of a proposed drainage bylaw in the zoning bylaws, the building inspector lacks the expertise to enforce such laws, Bassett said.

"I feel the town desperately needs a town engineer. Engineers are people who set out to solve problems. It would be good to have someone on board, who would take up problems such as with individual lots and be an enforcement officer," she said.

The Planning Board now relies heavily on the advice of consulting civil engineer John Modzewlewski of Civil Design, Boston. The board asks developers for a $500 deposit to cover any site plan review expenses. The developers are also expected to reimburse the town for additional engineering costs.

She said the proposed engineer position needn't be full-time. It could be part-time or contracted.

Sullivan said both the drainage bylaw her committee designed and a town engineer are combined methods to fight the runoff problem. "Many towns have engineers on staff, but don't have drainage regulations. We want the power to enforce the regulations on private property to solve the horrible runoff problem," she said.

Bassett added that if a drainage bylaw became part of the zoning bylaw and her board had an engineer on hand to enforce it, builders would have to submit the proper drainage information about their property to gain a building permit. That information would include an extensive soil analysis, so the board would be able to predict what would happen to adjoining property as the area was built up and modified.

She said her board has begun to take advantage of free soil analysis work offered by the USDA Conservation Service.

She did learn that if a soil analysis was required by the town, it would create an additional expense for the developers which would probably be passed on to the buyer.

In defense of hiring an engineer, Sullivan agreed with Bassett when she said, "We can be a little more vigilant about meeting the growth of the town, while protecting drinking water and the environment. We want to reduce the margin of error for an entire town that drains badly."

Sailing!

South Shore residents will be able to sail to George's Island from Hull this summer aboard a cruise ship operated by Bay State Cruises of Boston.

Carolyn Kiley, vice president of Bay State Spray and Provincetown Steamship Company, has announced the new Nantasket to George's Island cruise will commence Memorial Day weekend, operating weekends until June 15 when it will begin sailing seven days a week all summer long.

"This will give people living down on the South Shore the chance to get out to George's Island without traveling to Boston first," says Kiley. "It will also be an opportunity for many people to see the South Shore from the sea for the first time."

According to Kiley, the 45-minute cruise to George's Island will be narrated throughout so that passengers can enjoy the many points of interest along the route. The cruise will leave Nantasket daily at noon and return to Hull at 3:30 p.m. Passengers will have two hours to explore George's Island and historic Fort Warren located there.

Bay State Cruises also provides round trip service from Boston to Nantasket Beach twice daily during the summer and commuter boat service from Pemberton Pier in Hull all year long. The Commuter boat leaves Hull weekdays at 7:20 a.m. for Long Wharf in Boston and returns at 6:20 p.m.

For further information on these cruises, contact Bay State at 723-7800.

Hearing on second story

Despite an earlier decision to reject an appeal through the town, several Jerusalem Road abutters have decided to appeal the building inspector's issuance of a permit to construct a second story at 51 Jerusalem Road.

Donald O'Neil of 66 Jerusalem Road, has filed for the appeal through the Zoning Board of Appeals, along with four abutters.

That appeal was filed with the town May 21. Within five days, the owners of 51 Jerusalem Road filed for a special permit "for relief for alterations to a pre-existing non-conforming structure located at 51 Jerusalem Road."

In association with the appeal, the O'Neil's attorney, John Roy, requested that Building Inspector Edward Poskus order all construction work at the site be stopped. Poskus complied with the request. Extensive work had already been completed on the home since the building permit was issued more than a month ago.

Earlier this month, Atty. Roy had said his clients were prepared to appeal the permit to the zoning board. The following week he said they rejected that idea, saying the zoning board would presumably support the actions of their enforcement officer.

But Atty. Roy said that decision was never firm, and his clients decided last week to file the appeal.

The neighbors objected to the town allowing a second story to be constructed at 51 Jerusalem Road without any hearings, in which abutters' input would be provided. A second story constructed atop the former one-story home would eliminate the water view from the abutting homes, they said.

Inspector Poskus and Health Agent Joseph Godzik opposed that argument, stating that no special permits nor hearings would be required for the second story to be completed.

Owner Julie Gailinas and Andrea Merrill of Distinctive Homes Trust filed for a special permit through the zoning board May 21, five days after the appeal was filed by Atty. Roy. Following the special permit request, the attorney asked Poskus to order all work stopped.

Both hearings are scheduled for June 6 at 8 p.m.

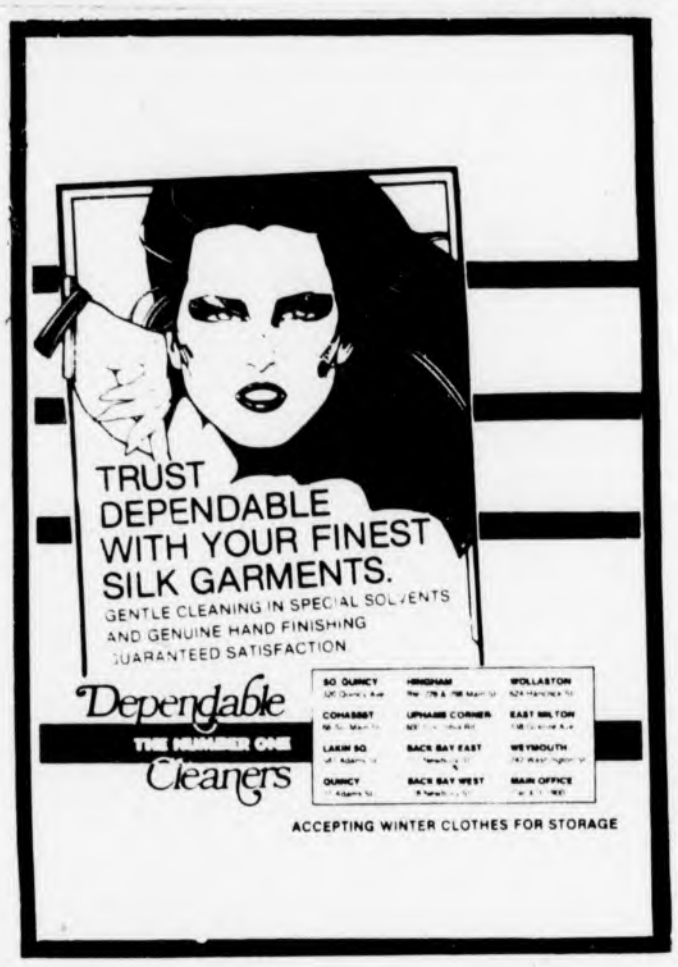
Please call the Cohasset Recreation Department office at 383-6791 to register.

Sandy Beach Assoc.

At a recent meeting of the Sandy Beach Association, Board of Trustees, the resignations of F. Allen Weisenfluh and William Adams III were accepted.



Both have faithfully served this organization for many years. Newly elected members to fill the two vacancies were David Chittim and Richard Henderson.

It was also voted to elect R. Perry Collins as president; Paul C. Corbett, treasurer and Margurette Libby as secretary. Other members of the Board of Trustees are: Jeff Steele, Robin Lawrence and Samuel Wakeman, Sr.

Sandy Beach Association is a private organization, formed in 1917 to provide and maintain a public beach for the residents of Cohasset. The support is provided mainly by the generous contributions of the residents of Cohasset during the annual fund raising drive. Your continued support is greatly appreciated in order that we continue to maintain a clean and safe beach.

The parking lot for the beach is owned and operated by the Town of Cohasset. One of the major concerns of the people using the beach is the presence of dogs. Please do not bring your dog to the beach, however small or cute, or allow your dog to wander to the beach on his own.

Your comments regarding the operation of Sandy Beach are always welcome and we ask you to help us to make your beach a clean and safe place for your summer enjoyment.

You don't get this far by changing typewriter ribbons.

Opportunity is the word for women in today's Corps. Our wide range of Career Options is designed to prepare young women for active roles in almost every aspect of Corps life. From the typing pool to the motor pool. Call 800-423-2600.

The recipient of the Quincy Cooperative Bank scholarship is Jill Ryan. CHS Principal Richard Streeter and Jill's mother, Kathleen Ryan, attended a reception in Jill's honor.

Quincy Bank Scholarship

This year the Quincy Cooperative Bank Scholarship awards were awarded at a reception at the main office of the Quincy Cooperative Bank on Wednesday, May 22.

Each year we give scholarships to 10 high school students in the surrounding towns. The award is given to the students on the basis of scholarship excellence and outstanding citizenship through school and community activities. Each recipient received $250.

The recipient from Cohasset High this year was: Jill Ryan, 3 Woodland Drive, Cohasset.

Jill was a cheerleader grades nine through 12, a member of the yearbook staff and Bloodmobile volunteer. Jill will be attending Framingham State College in the Fall. She plans to major in Fashion & Textiles.

R.E. course completed

Cohasset residents Karen J. Leavitt, Gary Drinkwater, Anne MacDonald and Lisa Goldenberg recently completed a basic fundamentals of real estate course given by the Conway Country School of Real Estate, Inc., which is based in Hanover. The course included basics of real estate laws, contracts, financing, mortgages, zoning, real estate appraisal and a review of state license requirements and laws. Successful completion of the course is a prerequisite to taking the Massachusetts real estate salesperson's license exam.

GRI graduates

Jayne Nussdorfer and Frederick Koed of Cohasset have successfully completed Course I of the 1985 Realtors Institute of Massachusetts, according to Massachusetts Association of Realtors President, David H. Bradley, GRI, CRS of Weston.

The Association sponsors Institutes throughout the year for Realtors and Realtor-Associates as part of its continuing education program. Upon completion of three 30-hour courses, Institute participants receive the nationally-recognized designation GRI (Graduate, Realtors Institute).

Of over 82,000 GRI's nationwide, there are over 2,000 in Massachusetts. The Institute includes such subjects as residential construction and design, listings, pricing property, marketing, law, finance, ethics, management, advertising, urban growth, structure and change and governmental affairs. Some 180 persons attended the Institute.

Nussdorfer and Koed are associated with Hallmark 100, 152 King St., Rte. 3A, in Cohasset.

A guide for safe partying

Q. What are parents' responsibilities when their child has a party in their home?

A. Most parents are ignorant of the law in this regard. Many have called the police department to inquire about their responsibilities. Parents should know that there are criminal charges that can be brought for serving alcohol to minors and for risking injury to minors. Penalties of up to one year in prison, fines ranging up to $1,000, or both, may result if a parent is caught allowing minors to consume alcohol.

Q. What advice would you give to parents who want to allow their child to have a party?

A. First there must be parental supervision. Parents are legally responsible for what happens to minors in their home. Second, do not allow alcoholic beverages to be served. Limit the number of guests and let the party be "by invitation only." A word-of-mouth general invitation brings party crashers.

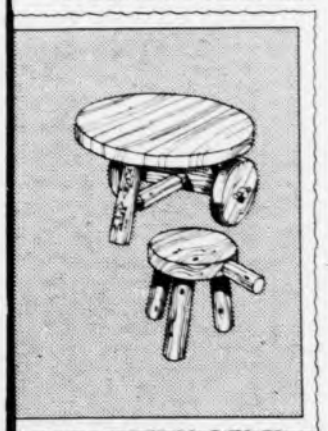
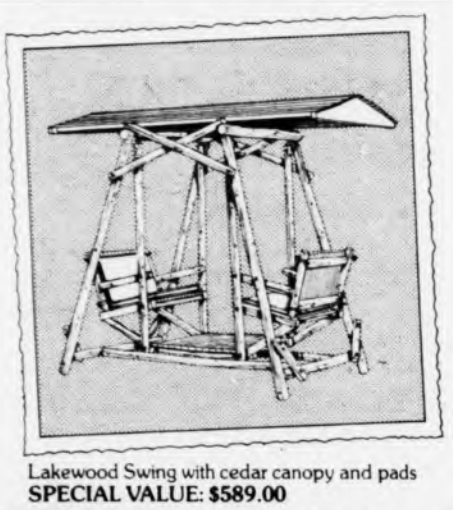
Missing Children's Day

In remembrance of National Children's Day (May 25, 1985), Sheriff Peter Y. Flynn recently announced the free distribution of the "Protect Your Children" brochure developed for residents of Plymouth County.



"In a perfect world, we would never need a day set aside to remind us of the large number of missing children that the United States has," said Flynn. "But, unfortunately, we don't live in a perfect world and that's why the Plymouth County Sheriff's Department has developed a brochure to help parents or guardians to protect their young wards."

Flynn added, "Here in Plymouth County, we have a low missing children rate. That we should be thankful for but even one missing child is a tremendous tragedy and I hope that every parent will get a copy of this publication in order to better their chances of never having to live the nightmare of losing their child.



"Speak to your neighbors. Start a 'safe house' where local children can go to locally if they are approached or scared by an adult. Fingerprint your children. Know their habits and acquaintances. Never take anything for granted.

"Missing children here in this country number at 150,000 a year; that's more than 400 per day. Such figures are an indictment of our society. We must take action. Get involved. Get this publication; it may help you. And, if you can, say a prayer at your house of worship for those children already missing. They need your prayers."

SILVER SQUIRREL INN

So. Shore Art Center summer course listing

Combine the fun of sand and surf with summer studies; enroll in one of several courses offered by the South Shore Art Center during the summer.

Students may enroll in week-long intensive workshops or regular classes meeting twice a week for four-week periods at the Center, 103 Ripley Road in Cohasset. Advanced registration is required for all courses at the Center.

Ushering in the warm, lazy days of summer are several workshops during the month of June. The first offering is a Virginia Avery one-week outdoor watercolor for all levels of artistic ability. Classes will meet outdoors, weather permitting, June 10-14 from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Avery will start each session with a teacher demonstration and proceed to working with students on watercolor techniques. She recommends students have a knowledge of drawing for this workshop; other then that the course is open to all levels of ability.

The next week brings an evening landscape painting course taught by Judeth Van Hamm Wiers designed for intermediate and advanced painters who want to capture the special late-day light found at this time of year. The course runs daily June 17 - 21 from 6:30 - 8:30 p.m.

Artists may use their own choice of medium although quick mediums are preferred. The class will concentrate on color and light with teacher critiques and individual attention.

Portrait artist Constance Flavell Platt will instruct a two-day, June 27 and June 28, pastel portrait workshop for intermediate and advanced artists. The class will meet 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Students will work directly from the model with teacher instruction on how to develop light, shade, color and likeness. The objective is to encourage students to produce a saleable portrait.

Kicking off the summer for young artists is a one-week Children's Art Week taught by staff member Serena Brundige. Meeting daily from June 24-28, from 10:30 a.m. to noon, the workshop is for student ages seven to eleven. Brundige will work with her class outdoors doing drawings, painting and mixed-media projects.

After a brief break for the 30th anniversary of the South Shore Arts Festival and the Fourth of July, the Center will get into full swing July 8 with more intensive workshops and weekly classes.

Betty Kohlberg, a visiting professor at the Massachusetts College of Art, will teach two intensive workshops, experimental techniques, July 8, 9, 11, and 12 from 9:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m., and self-expressive drawing, July 29 and 30, August 1 and 2, from 9:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m.

Designed for advanced artists, the experimental techniques workshop will introduce them to new approaches to their work. The class will meet indoors and out and will explore experimental techniques concentrating on color, composition and unusual insights. Kohlberg recommends that participants take the "Uncommon Boston" photo tour with her on June 22 ($30) to prepare for the workshop; otherwise students should bring their own photographs.

Her self-expressive drawing for intermediate and advanced artists will approach drawing from an emotional point of view rather than explicit rendering of form. Students will concentrate on line, shape, negative space and use of flat planes. She also recommends that participants take the "Uncommon Boston" photo tour of historic places.

A photography workshop, landscape photography, led by John Droege, is scheduled for July 22-26. The first meeting will be 9:30 a.m. on July 22; the other meetings will be arranged.

The course is designed for the photographer who has a working knowledge of photography and some awareness of imagery but desires more thorough understanding of the controls available. The objective is to raise the student's visual appreciation through understanding and skills with the equipment, processes, materials of photography.

The first session of the regular summer classes begins July 8 with classes meeting twice a week for four weeks; second session begins August 5. Scheduled for Monday and Wednesday beginning July 8 from 10 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. is Harriet Zabusky Zand's portrait basics for all levels. Her course provides the students with basic painting techniques used in doing portraits with emphasis on understanding the structure of the head and upper torso.

Two Albert Abany courses, drawing from nature and oil and acrylic painting, are on the Tuesday-Thursday schedule. Drawing from nature, beginning July 9 meets from 9:30 a.m. to noon and is designed for beginners and those who want to brush up on basic landscape skills in order to create better paintings. The group will meet every other week outdoors and in the Center studio on alternate weeks.

His oil and acrylic painting, meeting from 1 - 3:30 p.m., is a creative painting course for the beginner as well as the more advanced student. The course offers the opportunity to explore a personal visual and color vocabulary based on sound painting practices.

Tuesday and Thursday evenings from 7:15 - 10:15 p.m. David Tandy will lead an evening watercolor course for beginning and intermediate painters. The student's technical knowledge of watercolor as a medium will be developed through involvement with both traditional and contemporary art concerns.

Outdoor watercolor, for all levels of ability, will meet Wednesday and Friday, beginning July 10 from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Virginia Avery's course is a series of lessons in watercolor to help students better develop needed painting skills. Individual attention will be geared to student's ability and desire to progress.

A Paul Fortin "photography for beginners" course begins July 8 and meets Monday and Wednesday from 9:30 - 9:30 p.m. for eight sessions. For the beginning photographer in both color and/or black and white, this lecture course covers all the basics, including F stops, shutter speeds, films, filters, composition, lighting and subjects.

All these opportunities plus courses for children and teenagers through the Center's young artist department provide a chance for participants to improve their artistic skills or try their hands at something new. For a complete summer class schedule, to register for classes or take out a Center membership, call the South Shore Art Center, 383-9548.

Rockland Trust official cleared charges

By Mary Mahoney

A U.S. District Court jury gave Hanover resident, Donald Y. Winn, "the finest birthday present I've had in a number of years" when they found him not guilty last Friday on felony charges claiming failure to report large cash transactions to the federal government.

Winn, a senior vice-president of the Rockland Trust Co., turned 48 Saturday, one day after the end of a seven-day court trial.

Sitting in his office at Hanover Coin, the business Winn owns on Rte. 53, the Broadway resident said he is relieved the trial is over and that he can finally resume his banking career.

"I have been living a nightmare for over a year. Needless to say, I'm glad it's over. I feel particularly grateful that it is over for my family, my friends and my bank," Winn said in a prepared statement.

Winn said he learned in April 1984 from his attorney, Michael Collora, that the federal government was holding him responsible for failure of the bank to report cash transactions of over $10,000 during the period between January, 1980 and April, 1983.

"The government felt that I caused transactions involving Del Greco Coin Co. of Quincy not to be reported," Winn explained.

For the first five months, Winn said he lived with the burden of a possible indictment by himself and did not inform his family until September, 1984 when Rockland Trust Co. was fined $50,000 for failing to file reports on transactions with a number of its customers to the IRS.

Winn remembers the date of his indictment, Dec. 27, 1984. Since that time he has been on a paid leave of absence from the bank and had great praise Saturday for the backing he received from Rockland Trust Co. officials.

"The support from the bank employees, officers and directors has been phenomenal. They have all backed me 100 percent from the beginning."

Defense attorney Collora said in an interview last week that the federal government's case against Winn charged that DelGreco customers received sums of cash over $10,000 for checks written by Del Greco. Under a 1970 law, banks are required to report all cash transactions over $10,000 to the IRS. Winn was indicted on 15 felony counts of causing bank managers to not report the large cash transactions. But on the third day of the trial, Collora produced evidence that treasurer's checks and not cash was given for Del Greco's checks written in excess of $10,000.

"I truthfully feel Rockland Trust lived within the spirit of the currency transaction laws," Winn said during Saturday's interview. "My managers were always aware of anything out of the ordinary but obviously there has been some confusion over the intent of the law. For the record, I have known my innocence all along. I have always been very proud of any action I have taken," Winn said.

Since Friday evening, Winn said he has received many calls from friends, relatives, acquaintances and customers, all pleased with the outcome of the trial.

"I've had calls from customers I haven't seen or dealt with in over 10 years. It makes me feel like it's a good world out there."

Winn said he plans to take a few days off to spend with his family and will probably go back to work at the bank June 3.

Scituate Historical Society tour opens the summer

The first Scituate historical tour, a traditional summer event, is planned for Sunday, June 9 from 1 to 5 p.m. Open on that afternoon will be all the buildings under the society's care.

These include the Old Scituate Lighthouse and Keepers Cottage at Cedar Point and the Cudworth House and Barn at Scituate Center where you will see weaving at the old loom.

Across the street stands Lawson Tower. If you climb the stairs to the bell deck you can watch Bob Holland ring the bells, and on a clear day see from Boston to Plymouth.

The Mann Historical Museum is located on Greenfield Lane. You can see a visual presentation of the restoration of the house. You can also see where the Spanish Treasure was found.

The Old Stockbridge Mill, located on Country Way in Greenbush, will be open from 1 to 5 p.m. but will be operating from 2 to 4 p.m. when you can see corn ground into cornmeal as they did it in 1640. You can also buy the cornmeal in two pound bags.

Also in Greenbush is the Old Oaken Bucket Homestead and Well on Old Oaken Bucket Rd. The Samuel Woodworth Museum will be open where you can see the old grain chest from the Mill which is the only one in existence that has survived the 17th century.

People have sent us memorabilia of the poet who wrote the famous peom "The Old Oaken Bucket" and we have them all on display in the museum. In the carriage shed, you can see Chief Justice Cushing's lone hoss Shay.

You can start at any one of the sites and pick up a brochure with a map to help you get around.

Last but not least, you can see the Little Red Schoolhouse located on Cudworth Rd. This is where we have our new library.

We have books on Scituate's history, geneologies of over 50 early settlers of Scituate, vital records of towns in the area, and many other reference books.

We also have a fine exhibit of Indian Artifacts dating back 10,000 years, dug up and displayed by Bill Halleran.

Hingham Historical Society's house tour

The Hingham Historical Society's 61st "Pilgrimage to Old Hingham Houses and other Points of Interest" is Wednesday, June 19 from 1 to 4 p.m. and 6:30 to 9:30 p.m.

The Tour booklet is available the morning of the Tour at Old Ordinary (21 Lincoln Street) or Lincoln Green for a donation of $7 including afternoon refreshments.

The tour is dedicated to the 350th anniversary of the founding of Hingham. An exhibit, "Hingham's Beauty, Hingham's Pride," at Old Ordinary will include late 18th century gowns, fine examples of artisans' work of the past, as well as several Isaac Sprague prints.

The historical buildings open will be The Old Ordinary (1680), Old Derby Academy, the first co-educational school in the country, and the Old Ship Meeting House (1681).

There will also be two other churches of the 18th and 19th centuries; all will be open in the afternoon.

The tour is directed by the Ladies Committee of The Old Ordinary which maintains the 13 room house-museum. Mrs. George T. Connor and Mrs. James B. Tiffin, co-chairmen. Mrs. E.S. Beveridge is chairman of the Old Derby Committee.

Art Center membership work invited

The South Shore Art Center's gallery selection committee invites professional artists, photographers and fine craftspeople to submit their work for consideration for membership in the Center.

Original work must be delivered to the Center, 103 Ripley Rd., Cohasset, on Friday, May 31, between noon and 4 p.m. The gallery selection jury will then make its selection for membership in the Center.

Five works of art must be submitted by those working in painting, drawing or pastel and 10 pieces in photography, sculpture and crafts. Slides are not acceptable for gallery selection.

GOLF

The golf team had a rough week and lost their three matches against Hanover, Cardinal Spellman and Scituate. The boys finished their season with a respectable 7-8 record which was just two wins shy of qualifying them for the State Tournament.

Despite being disappointed about missing the tournament, Coach Jim Franey was generally pleased with his team's efforts this year. Franey called this season a "building year" for Cohasset and feels strongly they will come back strong next spring. The Skippers are losing two seniors this year, Troy Chatterton and Chris Powers. Both boys have golfed very well and will undoubtedly be missed.

Cohasset will be looking toward Glen Froio, Paul Froio, Jeff Hartwell, Kurt Weisenfluh, David Caffrey, Chris Froio, John Froio and Brian Curran next year for leadership, according to Franey.

Wednesday Jeff Hartwell, Paul Froio and Troy Chatterton all went to the League Tournament at North Hill in Duxbury. Troy golfed a 79 and won the entire tournament. Franey believes if Troy keeps on playing the way he is he will definitely qualify for the State Tournament this week. Both Paul Froio and Chris Froio will be trying to qualify as well.

GIRLS' SOFTBALL

The girls started off slowly this week losing to Abington on Monday and Norwell on Wednesday. Against Norwell both Janet DiGirolamo and Carla Lucas had two hits apiece, but it was not enough to counteract Cohasset's walks and errors.

The Skippers turned everything around, however, and clobbered Sandwich on Thursday, 20 -1. This game was played under the lights which seemed to agree with the girls as they hammered the ball and thus qualified for the State Tournament.

Once again Janet DiGirolamo and Carla Lucas led the Skippers offensively with three hits each followed by Kerri O'Brien who picked up two as well as having a strong game on third base.

Anne O'Leary earned the win for Cohasset as she walked only one batter the entire game.

Coach Bill Fallon was happy with this year and felt it was an unexpected bonus to make the State Tournament. The girls' first playoff game will be either this Friday or Saturday. Come cheer Cohasset onto victory!

BOYS' BASEBALL

The boys finished off their season this week and ended up 6-4 which shows remarkable improvement over last year's record.

Monday the Skippers lost to Abington, 4-0. Cohasset combined for only three hits and made three key errors which cost them the game.

Coach Joe Bouchard cited Jay Contis and Bobby Shultz as having good games. Bouchard was also impressed with his pitcher Sean Corkery who struck out 11 batters.

Wednesday Cohasset was defeated by Norwell, 5-1. Lack of offense was the key to the loss, according to Bouchard, who was still pleased with his team's defensive efforts.

Both Peter Corbet and Jay Contis led the Skippers offensively with a hit apiece. Mike Gentile pitched a "fine ballgame," according to Bouchard who felt badly that Mike had no runs to back him up.

Thursday the boys concluded their season with a loss to Sandwich, 8-1. Cohasset had a total of three hits which came from Peter Corbet, Bobby Shultz and Todd Fitzpatrick. Pitcher David Stover started the game and played well.

Overall, Bouchard was pleased with his team this year and felt they reached their goals. The boys will be losing seniors Jay Contis, Peter Corbet and David Stover, but have 13 boys coming back next year, all with varsity experience, which includes Cohasset's entire pitching and infield staff.

Bouchard is looking forward to next year and believes his team will do very well and be very competitive. Cohasset will be looking toward Jamie Roy, Bobby Shultz and Bob Corkery for leadership next season.

GIRLS' TENNIS

The girls finished their regular season and are planning for the State Tournament this week.

Monday the Skippers beat Abington, 3-2. Kerri Kirkendal blew past her opponent, 6-1, 6-0, while the two doubles teams consisting of Lauren Haynes, Jessica Hamilton, and Megan Kelley and Carolyn O'Brien, had no trouble with theirs.

Wednesday Cohasset crushed Norwell, 4-1. Kerri Kirkendal and Kristen O'Brien both dominated their matches and won. First doubles team, Jessica Hamilton and Lauren Haynes, and second doubles team, Megan Kelley and Carolyn O'Brien were also victorious.

Thursday, the girls were knocked out of first place as they lost to Sandwich, 3-2. Kerri Kirkendal and second doubles team, Megan Kelley and Carolyn O'Brien, kept their winning streaks going. Coach Sue Dalrymple points out that these three girls have all gone undefeated the entire season! Dalrymple is pleased with these girls and feels this achievement is something to be proud of.

Dalrymple is very optimistic about the State Tournament and believes her team has a good shot at going all the way. Dalrymple feels that if her doubles teams play well, Cohasset will be tough to beat.

Annual collection for the support of our two Boston seminaries: St. John's in Brighton and Pope John XXIII in Weston.

First Parish

Presentation of Bibles - Members of the Sixth Grade class receiving gift Bibles two weeks ago include: Kristin Martin, Kristin MacQuarrie, William E. Baird Jr., Lincoln Marsac, Sophie Redfield, Corey DeSantis, Melissa Rousseau, Margaret Moore, Anne Sandell, and Tara Volungis.

Coming of Age program - Congratulations to: Jennifer Martin, Alice Redfield, Felecia Bartow, Susan Lean, Chipper Weier, Megan Terry, Arthur Meacham, Amy Hobson and Diana Kornet.

Spring meeting - of Ballou Channing District Women's Federation, Saturday, June 1 at the Unitarian Universalist Church of Weymouth. Program, "A Tapestry of Woman's Spirit," with Rev. Patt of Middleboro U.U. Church. Registration at 10 a.m. and luncheon at noon. All church women are invited. Reservations for luncheon will be accepted until May 29. Call 331-2120 or 335-7566.

Second Congregational

Confirmation - The following persons were confirmed and received as members of the church this past Sunday: Jennifer Aaron, Michael Anderson, Paul Bishop, Erica Ford, Kathy Haase, Kyle Hublitz, Karen Milburn, Kimberly Milburn, Stephen Myers, Timothy Myers, Margo Nedrow, Alice Seddon, Jill Shockman, Peter Sandblom, and David Shultz.

Seminar - Marsha Silvia will be attending a morning seminar Wednesday, June 5. The subject is "Adolescents at Risk," and concerns understanding and helping with depression and suicide. Anyone interested should contact Marsha.

Glorious food - In the next few weeks, our Board of Deacons hopes to collect enough non-perishable food to help stock the Quincy Crisis Center's pantry for the summer. Remember to bring a few items or a grocery bag of food for hungry families.

Elevator completed - Though its formal dedication has not been held, the church's elevator is in service. If you want to use the elevator, please speak to one of the greeters.

Eyeglasses needed - Nearly every family has a few pair of old eyeglasses around the house. Whether they have a metal or plastic frame, they can help to provide better vision to people around the world. Next week's newsletter will tell you about "New Eyes for the Needy," and how you can help.

The Sequences of Sleep

Do you have a problem with sleep? Insomnia, or the inability to fall asleep is the best known of sleep problems. You might recognize that human sleep is characterized by four major stages of sleep in addition to "rapid eye movement" the stage of sleep during which most dreams occur.

There are many differenct causes of disturbance of sleep patterns, but some people actually have "bad sleep habits". This may not be confined only to sleeping in the wrong posture, or sleeping with too much noise in the room, but the body actually develops its own rhythm of sleep, its own biological expectation. In order to correct these kind of rhythms, the way to improve sleep may simply be to deprive a person of sleep for a day or two!

Other problems of sleep as complicated as difficulty with breathing during sleep, or difficulty falling asleep may require special laboratory tests or even endocrine evaluations. We begin with a thorough medical evaluation by an experienced specialist.

At the BEHAVIORAL MEDICINE INSTITUTE, we incorporate the skills of all the people on our team, and can use the only sleep laboratory on the South Shore to help unravel your sleep problems.

At the BMI, we take the time to listen.

"GOING TO THE DOCTOR GIVES ME THE WILLIES."

Going to the doctor can make a perfectly mature, intelligent adult suddenly feel like a helpless child. That's why it's important to find a doctor you can talk to. Someone who's there when you need them. Somebody smart enough to know what they don't know.

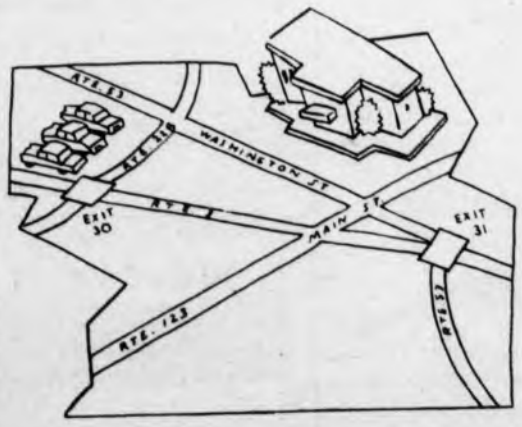
When you're looking at medical plans, it's hard to be smart enough. There are important differences between plans. And some of them are not apparent on the surface.

Some plans exist just to process claims and pay bills. You are only a policyholder. When it comes to finding the right doctors or dealing with emergencies, you're on your own. In today's medical world, that's no place to be.

At MultiGroup, you get more than after the fact coverage. You get a relationship with a doctor and a medical group. We cover almost everything, from the routine stuff many plans don't cover – to complete hospital care.

MultiGroup is a total approach to medical care, instead of a fragmented approach. It should be more expensive, but it isn't.

If you'd like to know more about us, we invite you to begin at the beginning. With a free booklet that explains your options.



It's called Apples & Oranges, or How to Choose a Health Plan. For your copy, call 1-800-543-3300.

Cohasset Close Up

Look who's behind those hometown stories, poems

By Charlotte Carney

Roses are red, violets are blue. Who writes those poems about Cohasset in the Mariner for you?

The poet, M.S. Maire (Max Stanley), is alive and well and living at 85 Elm Street.

This talented man does a lot more than just write poetry.

Included in his various activities, M.S. and wife Valerie Lipsett own and operate The Tinkers, a unique repair and rejuvenation shop in Cohasset. However, Maire gives most of the repair credit to wife Valerie.

It was last January when Maire sent his first poem, "Bound Brook" to the Mariner. "The idea for the poem," he explained, "came from an article I had written about Cohasset for a paper in Maine. I wanted to see if I could express the same idea in a poem."

Since that time, Maire has faithfully continued to send the poetry, expressing his feelings about Cohasset through the Mariner. In return, the Mariner's photographers have tried to capture the essence of his thoughts in a photo accompanying the poem.

Maire came to New England from the Mid West to attend the Coast Guard Academy in New London, Conn., where he received his B.S. in Engineering. "I really prefer New England to the Mid West," Maire said with great conviction.

After graduation and the service, Maire climbed to an executive position with a Boston leather tanning company, before starting his own Engineering Consulting Business which primarily involved leather tanning.

Maire has taught engineering and economics at the Boston University extension school and was also summoned to teach in Brazil on productivity improvment and waste pollution control in conjunction with the leather tanning industry.

Aside from consulting work and "tinkering," Maire is now doing contract writing in nuclear litigation. However, Maire added, "I am seriously looking for enough paid publications to sustain my (creative) writing as a primary source of income." This would allow him to continue his life's "love" of writing.

"I have been writing all my life," he said. "I have almost 100 technical papers published on Chemical Engineering, plant engineering, and economics."

However, being recognized and published in the "popular market" is tough, added Maire. "You just have to keep throwing things out there," he noted.

Maire is in the "throws" of finding a publisher for his book of literary criticisms on Hemingway and the role of women in his writing; and a novel, entitled "Brett", based on Hemingway's character, Brett Ashley, in "The Sun Also Rises."

Poetry is not Maire's only claim to fame in newspapers. His garden pieces have been published in several Boston area papers as well as the New England Gardener and the New England Sampler.

As a writer who is not restricted by boundaries, who has produced technical papers, humorous tales, novels and short stories, M.S. has even tried his hand at the lyrical side of song writing when he met a guitar player in Granbury, Tex. Together they wrote a song which Maire declared, "is somewhere in the house on tape."

Beside having the opportunities to experience with success the varied and challenging career changes, M.S. Maire and Valerie Lipsett are also able to take pride in their children's diversified accomplishments.

Maire's son, Steven, is in Hong Kong working for one of America's largest shoe companies.

Maire's oldest daughter Katherine owns the Fin, Fur and Feather pet stores in Hanover and Plymouth. His youngest daughter Jennifer, is a Foreign Language Student Advisor for Tufts University.

Koren Lipsett, who graduated from Cohasset High School, received a Cohasset Rotary scholarship and graduated with honors from Skidmore. She received the American Chemical Society Award there and a full scholarship to study for her doctorate degree in chemistry at the University of Maryland. And Brian Lipsett is currently living in Maine.

Maire's "sticktoitiveness" has brought him success in his past endeavors, with a promise to keep "throwing his work out there" until he has satisfied his own expectations.

Phone company has new calling option

Starting soon, callers in the South Shore area will be able to utilize a new service provided by New England Telephone which will result in savings for calls made within 25 miles of the calling exchange.

The Department of Public Utilities recently approved a new optional calling plan proposed by New England Telephone.

The plan, called Measured Circle Calling Service, will provide two hours of long distance calling to exchanges within 25 miles of the calling exchange.

The monthly fee will be $8.50 over the regular exchange rate for the first two hours.

Any additional calls beyond the first two hours will be priced at six cents per minute.

This service will be available throughout the state and customers can call their local New England Telephone business office immediately to arrange for this service.

Senator Edward P. Kirby (R-Whitman), who has actively advocated for better phone service in the South Shore, stressed this service will be optional and that it will not effect the price of free local calls.

Kirby said, "the plan was submitted by New England Telephone as a result of a 1984 DPU order and is of particular value to communities ineligible for Metropolitan Service, those located more than 20 miles from the Boston central exchange."

The measured circle calling plan offers customers an option to the current Bay State Service offered by New England Telephone.

Kirby said "it is about time that residents of our area who have friends or relatives in the Boston area can call them at a reasonable cost. I am pleased that New England Telephone and the DPU have come to an agreement to provide this much needed service."

Ride-A-Bike participants thanked

The Cohasset Teachers Association wishes to thank the many participants in the Ride-A-Bike for Retarded Citizens. Over 115 riders are busy collecting the $3200 pledged as part of a state-wide effort.

Please return all collections to the following: Irene Mello at Osgood School; Frank Deakin at Deer Hill School; Patrick Plante at the high school; or Ride-A-Bike Treasurer Mary Brennock at the Cohasset High School guidance office.

A special thank you is extended to the following C.T.A. members and friends who volunteered to make this day successful. Cohasset Board of Selectmen (and in particular, Rocco Laugelle for all his time and effort), Nina Atkinson, Marion Atkinson, Jane Boomer, Clark Chatterton, Betty Cisneros, Rose Collins, Carolyn Contis, Karen Coyne, Ann Gill, Liz Glasfeld and family, Ern and Norma Grassey, Don Kelly, Taffy Nothnagle, Richard McLaughlin, Deidre O'Connell, Anna Plante, Kathi Picton-Quinn, Ed Sheehan, and Mike Weydt.

Refreshments were donated by Steve Vitkauskas of the Coca-Cola Bottling Co. in Braintree, and members of the P.S.O. Thanks are also extended to Mrs. Patricia Wunschel's cooking classes for the huge assortment of cookies, and to Clifton Jones, our Safety Officer, who along with the support of the Cohasset Police Department made this a safe event for all participants. Bob Lindsey and Richard DeCoste of Cohasset Cyclesports pedalled their tandem 32 miles with tools and equipment in tow to aid any distressed cyclists.

Contributions and donations from the generous residents in our town will be sent to the Mass. Association for Retarded Citizens, and their affiliate on the South Shore, serving over 200,000 mentally retarded children and adults in our state. If you would like to make a donation to M.A.R.C., please contact the coordinators, Patrick and Maria Plante at 383-9263.

FROM THE KITCHEN

by JOAN PINKHAM

Cooking and gardening go hand in hand and we all know that's what having a vegetable garden is all about--the joy of whisking veggies from the garden to the stove to one's dinner plate in the shortest time possible. For centuries, innovative cooks have eyed their flower gardens as a source of food, not just conjuring up thoughts of centerpieces, but with a view to the night's menu. After all, we are eating flowers every time we serve broccoli, artichokes, or cauliflower. At this time of the year, the daisies, violets, dandelions and marigolds that are blooming in our yards are not only beautiful, but edible. Dandelion greens are often used in a salad in place of chicory and the French still grow them commercially. Dandelions can be used for wine, using just the petals and are said to be a good source of vitamins A, B, C and E, which is probably why our American Indians called them "strong root" and used them medicinally. Most of us frown on them as weeds and consider dandelions more than a nuisance, but the story goes that President Eisenhower seasoned his vegetable chowders with a sprinkling of the petals. You can make tea and coffee, as well as wine, saute the buds to add to an omelet and using both the buds and greens, you can make

WILTED DANDELION SALAD

4 - 5 slices bacon
1 beaten egg
1 tsp. dry mustard
2 T each of sugar and cornstarch
4 T each of water and vinegar
Salt and pepper to taste
4 T light cream
3 to 4 c. dandelion greens
2 to 3 doz. dandelion buds

Fry bacon 'til crisp, drain, reserving fat. In double boiler over boiling water combine next seven ingredients. Stir until it thickens, then add cream and 1T bacon fat. Blend, then add 2 strips of crumbled bacon. Pour over buds and greens and toss. Add remaining crumbled bacon.

Fiddlehead ferns were on sale at the Produce House in Hanover--expensive though, $2.69 a pound. Lilacs that are filling our May gardens with fragrance may be candied to use as decorations, or individual flowerets may also be used decoratively by lining a metal ring mold with the blossoms, covering with water and freezing to be used to decorate a punch bowl. Soon we'll have day lilies, rich in vitamins, minerals and high in protein and ever so long ago, the Chinese wrote that the day lily reduces worry and benefits the mind. Even Napoleon fell victim to the springtime allure of violets and promised when he was banished to Elba: "I will return with the violets in the spring." Sure enough, when he returned in March 1815, his pathway was strewn with his favorite flowers. He sent Josephine violets on each wedding anniversary and when he died he was wearing a locket containing faded violets from her grave. Tucked away in my freezer are some candied rose and violet petals I bought in Harrod's food department last year and in Leona Woodring Smith's book on Flower Cookery, there is a recipe for

CANDIED VIOLETS

Egg white
Small camel's hair brush
Fresh petals, washed and dried
Tweezers
Granulated sugar

Beat egg white until frothy. With the brush, paint each side of violet and using tweezers, dip into sugar. Place on waxed paper to dry.

We have Connie Burkhardt to thank for sending along a copy of her friend Leona's book, and also, Marie Moss, for Ida Kelley's booklet called "My Favorite Honey Recipes." Old records term honey "man's first sweet" and it is often used as a quick energy food and its flavor depends on the kind of flowers from which bees gather the nectar. Used as a substitute for sugar, this book has recipes for cakes, breads, cole slaw, sweet potato balls and rhubarb and honey. In the latter, 1 c. mild-flavored honey is used with 4 c. unpeeled rhubarb and 1/4 tsp. salt. The washed, cut-up rhubarb, honey and salt are cooked covered, over low heat about 5 min. Here is a quick, easy recipe for

BITSY BREAD

1 pkg. refrigerator biscuits
1 c. honey
1/2 c. coconut

Preheat oven to 400. Cut each biscuit into three pieces. Roll each piece into small balls and dip in honey, then roll in coconut. Place three balls in each muffin cup and bake at 400 for 20 min.

MUSINGS

By John H. Cutler

☐ I agree with Carlyle, who didn't believe in pure democracy: "I do not believe in the collective wisdom of individual ignorance."

☐ A wise man who is resolute in judgment is considered a statesman; a foolish man who is resolute in judgment is considered a creep.

☐ You're an oldtimer if you remember when setting the world on fire was a metaphor. And as Robert Quillen noted, "If we wish to make a new world we have the material ready. The first one, too, was made out of chaos."

☐ Aristotle had an opinion of cities that is no longer believed: "Men come together in cities in order to live; they remain together in order to live the good life." On this subject, the late Margaret Mead, one of the leading anthropologists of her day, had an opinion: "We must have towns that accommodate different educational groups, different economic groups, different ethnic groups — towns where all can live in one place."

☐ A cannibal's advice to his son: Don't talk with people in your mouth.

☐ You can never tell about a girl and if you can, you shouldn't.

☐ Robert Louis Stevenson said it: "There is so much good in the worst of us and so much bad in the rest of us, that it behooves all of us not to talk about the rest of us." This recalls an old toast: Here's to you, as good as you are, and here's to me, as bad as I am, because as good as you are, and as bad as I am, I'm as good as you are and you're as bad as I am.

NEARLY NATIVE by DARRELL BERGER

'Return to sender, politics unknown'

Recently a friend of mine, a typical South Shore resident of clearly unradical persuasions, joined the American Civil Liberties Union.

His motivation was simply his perception that our freedoms were being eroded in new ways, not only by the government but by the private sector.

He felt new technologies were particularly dangerous, and that electronic gadgets could and were being used to invade privacy.

He saw the ACLU as an organization that would help protect citizens.

Soon after he received acknowledgment of his joining and the first round of ACLU newsletters, he also began to receive requests for donations from other organizations.

There was a group from the south that specialized in racism. There was a group organizing municipal workers. He even heard from Caesar Chavez and his California farm workers.

Eventually my friend realized that the ACLU had provided its mailing list to other organizations.

This is a common business practice. We know that if we subscribe, for instance, to a magazine on photography, we will soon be solicited by other photography magazines, and probably a number of camera and supply companies as well.

If we obtain a credit card from a department store, its rivals will soon be at our doors, caring little for our actual credit ratings.

Unsolicited mail has, in the last decade or so, also become a tool of political groups. Obviously the ACLU has become part of the liberal network, and the mail mongers have decided that its members are fertile sources of money.

It dismayed my friend to find the ACLU involved in this kind of electronic chicanery. He called its headquarters and was told there was a notice in its bulletin saying that members who did not want their names given out could notify them of it.

What an irony, he thought, that a group organized to protect civil liberties would so blithely publicize its membership list and make the members responsible for keeping it private.

The private citizen, it seems, has become a relic, even in the minds of those who purport to protect privacy.

Another friend subscribed to the Audubon Magazine, and sent a donation to Greenpeace. She felt she was keeping herself informed on the environment and wanted to give something to help.

Soon she was inundated by similar organizations, each with their own, perfectly worthy cause: endangered species, clean air, protection of domestic animals. She couldn't possibly give to them all.

Then one day she opened one such request and screamed. She had been sent pictures of dogs which had been horribly abused in the Phillipines, along with a petition to halt the abuse and a solicitation for a donation.

It was certainly something she wanted to stop, but the horror of the photographs played on her mind long after. It wasn't fair, she thought, to be sent such photographs without warning. She felt used, even though the cause was good.

And so we come once again to the oldest of all political questions. Does the end justify the means? Can the civil liberties people justify violating the privacy of its members by sharing its membership list with other organizations, unless the members initiate action to prevent it?

Can groups against the abuse of animals justify abusing the emotions of people by sending dreadful photographs to them? Apparently.

Of course it isn't just the left that uses interlocking mailing lists. Much of the recent success of the New Right has been attributed to voluminous and sophisticated direct mailing.

Recently a book has been published dividing the U.S. according to zip codes. Why? As an aid to marketing. It tells which zip codes are suburbs, which are rural. It separates the upscale urban areas from the poor, Cohasset from Hull, Back Bay from Brighton.

Every instance mentioned here is legal and each, taken alone, is probably well-meaning if not innocent. But taken as a whole they display a dreary pattern, especially concerning social issues which demand serious consideration and commitment.

The term "compassion fatigue" has been used to describe what happens to Americans when they can't bear to see another starving child, hear the plight of another political prisoner, or contemplate any longer the depletion of natural resources or the stockpiling of plutonium.

And so, those who desire individually to sharpen the awareness of citizens end up collectively by accomplishing the opposite. Advertising people call this "market saturation."

With so much misery coming to us through our mail boxes and televisions, the tendency is to turn off. Thusly blinded, we then overlook the misery in our own towns, which we might actually be able to change.

THEATRE REVIEW

A classic 'Life with Father'

By Judith Montiminy

The final production of the current premiere season at the Nickerson Theatre in Norwell is the classic American comedy, Lindsay and Crouse's "Life With Father." Running on Broadway between 1939 and 1947, "Life With Father" brought the redheaded Day family into the lives of many. Mother Vinnie's firm-mindedness and manipulation of the stern, irascible Clarence was funny and endearing. "Father" himself was endearing in his own way as well.

The production at the Nickerson Theatre is alive with a shrewd, yet delightful Vinnie, played by Darcy Pulliam. Her mental balancing of the family books are enough to make one's head spin. Consider: if one purchases a china dog for $30, returns it in exchange for young Clarence's new suit, then the suit cost nothing.

Right? Afterall, the suit was paid for with the dog, so the store couldn't charge for the suit. And since Mrs. Day no longer owns the dog how can the store charge her for it? As she explains to her confounded, stockbroker husband, the suit would not cost him anything.

Clarence Jr. (Eric Beatty) is far less adept at handling his father. Forced to wear hand-me-down suits, young Clarence cannot do anything his father wouldn't do while in his father's clothing. Complications follow when young Clarence meets Mary Skinner (Sally Campbell) and decides he does, in fact, like girls after all. The scenes with Clarence Jr. and Mary are silly by today's standards, but within the context of the late 1880's, they are charming.

What is not charming in this production is Jim Oyster's Father. Clarence Day was a hard-driving, often pigheaded man. But beneath the surface there was always that proverbial heart of gold. He never could deny Vinnie her most outlandish wishes. He wanted his four sons to walk a very straight line, but he loved them, nonetheless.

In the Nickerson production, Oyster did not seem comfortable in the scenes he shared with his sons, especially the youngest ones. The underlying tenderness of the character was missing. Lots of shouting and gruffness were poor substitutes for the required precision and forthrightness of Clarence Day.

The pace of the play slowed during Oyster's scenes. "Life With Father" seemed to have more life to it without Father.

"It's really too bad, because the other elements of the play work well. Hingham's Joan Ferenchak Brancale's Victorian dining room set is pleasingly adorned with the knick-knacks of the era; Craig Sonnenberg's costumes serve the Day family well. Director Nora Hussey presents a good visual image of the Day family, but ran aground with the pacing of the critical scenes with Father.

The supporting cast works hard. Jared Waye's son John is appropriately eager. The question is, however, why the actor was allowed to keep his dark brown hair when the Days are well-known for being a family of redheads. Even auburn tones would have been acceptable.

The two younger sons are played alternately by four young boys, three of whom come from the South Shore. Douglas Murray (Whitney) comes from Braintree; Bernard Zilinskas (Whitney) lives in Scituate; and Justin Morse (Harlan) is a first grader in Norwell. The other Harlan, Jeffrey Andrea, is a second grader in Charlestown.

"Life With Father" continues through June 8, one additional week than previously announced. Performances are Tuesday through Thursday at 8 p.m.; Friday and Saturday at 8:30 p.m.; Sunday matinee at 2 p.m.; and Sunday evening at 7 p.m.

Due to the popularity of the Nickerson Theatre, a specal two-play summer season will be inaugurated in July. Check The Mariner for further details.

ANGLER'S CORNER

by George Doucette

Children younger than 10 years are not very well coordinated, especially in the small motor movements of finger and hands. For kids this age, spinning and spin casting is best for teaching the basics.

The size of the rod and reel is an important consideration since adult sized tackle can be tough to handle with those small hands and slender arms. Consider one of many packaged "mini" systems now available for small children. These sets have been balanced for kids and are inexpensive ($10 to $15) by todays standards of fishing tackle prices.

Fishing from shore is best for openers. It is safer than a boat and you will be able to concentrate more on fishing than keeping the child in the boat. When the childs attention span begins to wander, you can always take a walk or climb a tree with him or her. If possible, this is the time for that first outing as small panfish and bass in fresh water and small sea perch and flounder in saltwater are abundant along the shallow water areas.

Choice of bait is up to you, but remember most any fish will bite a worm in fresh or salt water. Shrimp, minnows, and clams are other good baits and will work as a second choice. The bait tend to attract fish quicker than artificial lures and with children you want to get that first fish before their attention wanders.

Remember size is not the primary concern here. To a child fishing is catching and half the fun is spending a nice sunny day on a jetty or beach or a fresh water lake or pond. Pack a lunch and bring a chair and go spend a nice relaxing day teaching a kid to fish.

PATCHES by Lois Martin

Teachers are very influential people

There are among us hundreds of men and women who are nearing the wrap up of an important project.

It is called the 1984-85 school year and they are teachers.

Excluding parents, maybe aunts, no adults exert more influence or more lasting impact than teachers. It may seem that peers have all the clout, especially with teenagers.

But that doesn't mean teachers leave no mark. It's just harder to get kids to admit it at some ages.

When they're little, in those grades where jump rope and dodge ball are big, they'll come right out and tell the teacher over and over how much they love him and her. They're free with hugs then and are inclined to lavish kisses on the educator, especially the home-room one.

PATCHES

Such display of affection gives way to the adolescent need to exhibit a "so what" attitude. But you and I know they're putting that on. They don't fool us or the teacher. And that's because we adults have never forgotten a teacher worth his or her salt.

I've had wonderful teachers. Some of them even taught for a living. Many of them were instructive in and of themselves, without a piece of chalk in sight.

I mention a few here because I'm aware they're in the throes of the school year and deserve special notice.

Sybil Gordon. I liked Mrs. Gordon even when she gave me a "C" in penmanship. I understood. But I never forgot. I saw her a couple years ago and brought it to her attention as being one of the stinging moments in my public school career. Worse, I know she'd give me the same or worse grade today.

Howard Jellison. I remember Mr. Jellison with a bit of guilt. I never brought to his class what I should have. That is, my attention. He had the misfortune to teach algebra. My academic pursuit was dedicated, as always, to finding things of interest.

That was never a problem for me. But it was also never an equation. Mr. Jellison gave me a detention.

I tried to explain that to my father. He was a reasonable man, a quiet one. That seems to discount the entire theory of geneticism.

I told him, you know, about how everyone was laughing and everything and it just probably happened, you know, that the moment Mr. Jellison peered over those glasses that always slipped to the tip of his nose, you know how they do, well, I just happened to be the one he saw laughing. You know?

My father was more articulate than I had been when he explained what would happen should I get detention again. (That word was transisted amazingly to detente' in a decade or so.)

What I didn't tell my father then but I can tell you now is that whatever algebra lacked in tickling my funny bone, Mr. Jellison didn't. Readily given to mirth, anyway, that weakness was accentuated, my grandfather observed, by the fact that I was going around crazy corner. And he for one, never expected me to complete the turn.

Olive Fortier. If Ellsworth High School had a Dean of Women, it was she. Mrs. Fortier stood resoundingly for all that was proper in behavior. Her classrooms were a modicum of serenity. Giggling, if undertaken, would be punishable by the sternest glance of reprimand. Few would tempt Olive Fortier into stronger disciplinary action.

It's true I was smitten with languages. So I was a relatively dedicated student in Latin and Spanish. It was she who arranged for me to be allowed to go to Quebec with the French students, 'cause they didn't do Rome or Spain for my kind of study.

Jimmy Smith. " . . . the tinkling tabulation of the bells, bells, bells." Mr Smith had an affinity for Edgar Allen Poe. I've never met a man more afflicted by Poe. But Mr. Smith was more greatly afflicted with an appreciation for his most glib students. He taught English and endured us. He had chalk all over his suit, which inspired us to irreverent behavior. His longlife to education is proof that language, like nature, can survive abuse.

I could tell you about our janitor, our principal, who constantly complained about the congestion in the halls, about my peerless college professor who equated marriage with a split infinitive.

Even through my biology teacher, I gained something. I discovered that memorization is not knowledge.

There are those, aren't there, who have brought to one's upbringing in the classroom special assets. Some teachers set themselves apart to a higher level of educators. That's true in any field, unique qualities equal lasting impact.

Richard Bickford was one of those. He was principal and eighth grade teacher. My eighth grade, that pinnacle of elementary schooling, was wonderful. He instilled a personal pride, school spirit, adventure . . . and one big load of learning. Mostly for me, he gave an endorsement for a vital component to continued education and use of skills. That is use of imagination. Let it go, flourish and take of it the freshness of originality that is in all of us. A mind is not simply serviceable, it's exciting.

I was reading about Beethoven and his modus operandi for working. He used, said the author, a tough personal discipline with his freewheeling fantasy.

That was Richard Bickford's vital message. Loved it. And to all those valuable men and women who are conducting tests, marking essays, balancing those attendance books, thank you, for a productive and memorable year. May your summer be an exciting learning experience that leaves you refreshed for the next one.

Town gets tough on mooring violations

Violators of the town's harbor bylaws will be prosecuted. That's the message selectmen want conveyed, starting this boating season.

Two weeks ago, selectmen discussed with Harbormaster Harry Ritter the methods he could utilize to enforce the harbor rules and regulations. At that time, Ritter said he was unsure if he could pursue legal action against the violators.

After talking this week with Ritter and Harbor Study Committee Chairman Charles Fink, Town Counsel Richard Henderson assured him that he could prosecute mooring violators through the criminal court process.

For various reasons, Henderson explained that the criminal proceedings would be more speedy, economical and have more immediate effect on the violator than the civil court process. A substantial fine is also attached to a criminal complaint issued by the court, he added. Ritter and Fink agreed, Henderson told selectmen this week, that the harbormaster would begin immediately to bring criminal complaints against violators who did not respond to Ritter's written request for adherence to the bylaws.

Acording to Henderson, the most frequent violators are those who illegally attach their boats to someone else's moorings and those boatowners who have bought larger-sized boats but are using a mooring assigned a smaller vessel.

The procedure will begin with a letter from Ritter to the alleged violator. That person will have three days to respond, or a criminal complaint will be sought by the harbormaster in Quincy District Court.

Police Officer Brian Noonan, who serves as the department's court prosecutor, will file the town bylaw and complaint form with the court. Together Noonan and Ritter will follow the complaint filed through the court hearing, unless more technical assistance is needed from town counsel, Henderson said.

Selectman Diane Sullivan asked what would happen to people who have not reaffirmed their

At 67, it was time to exercise

By Jane Lane

She hates to talk about herself, and never reads the pages that have been written about her. But Ann Leonard of Elm Street feels if she can motivate one person by her actions, then the misery of being interviewed and photographed is worth it.

This 70 year old athlete is an inspiration to senior citizens throughout the South Shore. But it's not for the glory that Ann runs, walks and exercises. This gentle, slim woman chuckles when she admits, "I don't know what you call it, but it's inside me. I just love to compete . . . and win."

So it's certainly not for fame that Ann decided to enter the world of athletics. It was actually a step-by-step process which began just a few years ago.

After her husband died, a huge void entered Ann's life. And through her oldest daughter Ann's insistence, she decided to attend an exercise class one night in Scituate. It felt good, and from there Ann was hooked.

She was 67 years old. Ann was never what one would call sedentary, but she had not participated in any form of athletics for a long time. She had worked for South Shore Publishing Co. for 12 years, and could never spare the time to exercise.

When she attended Nina Constantinides' class in Scituate, she realized there was something else missing from her active life - physical activity.

After four years of exercise class three times weekly, Ann said others have a difficult time keeping up with her. "It's funny," she said this week. "I really don't think of myself as old. I don't feel that way."

In addition to her exercise regimen, Ann also walks with Nina's walking group Tuesday and Thursday mornings. When she was complaining once about the hilly terrain in Scituate's First Cliff, Nina taunted her, "if you're going to Act young, you're going to Be young."

Although Ann insists she is not a health fanatic, and doesn't like to push anyone into anything, there is one form of exercise she is hooked on - walking. "I've said this over and over. But as long as you can put one foot in front of the other, you've got it made," she explained.

For anyone just starting out, Ann recommends walking at a slower, more leisurely pace up to one mile. The more walks you complete, you can develop a lengthier route and quicker pace. Ann likes to walk a variety of routes, so she doesn't get bored.

"Walking is terrific," she states emphatically. "It's fun and it's something everyone can enjoy. You can smell the flowers as you walk, you can admire the neighbors' landscaping, and all the time you are burning up calories."

Depending on her speed, Ann can walk five miles in an hour and ten minutes. "But that's really pushing it," she admits."But as my walking group has said, 'when Ann gets her second wind, watch out.' That's just that competitiveness inside me."

About three years ago, someone from her Scituate walkers' group showed her a registration form from the Beechwood Community Life Center regarding the Senior Olympics Day.

"When she asked if I wanted to compete in the games, I figured what the heck. The first year I won five medals, the second year I won nine medals, and this past year I took the trophy."

Although she laughs as she talks, anyone can see that Ann is a serious competitor. "The trophy" she took home distinguished her as "The Best Woman Athlete at the 1985 Senior Olympic Games" in Quincy.

The nine events Ann entered this year included the mile walk, the mile run, javelin throw, shotput, softball throw, running long jump, and standing long jump.

If you wonder how a soon-to-be 71 year-old grandmother learned to throw a javelin, Ann offers the following explaination. "I registered for the event, even though I had never thrown a javelin in my life. I noticed an official at the games and asked him how you threw it, and he showed me, right before my competition," she explained.

First week on job for Andrew

If he has any say in the matter, Cohasset is the last place Don Andrew intends to work.

The town's new acting Town Accountant/Executive Secretary says he has spent enough time hopping from job to job. He has the experience now that leads him to believe that after Cohasset, there's only retirement.

He is currently living in Brookline, having worked for the past three and a half years for that large town. There he was employed as Senior Accountant and temporary comptroller.

Although he would like to move to Cohasset or a nearby town, Andrew professes ignorance of this area. As of Monday morning, his first day of work here, "all I know is the Town Hall and the nearest corner," he admitted.

He has no intentions of moving until the first of next year, he added. "Although I live some distance away, the commuting isn't that bad, because I'm traveling against the heavy traffic," he noted.

Andrew accepted the dual position, knowing well it would have to be ratified by town meeting vote. Yet, he is confident it will be approved, and it will be a successful combination for selectmen and the town.

For seven years, Andrew was Town Accountant and Clerk to the Board of Selectmen in Oak Bluffs, Martha's Vineyard. And when he left that job to accept the job in Brookline, there was some discussion to disband the position into separate classifications.

"I really believe this is the best way," he said this week. "There's something about the combination position that complements each other. I think the

Hepatitis report charge

The attorney for a Cohasset doctor is asking for a court judge and not a clerk to rule on whether the doctor failed to report a case of hepatitis in a restaurant worker to the proper health authorities.

Atty. William Rowerdink said a court date has not been established but his client Dr. William Raskin wants a judge to render a decision to expedite disposition of the case.

In addition, he plans to countersue Scituate Health Agent Walter Walsh and the Scituate Board of Health, regardless of the current board of health charge.

The case will be heard in Quincy District Court and not Hingham District Court. Dr. Raskin's medical office is in Norfolk County.

Atty. Rowerdink claims Walsh had no jurisdiction over a Cohasset doctor and also adds Walsh's actions defamed Dr. Raskin's character. The health board voted to seek the complaint after Walsh recommended legal action.

Raskin ordered innoculations for all of the restaurant employees but did not report the case immediately to the Cohasset Board of Health. Atty. Rowerdink said Dr. Raskin took all necesssary precautions and awaited a final testing report before declaring the case of hepatitis.

The incident occurred in late February. No other cases have been reported.

Liquor violations

Selectmen said the George Mealy American Legion Post "has taken care" of a complaint by a Post member that the liquor license was being violated there.

Richard Barrow said despite his protests to the Post Commander and the executive board, the Post continues to serve liquor to non members. According to Barrow, the Post has been "openly operating in violation of the license granted to it as a Veterans' organization."

The Post member said the license stipulates that liquor is to be sold only to members and guests introduced by the members.

"I am aware of the fact that the sale of alcoholic beverages is being made daily and openly to any and all persons who choose to enter the premise who are of lawful age. As there is a potential for serious damage to the town for allowing such violations to continue, I draw your attention to the matter for your consideration," Barrow wrote.

Selectmen Chairman Frank England stated at Monday's meeting, "the matter has been taken care of by the Post."

More filling violations

The town is going after more residents who are allegedly filling in wetlands.

Building Inspector Edward Poskus filed for a criminal complaint last week against Joal Rosano of Sohier Street. He issued a second complaint last Friday, after Rosano refused to remove an accessory building constructed on his side yard, which Poskus contends is within the wetlands.

The Building Inspector, who serves as the town's zoning enforcement officer, also filed for a complaint against Glenn Pratt of Riverview Drive. Poskus argued that Pratt has repeatedly filled wetlands on his property at lot one on Riverview Drive.

Although Pratt was a trustee of Beechwood Trust, the original owner of the land, he is now the sole of the property.

Poskus had sent Pratt letters requiring the removal of an extensive amount of fill within the watershed protection district property. The request was not complied with and town counsel, under the direction of the conservation commission, filed for the criminal complaint to stop the further filling.

Thanks for recycling

The Board of Health of Cohasset and its Recycling Advisor, Mr. Arthur Lehr, wish to thank the townspeople who continue to participate in the recycling portion of the Cedar Street Landfill. A report recently compiled for the Bureau of Solid Wastes indicated what a successful program the Town of Cohasset has with the cooperation of those participants. Last year 51 tons of glass, 259 tons of newspaper, 50 tons of metals and less than 1 ton of aluminum was recycled through your efforts.

We encourage you to continue your energies to assist in this program and hope that other citizens will join in sharing your concerns for preservation of the Cedar Street Landfill.

For all the newcomers in town, please take the time to stop at our Recycling Center at the entrance of the landfill. The monitors on duty will welcome your questions and take the time to show you how you too can participate. Our goal is to increase the tonnage by an additional 25% as was accomplished last year.

With the season for yard work fast approaching, don't forget the compost pile that is available. In addition, your cooperation in using the brush pile rather than disposing of bush and tree clippings in the landfill is most appreciated. Keep up the good work!

Officer Rhodes hospitalized

Police Officer John Rhodes III was hospitalized early Saturday morning after he suffered a probable heart attack at his home.

According to Chief Joseph Kealey, no physician has reported back to the department stating that Officer Rhodes suffered a coronary attack, although that is likely what occurred. Cohasset EMT's responded to the Bayberry Lane home early Saturday morning and transported the off-duty officer to South Shore Hospital.

Rhodes, 39, was in fair condition Wednesday in the hospital's coronary care unit. He is a 19-year veteran of the Cohasset Police Department.

According to Chief Kealey, this is the first time in his memory that a Cohasset police officer experienced a heart attack. A diagnosis of a heart attack has not been forwarded yet to the police department, according to Chief Kealey.

All police and fire department personnel function under the Heart and Lung Act, according to the chief, and are subjected to a rigorous physical to determine that the employee is not suffering from any form of coronary or lung ailment.

Because there has been no previous experience, Chief Kealey is unsure what procedures must be carried out if Officer Rhodes decides to continue or retire from duty. The chief said it is likely Officer Rhodes will have to be medically examined before any decision is approved.

Lower quorum set for June 17

The attorney general's office has approved the town meeting quorum reduction in time for the June 17 Special Town Meeting.

That means that 100 voters, rather than the previous 200, will be necessary to begin town meeting business.

Voters at the Annual Town Meeting overwhelmingly approved the lower quorum figure which had been studied and recommended by the town government structure committee.

Watch out for this athlete's 'second wind'

Ann Leonard

"You have to understand, these games aren't THE Olympics. They're fun, and that's the idea, to have fun, meet people and exercise," Ann said.

A three-year veteran of the games, Ann said she still enjoys them, although the competition is becoming a bit stiff. "I noticed this year that a lot more people were practicing at the Beechwood center, with their eye on me as their competition," Ann said, again with a hearty giggle. Although she loves athletics, it is, after all, just another activity that shouldn't be taken too seriously.

"I used to be a shoo-in, now I am competing against a lot more people," she good-naturedly complains. Still, one of her favorite feelings in the world is to be running around the race track, with her small grandchildren holding signs saying, "Grammy's the best!"

"They kid me, but they back me up," she added.

She loves feeling as well as she does. Ann watches her diet, and avoids a lot of red meat. She eats vegetables and fruits frequently and tries to drink a lot of water every day.

And although she loves to walk, she will never go out in inclement weather. "I'm not that crazy," she says. "If I think the weather is going to be bad, I will not go out. No way."

She also finds time in her life for a lot more than exercise. She loves to sculpture lampshades, decorate and do stenciling. She has done a lot of work in the interior of her antique home on Elm Street, as well her daughters' homes.

If there is one piece of advice she could impart to her peers, it would be to walk, walk, and walk. "Walking is one of the best forms of exercise. Medical doctors are now saying that, but I knew it the first time I walked. It's great for the cardiovascular system and it's helped to bring my high blood pressure under control," she adds.

Ann is living proof that walking is an easy, inexpensive, and productive way to exercise. She and her daughters recently participated in the 20-mile walk for hunger in Boston. As she exited from the car after the drive home, she noticed her daughter, in her early thirties, scrunched up and unable to walk. "I can't get up," she quotes her daughter as saying, and she was literally in a ball as she got out from the car. Ann laughs, "I couldn't believe my eyes. I didn't feel tired at all."

Complaints on watershed fill

By Karen Cubie

The Cohasset Conservation Commission heard the complaints of Lily Pond residents concerned with the placement of fill by Theodore Ingmanson on his 441 King Street property at their meeting Tuesday, June 4.

Ingmanson was ordered by Cohasset Building Inspector Edward Poskus on May 7 to file a notice of intent stating exactly how much he intends to fill, and what the impact of that fill will be on the surrounding wetlands. The commission had not yet received this notice.

Ingmanson's neighbors are afraid that the placement of the fill will cause the road leading to their homes to flood.

"I think that in this case the Conservation Commission should go ahead with civil action (against Ingmanson)," Christopher Duggan, a Lily Pond resident, told the commission.

"He is a builder. He did have the property on the market, but it didn't sell," said Mrs. Jean Gormley, another Lily Pond resident, about Ingmanson. "I don't think he's doing it for love of the property, but to fix it up so that he can move on.

"I've been there for forty odd years," she continued. "I don't want to hurt anyone, but I don't want to get washed overboard."

Commission members felt that they needed more time to investigate the situation before they could take any decisive action.

"The important thing to remember is that the burden of proof is on the applicant, not on the commission," said commission member Bob Mackey. "He must submit sufficient evidence to prove that he is not [filling wetlands]. We are not prepared to offer an opinion at this point. It would not be fair to the applicant. We're still in a fact finding mode."

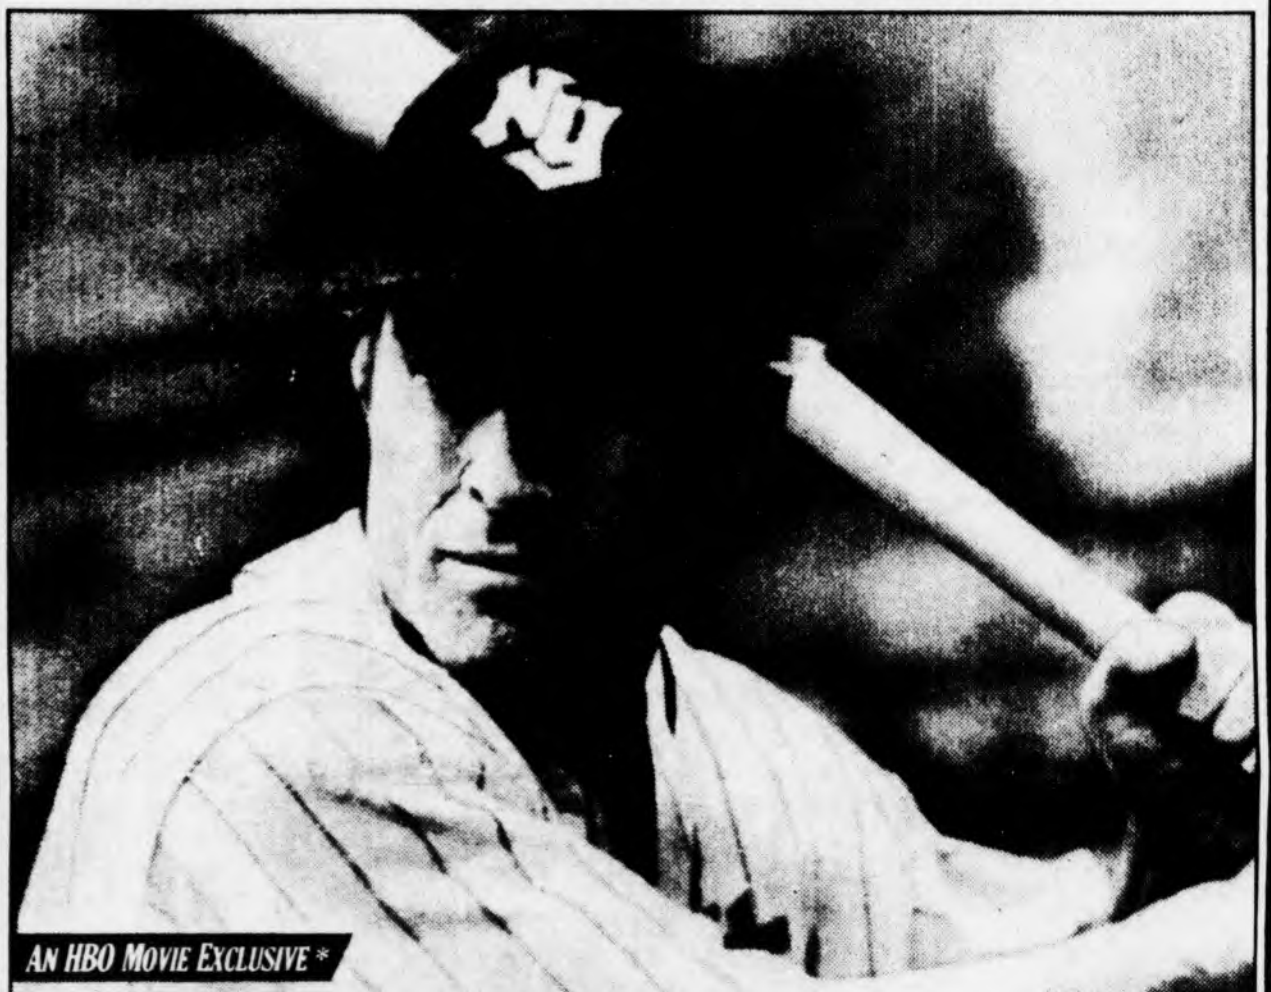
"We don't know if it is wetlands but if it is within one-hundred feet of wetlands, he still has to file," added Commission Chairman Merle Brown.

The commission decided to send an enforcement order to Ingmanson in hopes that it would force him to submit the notice of intent.

"We have to go with what we think is right," Brown replied to a resident's statement that action was not being taken fast enough. "If we have received nothing by June 18, then a Court Order will be sent. A Court Order says that he has to remove or replace anything in order to restore the wetlands to its natural state."

The commission decided that David and Kathleen Galvin of Riverview Drive must file a short form order of intent before continuing to grade-off their backyard, and place topsoil on it. The yard contains 50 feet of wetlands.

"If the intent is only to put topsoil in it it won't be detrimental," said commission member Bob Mackey.



"They need to know they can't go into the river," added Chairman Brown. "The only way we have control [over the situation] is if we have them file a

ASSAULT

An action for the intentional tort of "assault" was first upheld in 1348 in the now famous case of "I. Des and Wife." The defendant had knocked at the door of a closed tavern. When he discovered that it was locked, he took a couple of wacks at the door with an axe. The tavern owner's wife leaned out of a window and told him to stop. The defendant then took a swing at her, but missed. The issue was whether her husband had a cause for action on her behalf against the defendant although, in fact, no harm befell his wife. The court found that the defendant had made an assault upon her person. The fact that she had not been harmed was irrelevant and damages were recovered.

In todays complicated society, it is important that you know and understand your legal rights. After all, they exist to protect you. If you have legal questions, need advice or representation, don't hesitate to consult with an attorney. Quite often this is the most important action you can take when faced with a problem. LAW OFFICES OF RICHARD PRICE, 760 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy., Rt. 3A, Cohasset, 383-9882. I am available daily by appt.

Selectmen comment on June 17 warrant

The personnel committee will attempt next week to explain the need and justify the expense of a proposed reclassification study and evaluation system for the town's non union employees.

There is dissension among selectmen whether to recommend the proposal at the June 17 Special Town Meeting. Although Selectman Cliff Mitman noted the selectmen "just about forced" this proposal upon the personnel committee, Selectmen Frank England and Diane Sullivan said they do not support the $25,000 price attached to the personnel study.

All board members agreed there is a need to revamp the employee classification system, and praised the addition of an evaluation training for all department heads. But Sullivan complained that "although we've been committee'd-out, I feel a study committee in town could review this.

"I personally feel that amount (estimated $25,000) for 47 employees is excessive and I would like other avenues explored before this."

Selectman Chairman Frank England said he would like the personnel committee to explain the proposal and the cost estimates, before he made any recommendation to town meeting. "I talked with Jack (John Mullett, chairman of the personnel committee) and I don't feel comfortable with the information we have here... to make a recommendation to town meeting. I agree it's a lot of money and I don't feel I have the proper information to justify this expense."

England then suggested that other similar-sized communities be surveyed and review their salary ranges. These communities would also be reviewed according to their valuation system and classification methods. According to England, Duxbury has completed a thorough reclassification study through an in-town committee, which is used as a model by the state.

Selectman Mary Jane McArthur said she supported the personnel committee proposal because it contained an evaluation tool and training system for department heads. She also opposed an in-town committee studying the classification system and evaluation methods because of a probable lack of objectivity.

"I'm not comfortable with an in-town committee doing this," she said. "We need a real objective look. In a small town, (a committee) is bound to get some pressure."

Selectman Mitman was adamant that some evaluation system be put into effect. Reviewing and evaluating specific jobs, one-by-one, is not effective "and we're not really treating our employees fairly if we don't do something like this, in the absence of bargaining," he added.

The board then decided that the personnel committee should come next week to discuss the proposal in depth with selectmen.

The board also reviewed the remaining articles in the June 17 Special Town Meeting warrant.

The selectmen will recommend articles 8-13 in the Special Town Meeting warrant. They voted Monday night not to recommend a proposed $20,000 appropriation for renovations to Milliken Field. The advisory committee had also voted not to recommend this article.

Selectmen voted to recommend article 15, but will wait until next week's meeting with the personnel committee to decide on article 16. That warrant article deals with vacation schedules for town employees.

The board will support articles 17-21, but has postponed a decision on article 21 regarding the proposed location of a Highway Dept. salt shed.

A decision was postponed on article 22, which requests a new fire hydrant on Elm Court, and selectmen voted to support articles 23,25,26, and 27. Article 24, to accept a police union contract, will be postponed because an agreement has not been settled.

Article 29 was not voted this week by selectmen. The planning board was scheduled to hold a public hearing Wednesday night on the fence restriction article. The board voted to recommend article 30, 34 and 35. They reserved any decision on article 33 until they talk with the insurance committee members.

You've built equity in your home...

The equity in your home (the difference between the amount you owe on your first mortgage and what your home is really worth) is an asset often overlooked.

You worked for your home...now let your home work for you. Our loan officers will be pleased to talk with you about taking advantage of this ideal money source.

A loan on this equity can pay the tuition for your children's education, buy or build a recreational home, allow you to take advantage of investment opportunities, and even help you assume an existing mortgage on a new home. We can assist with any worthwhile financial need.

You have built equity in your home — why not use it???

notice of intent."

A letter from Joal Rosano of Sohier St. concerning the placement of fill in his backyard was read to the commission by Chairman Brown. Rosano claimed that he did not fill the area in question; rather, he claimed that he used "top-dressing."

"The brook was not constricted in any manner," he wrote in his letter. "We left the area the same as when we began."

"It destroyed the bank, and the vegetation," stated commission member Pat Buckley.

Rosano also built a tool shed over the filled area. He was ordered to remove it by the Building Inspector, but he has neglected to do this.

The commission decided to send Rosano a Court Order and let the Town Council handle the problem.

The commission decided to send a cease and desist order to William Last, a builder constructing a house off of Forrest Ave., who has neglected to clear his building plans with them. They intend to halt his construction until he appears before them.

A letter from John F. Roy, an attorney representing Mr. and Mrs. Donald J. O'Neill, Mr. and Mrs. John P. Guiggio, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel G. Prisble, and Dr. and Mrs. Bernard A. O'Brien expressing concern over construction taking place at 51 Jerusalem Rd. was read to the commission. All of Mr. Roy's clients are abutters, or abutters to direct abutters, of the property.

Roy questioned why the Cohasset Conservation Commission still had not scheduled a public hearing in order to "give interested townspeople a chance to find out what is going on with respect to the subject property."

"The key to good government is consistency," he wrote. "People lose faith in town government if applicable laws are properly applied in one instance and ignored in the next."

The commission felt that the construction was out of their jurisdiction because it was taking place only in the upper stories of the building. The commission was more concerned that trees in the back yard were being cut down.

"We don't have jurisdiction over the house," said Chairman Brown, "but we do over the back yard."

☐Edward Farr Booth, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Booth of Cohasset was a May, 1985, graduate of Macalester College in Saint Paul, Minnesota. He received a Bachelor's Degree with a major in history.

Macalester College is a small, selective undergraduate liberal arts college of 1,700 students, affiliated with the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

☐Susan E. Murphy, of Cohasset, was among 1,774 degree candidates honored at the University of New Hampshire spring commencement ceremonies.

She is the daughter of John and Peggy Murphy, of Cohasset, and is a candidate for a bachelor's degree in psychology.

Arthur Schlesinger, Jr., historian and political advisor, spoke at the ceremonies May 25.

☐At Commencement exercises May 19, 227 seniors graduated from Xaverian Brothers High School in Westwood.

Among the local graduates were: Robert V. Cullinane, II, of 460 Jerusalem Road; Anthony S. Dellorfano, 82 Jerusalem Road; Theodore M. Jones of 164 Sohier Street, and Paul J. O'Leary of 19 Arrowwood Street.

☐ I had a nice chat with John Roy recently, and he sure had tons of news to fill me in on! John and Dolores have a large home on Old Coach Road and it will be full again for a little while . . . their son, John, recently earned a MBA from Georgetown University and they will have him home for a short time. Until July 1 that is, he then heads for the big apple, where he will work at the Bank of New York, right in New York City. Daughter Madeline is also home to roost, after spending the last semester in Lancaster, England. She took special education courses while she was there, and also managed to travel extensively while she had the chance! Back to reality for Madeline, we bet Cohasset looks good to her! And, lucky for the 4-6 yr olds, as she will head their age group for the recreation department this summer.

☐ While on the subject of families, Tom and Rita Burke had a memorable reunion the weekend of April 21 in Chicago at the christening of Anna Elizabeth, the first born of Christopher and Marguerite Burke. Joanne, CHS 1966 grad and an interior designer, came in from Santa Monica, California. Thomas, father of Allison (7) and Sharon (5), came from his home in Winston Salem, North Carolina. Trish (CHS 1968 grad) was there in spirit. Maradele (CHS 1970) and her husband Dr. James M. Colville traveled from their home in Palo Alto California (Mae, an RN, is presently working on a degree in Hospital Administration). John, who has recently moved to Austin, Texas, came from New York City where he was in sales promotion Andrea, the aspiring sister and Junior at Harvard, was also present for the fun and games. That's what one would call a large family reunion!

☐ Had a good report on Blanche Buckely . . . the stiches are out (of an 18-inch incision) and she is now able to walk three times a day. She still has a four-week stint left in Mass. General, but that is basically for antibiotics and therapy. Other than that, she feels really well (she even had to spend her birthday in MGH, and all of the grandchildren made a surprise appearance - best medicine for anyone, right!). She would love to get some Cohasset tidbits, cards, etc. . . . her address is Blanche Buckley, Phillips House 506, Mass. General Hospital, 55 Fruit Street, Boston, MA 02114.

☐ Happy "Jack Benny" birthday to Mimi. . . .

☐ Another Arbor Day was celebrated at the Osgood School last week, and it was a real tribute to the students celebration of summer. Attendance was superb!

☐ A long standing member of the community, Roy Studley, passed away last week. Though he made his home in Gloucester with his wife, he was loved in Cohasset and is sure to be missed.

☐ This week is the final week for Seniors to partake in class events, i.e. graduation and awards night. Then, out in "the Cruel world" for all

CREDIT CARD DOLLARS

As any would-be traveler knows, the strength of the American dollars as opposed to European currencies has proven to be a boon to travelers abroad. While virtually all travelers are aware of the exchange rate during an overseas trip, many wonder at the exchange rate applied when a credit card is used. Virtually all credit-card companies convert foreign charges into dollars. It is done not at the rate in effect when the purchase is made but at the rate on the day that the bank or "processing office" receives the chit. The time between purchase and conversion is rarely more than two or three days. This lag time can often actually work to the traveler's advantage.

It used to be fun to plan one's trip, but travel has become a very complicated business today. It is much safer and easier to call on a qualified travel consultant. Here at COLPITTS TRAVEL CENTER, we recognize that it is you, the client, that comes first. We believe that the traveler wishes to go in safety, comfort and convenience. Credit-card companies use a dollar conversion rate that is at least as favorable as an interbank rate.

Selectmen briefs . . .

Independence appraisal

Selectmen decided Monday night to ask two local realtors to appraise the value of the Independence Museum building on Elm Street.

Selectmen would like to have the vacant town-owned building sold, but they do not know its worth, nor the type of buyer who would be interested in the property.

Selectman Mary Jane McArthur said limits should be put on the sale of the building, restricting its use to certain types of businesses. Because it is located in the business district, it is a convenient piece of real estate, but it is located so close to the street, there is virtually no parking nor sidewalk for access to the property.

Town Counsel Richard Henderson said the board has every right to attach restrictions to the sale of the building, but an opinion of value should be obtained first.

The antique building was utilized for many years as the Independence Gown Museum.

Selectmen decided to ask Petersen Realtors, located nextdoor to the Independence building, and Dean and Hamilton, another neighbor, to complete an appraisal. Selectman Frank England said the realtors may also be able to suggest potential uses of the building.

Fire search committee

Selectmen made final changes to the charge and duties of the Fire Chief Search Committee. They will meet next week with members of the newly-formed committee to review the final proposal.

Selectmen were concerned with the way in which a salary range would be developed by the committee. Executive Secretary Don Andrew said the Massachusetts Municipal Association has probably completed such a survey within the past year, and the figures could be updated. Selectmen would like to know what comparably-sized towns are paying their fire department chiefs.

Selectman Cliff Mitman said Police Chief Joseph Kealey had a list of five or six communities, and the salaries paid to the fire and police chiefs. He suggested that list be given to the committee for its information by next week's meeting.

The selectmen also agreed the committee shall assess the job candidate's qualifications, but will not determine those qualifications for the position.

Selectmen Chairman Frank England publically thanked Selectman Diane Sullivan for her work the past week in compiling a draft of the committee's charge.

In other action this week, selectman chose Peter Laugelle as the Recreation Commission's liason to the Harbor Study Committee. He will replace Jim Gallagher who resigned from the commission. Selectman Frank England refrained from voting because his daughter, Terry Duggan, was also nominated for the liason position. Selectmen used a lottery system to make the appointment.

Selectmen also decided to send all liquor license holders a copy of the newly-enacted state liquor laws. Selectman Mary Jane McArthur suggested that a copy of the official law be sent to the licensees from the local licensing authority.

Dreamwold has something for both the foolishly romantic and thoroughly practical natures in all of us.

When it comes to choosing a place to live, the romantic side looks for big old Victorian porches with Doric columns.

The practical side looks for leaky pipes.

The romantic looks for history, hardwood floors and widow's walks.

The practical side looks for a dry basement and a new roof.

And so it goes... two natures eternally at odds.

Until Dreamwold.

Dreamwold is a stunning collection of 19th century styled condominiums set on a Victorian era estate in Scituate.

Editorials

A grand time

Every one remembers their high school graduation. Even more than college commencement, it evokes sweet memories of our longtime friendships, trusted teachers and a heartwrenching departure from our protected world of adolescence.

No one really wanted to think of what would be confronting them in the "real world" ahead, be it another session of academia or employment. High school graduation was joyful occasion, a time to share with acquaintances that through the years blossomed into warm friendships.

The Cohasset High School graduation is a beautiful, fitting ceremony. Under the expanse of the Music Circus tent, it is an intimate occasion among friends, neighbors, and proud relatives.

And proud we should all be of our graduates, whether they are traveling next fall to ivy towers or an office. They made the journey in their own way, decided for themselves the path they would follow in their future.

This is no easy judgement for an 18 year-old. With help and guidance from parents, teachers, and friends, they must decide, as we all must, what direction their lives will take.

It is the individual who ultimately decides his own fate. A mammoth decision to rest upon such inexperienced shoulders. It is but a beginning step in a long road of decisions and solutions to be resolved by a young adult.

Growing and maturing is complex, painstaking, and sometimes unattainable. And the companionships we created in high school help us cope in later years. Those four years of development lend so much to the budding wisdom of the future.

To all our children who will be stepping from their past this Sunday, we offer our congratulations. May your past four years not be forgotten; it is a solid ground from which you will experience the future.

We wish you the best of times to come. May you continue to strive, remembering always that family and friends were there to guide you in your quest. We'll be with you in your thoughts and memories.

Thanks from Rec.Dept

Many thanks should go to the officers and men of the Cohasset Fire Department for their work retrieving flood lights from a pole at Lily Pond with the 100-foot ladder truck. Specifically, thanks should go to Chief Dooley, Capt. Trask, Hap Pompeo, Billy Protulis (who went on the ladder), Lennie Davis, and Matthew Marr. The lights which have not been in use for years, will be re-located to the Beechwood play lot in the near future. The officers and men of the Cohasset Fire Department, both as a group and individually, have demonstrated continued help and support for the recreation programs and services of our community. Our sincere gratitude is extended to each of them.

Graduation is an emotional time

By Claire McDonough

"Remember," I said to the Dragon, "how I always said I couldn't wait for our kids to grow up? How I always said, 'An Empty Nest Is a Happy Nest?" How I always settled a discussion on when life begins by saying, 'When the kids leave home. That's when life begins?' "

The Dragon nodded.

"Then," I asked, reaching for his hand, "why am I crying?"

"For several reasons," he replied. "First of all, you cry at supermarket openings. You cry when Lassie jumps over the fence and runs up to Timmie. You can watch a Mickey Mouse cartoon and cry at the happy ending.

"Second, these are happy tears. Breida is graduating with honors. She's the class president. When she gave her speech, her classmates gave her a standing ovation. You're entitled.

"Third, Breida has been a terrific kid from the day she was born. Never gave us a minute's grief.

"Except," he said thoughtfully, "when she was three months old and she spit up all over my new suit."

"The two years she was sick were pretty hairy," I told him. "Until we found out she had a milk allergy."

"I wasn't worried a bit," he lied stoutly. "And anyway, that doesn't have anything to do with why you're crying now.

"Another reason is that you really enjoy having the kid around. Oh sure, you've begged all the neighbors not to tell the health agent about her room, but you don't have to go in there too often, do you?"

I shook my head. "I think the last time was in 1974. I was looking for coffee cups.

"But she's not leaving now, anyway. Just because she's graduating from high school doesn't mean we take her to the Norwell town line and dump her on the other side."

"No," he admitted, "But we won't keep her forever, and this is a milestone in her growing up and away from us.

"She'll be working; later she'll be going to college; someday she'll be getting married, having children of her own. Who knows? Her job or her husband's job may take her to another part of the world.

"Remember, our children are only loaned to us. We bring them up so we can let them go. After today, things can never be completely the same."

"You had to say that, didn't you?" I hissed. "What do you care if my mascara is running down my cheeks? Am I a mess?"

"You look sort of interesting," he replied loyally. "Like a raccoon."

The recessional began, and the graduates, Brieda at their head, started slowly down the aisle.

I stepped out of my seat to snap a picture, but I couldn't find the little glass thing you aim.

"You're holding the camera upside down," the Dragon told me in a stage whisper, and several people laughed.

"I know that," I replied icily. "I was trying for an artistic effect."

I pushed the button and nothing happened. I had used all the film during the processional.

"Now I have a good reason to cry," I muttered.

The Dragon shook his head.

"The real reason you're crying," he said pedantically, "is because you're a woman, and female hormones cause you to react to any emotional situation by crying. In this case, the overriding emotion happens to be loving pride.

"You look at that kid who has spent the past four years in high school doing everything she should do, studying hard, working summers, being involved in student government, V.I.C.A., sports, having a million great friends, succeeding at everything she's tried, attending C.C.D., working for political candidates, doing things she believes in, and you're so full of love and pride that it just has to overflow from your eyes. It's a female thing."

I sniffled and nodded meekly.

"I guess you're right. Can I borrow your handkerchief."

He waited a minute before he answered.

"I'm sorry," he told me. "It's too wet."

Only choice to abstain from drinking

To the Editor:

A car going 45 MPH jumps the median and crashes head-on into oncoming traffic. He, a drunk driver returning from a "happy hour," the victim, my son, returning home from work. Two weeks in a coma and months of hospitalization, he, at 26, is well enough to pick up the threads and continue on, thank God.

What a costly bill for society! Similar stories are reported daily across the nation with heartbreak and grief accompanying them all. "An accident," you say. No, this was no accident. Whether one collides with another car or wraps oneself around a tree, if the operator is driving drunk, that is no accident.

Every town, every high school locally is asking the question of what can we do to reduce or eliminate these senseless deaths and maimings? After all is said and done. it seems to me the only sure answer is that of abstinence. Do not drink. Period. The person who never takes a drink will never become an alcoholic!

Please, adults, consider wisely this option. Life can be beautiful without alcohol. And you will be setting a new course for society and the future.

Fair sparks love of books

To entice them to read.

That's the phrase Deer Hill librarian Marge Murphy has coined as the basis of this year's Media Fair.

It's obvious that Murphy is in love with reading and the children with whom she is sharing that feeling. But she knows children are easily bored, with reading, with book reports, with school.

In an unending attempt to make reading and learning fun, Murphy initiated the Media Fair at the Deer Hill School. Here, fourth, fifth, and sixth graders are creating visual responses to books they have read throughout the year. These responses are to be passed on and shared with others, much like the earlier days of oral history.

The library within the Deer Hill School is similar to the interior of an art room. Where shelves have long held volumes of books, colorful posters, masks, puppets, and sculptures now stand alongside. It's a room filled with imagination and creativity.

It's Murphy's belief that all children should have fun learning, and reading is the most fundamental learning tool. What she intended for her young students is to develop that love of reading in non traditional, lighthearted, caring ways.

The response to her objective is overwhelming, as parents can see this week. A video tape of oral book reports is an attempt to pass on, in an entertaining fashion, a student's interpretation of a book.

These tapes, Murphy explains, will be shown throughout the summer on cable channel 3. Any interested student may tune in during the summer and find out what books might be enjoyable for some leisurely reading.

This week, Murphy was talking with students from the Joseph Osgood School, showing them what their older friends had accomplished during the past year. She talks with warmth and understanding, as she tells them of the exciting adventures, voyages, and relationships books have provided for these students. Her young audience listens intently as their eyes gaze through the busy room.

Some of the Deer Hill students created magazines, detailing current events of particular interest. Posters in rainbow colors detailed favorite books from the past year. And some fifth graders wrote about famous heroes in news fashion, and then video-taped bulletins about these lengendary newsmakers.

Media covers a broad range of subjects, and the Deer Hill students took advantage of that variety. Not only did they review books, they also designed original creations. One class devised new cereal boxes, the most popular form of reading for early risers.

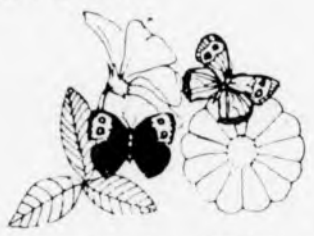
The children covered empty cereal boxes and made new designs with new slogans and original reading material on the back and sides. Games created by the designer were included on the back of each fictional product.

Students who had recently visited the Museum of Fine Arts, created their own sculptures depicting books they had read. Interpretation of the same stories were as wide and as varied as the creators themselves, Murphy says.

Some students chose a cartoon to depict the most important scenes of certain books, others chose posters, or diaramas.

"The students worked all year on these projects," Murphy explains. "They did a wonderful job and deserve a lot of cerdit for their hard work. I hope their parents get to see their work."

Parents are invited to inspect the library until Friday, when the fair concludes. Until that time, Murphy has invited visitors from the Osgood School to view the exhibit.



"It gives them a chance to see this school, and the work their older friends have done," she says. "I'm real excited about the fair, and very proud of these kids. I think the work they have done has sparked a real interest in reading, and hopefully that will continue forever.

"It entices them to read."

If you fall into one of these three categories—mortgage payer, 65 years or older, taxpayer—it might behoove you to take note of some of the things happening in the Massachusetts House of Representatives.

If you make monthly mortgage payments on your home, you will be interested in what took place in the Massachusetts House of Representatives on Thursday, May 16, 1985.

On that day, Republicans offered an amendment to the state budget that would have allowed each Massachusetts mortgage holder to deduct one half of their mortgage interest paid (up to a maximum of $3,000) on their state income tax. A simple proposal with simple guidelines; the home had to be the principal place of residence and that residence could not contain more than six residential units. This amendment would also have increased the existing renters deduction to the $3,000 figure. Overall, it would have saved the taxpayers approximately $48 million annually.

Unbelievably, this proposal was defeated by a 65 to 84 vote by House members.

If you are a person 65 years or older, you will be interested in another Republican amendment that was debated Wednesday, May 15, 1985.

On that day, we offered an amendment to the state budget that would have allowed seniors (65 or older) with unearned income total exemptions up to certain levels of this income. After all, as the worst state in the country in which to retire (as reported by a leading U.S. magazine), the state should begin to provide relief from this 10 percent tax. This amendment also included a provision for seniors who invest in banks chartered in Massachusetts (tax of 5 percent as opposed to 10 percent for any out-of-state bank interest).

In dollars, a single senior would have a total exemption on unearned income of $3,300 the first year, $6,600 the second year, $9,900 the third year and thereafter. A senior couple would have a $3,600 exemption the first year, $7,380 the second year, $11,070 the third year and thereafter. The tax savings would equal approximately $25,6 million per year.

Again, unbelievably, this proposal was defeated by a 66 to 71 vote.

And finally, if you are a taxpayer, you might be interested in a vote again on Wednesday, May 15, 1985.

We offered another amendment that would have finally repealed the Dukakis "temporary" surtax, which was enacted in 1975 as a one-time tax and is still with us 10 years later, over a four year period.

The 7 1/2 percent surtax is added to normal tax rates of 5 percent (effectively equal to 5.35 percent) and 10 percent for unearned (effectively equal to 10.175 percent) income. The repeal would generate approximately $58 million per year in tax savings.

And yes, this proposal was also defeated by a vote of 61 to 89.

The total tax savings of these three proposals for the first year would amount to approximately $131.6 million. I voted for all of these amendments.

Parfait walks away with double defeat

By Melissa Barcomb

Although Cohasset's Strawberry Parfait softball game displayed some aggressive outfield play, Hingham's Building #19 were better equipped Sunday and Hingham escaped with a 2-1 win.

Bill Protulis did particularly well on his outfield performance.

With a score of 1-1, sixth inning, David Patrolia hit a triple but the next batter was called out at first base and the seventh inning began with a score of 1-1.

At the top of the seventh, Hingham brought in another run and game one ended with a score of 2-1, Hingham.

Defense was missing in game two as the Parfait lost 11-1.

By the second inning, the score was 3-0, Hingham and Building #19 produced four more runs in the third inning.

Even though Joe Pomerico, Hans Bauer and Joe Dooley had some solid hits, only one run came in, bringing the score to 7-1.

In the top of the seventh inning, Hingham loaded the bases and several hits brought in four more runs.

Hingham's outfield play was quite impressive and the Parfait couldn't get by with any more scoring.

The Strawberry Parfait now has a record of 4 wins and 6 losses.

Next week's game will be held in Beechwood against the Ocean Kai.

Summer lineup announced by Music Circus

By Judy Foley

The key word for the 1985 35th anniversary lineup at the South Shore Music Circus is diversity. If the current entertainment doesn't suit your taste . . . just wait a day.

Producer Ron Rawson last week announced a spectacular '85 listing featuring such names as Wayne Newton (July 7), Bill Cosby (Aug. 23 and 24), Tom Jones (July 11, 12 and 13) and Steve Lawrence and Eydie Gorme (Aug. 27-30).

The schedule of stars includes something down memory lane for everyone. If it's the great music of the forties you're looking for, watch out for Pattie Page and Frankie Laine (Aug. 17), or Vic Damone, Artie Shaw in person with his Orchestra and Rosemary Clooney (Sept. 4 and 7).

If you yearn for a bit of the fifties, the Music Circus will host Sha Na Na (July 23), Paul Anka (July 25), "The Golden Boys of Bandstand" with Frankie Avalon, Fabian and Bobby Rydell (July 30), the Everly Brothers (Aug. 3), Bobby Vinton (Aug. 7), Connie Francis (Aug. 16), and Frankie Valli and the Four Seasons (Aug. 20).

And if you're getting old enough to feel nostalgic about the 60's and 70's, you might want to take in an evening with Smokey Robinson (July 3), the Happy Together Tour with the Turtles, Grass Roots, the Buckinghams and Gary Lewis and the Playboys (July 10), Gladys Knight & the Pips (July 14), or the Temptations and the Four Tops (July 21).

Need something "hot," you say? How about the Oak Ridge Boys (June 29), the Statler Brothers with Helen Cornelius (June 30), Laura Branigan (July 18 and 19), Gordon Lightfoot (Aug. 9), Kool and the Gang (Aug. 25) and Spyro Gyra (Sept. 3).

For those who want a night out to simply enjoy an evening with performers who are never out-dated, the Music Circus has it: Sergio Franci with Freddie Roman (July 5 and 6), Sandler & Young (July 9), Billy Crystal and Natalie Cole (July 17), trumpeter Wynton Marsalis (July 20), Eddy Arnold & Florence Henderson (July 26 and 27), Dionne Warwick with Ramsey Lewis (July 28), Roger Whittaker (July 31), Jim Nabors & Kay Starr (Aug. 1 and 2), Ray Charles (Aug. 4), Victor Borge (Aug. 19), the Clancy Brothers with Northeast Winds (Aug. 21), and Helen Reddy and the Smothers Brothers (Sept. 1).

Comedy fanatics can get their fill with such names as Milton Berle "and special added distraction Henny Youngman" (Aug 11), Dom DeLuise and Phyllis Diller (Aug. 13-15), and a "Night of 1,000 Laughs" with Norm Crosby, Allen & Rossi, Rip Taylor and Bobby Kelton (Aug. 26).

And country music will fill the tent with the likes of the Charlie Daniels Band presented by Skoal (July 15 and 16), Loretta Lynn (July 22), Don Williams and the Judds (Aug. 8), Johnny Cash (Aug. 10) and Tammy Wynette with Boxcar Willie (Aug 12).

Producer Ron Rawson announced the season's line-up during an unusual press luncheon at the luxurious new Lafayette Hotel in Boston last week to kick-off the 35th anniversary season of the Music Circus.

"For our 35th anniversary we've put together a schedule that I think is really special. Almost half our stars are brand new to the Music Circus and the rest are favorites our audiences have asked us to invite back." Making their debut appearances on the South Shore this year are Wayne Newton, Billy Crystal, Ray Charles and Milton Berle.

Children's Theatre

The Music Circus Children's Theatre schedule returns for 1985 with seven productions by Kaleidoscope Theatre of Providence: "Aladdin," July 11; "Snow White," July 18; "Hansel & Gretel," July 25; "Little Red Riding Hood," Aug. 1; "Cinderella," Aug. 8; "The Emperor's New Clothes," Aug. 15, and "Alice in Wonderland," Aug. 22. Performances are Thursdays at 10:30 a.m.

The Music Circus box office opened May 25. Telephone charge orders will also be accepted. Patrons can call either the Music Circus at 383-1400 or Teletron at 720-3434. Tickets are also available at all Ticketron locations. A limited number of seat locations are available on a subscription basis; people interested in the theatre's Inner Circle Club can call 383-9850 for an application blank. Discounts for groups of 25 or more are also available.

So. Shore Arts Festival June 28-30

Many hours of volunteer time are being put into creating the South Shore Art Center's 30th anniversary of its summer festival.

The South Shore Art Festival, long a tradition on the Cohasset Common, comes together the last weekend of June only after many hours of hard work by many volunteers on the South Shore. The Center, 103 Ripley Road in Cohasset, has planned a diverse agenda of activities from a jazz concert to juried exhibits to artist demonstrations to children's events the weekend of June 28-30 on the Cohasset Common and the Town Hall.

Chairpersons for the art exhibits are: Becky Haletky, Marie Macklin and Rosemary Cundari, juried shows; Claffy Williams, jurors luncheon; Helen Gallop, members' show, and Barbara Gurnis and Ron Goodwin, invitational sculpture show. Susan Kilmartin and Carol Matzell of the Patriot Ledger are working on the Patriot Ledger Art Awards.

Suzan Kilillea and Barbara Cross are planning the champagne preview at the Oaks, headquarters for Yankee Gas and Oil, on Thursday, June 27. Hostesses for the festival are being arranged by Jane Zooleck, Elizabeth Baglione, Anna Babin and Joyce Webster. The Friday night jazz concert by Ray Smith and the Paramount Jazz Band is being arranged by Anita Franks and Ali Swedock. Franks is also working on the summer dance program.

Roz Farbush is arranging for artists' demonstrations; Joni Jensen, program business sponsors and awards patrons as well as a drama program; Janet Tooker, crafts exhibit, and Virginia Williams, Carlene Laney and Mary Lizotte, ticket sellers. Dudley Burke is in charge of tents and security; Stan Nikkel, treasurer; Don Lettis, panel set-up and hanging, and Sheldon Ripley and Margaret Dillon, president's choice exhibit. Marion Bush is coordinating volunteers and Ellen Winn is providing secretarial assistance.

With all these hands working on the 30th anniversary of the festival, it should be a "roaring success."

Salt shed location is set for landfill road

Although selectmen delayed a vote to recommend article 21 in the Special Town Meeting warrant, Highway Surveyor Harold Litchfield said the only available site for a salt shed is at the landfill.

Selectmen did not vote whether to support the article to prepare the shed site, until they are assured that an alternative location is definitely not available.

But Litchfield said this week, he has been assured by the Water Commission that the gravel pit area off North Main Street is within the construction moratorium area and can not be considered. The only site, Litchfield added, is the proposed site in between the entrance and exit of the Cedar Street landfill.

If town meeting approves the $20,000 appropriation to grade that area, the state will pay the costs of constructing a large salt shed on the site. Litchfield noted that the North Main Street area, which is town-owned, was not considered after the water department refused two months ago to release it from the moratorium constraints.

Water Commission Chairman Peter Pratt agreed with Litchfield, and said the gravel pit area is within 475 feet of the two Sohier Street water wells. Although the wells are not commonly used, they are capable of being utilized during an emergency situation, within 24 hours notice.

Pratt noted that in a 1980 survey by SEA Consultants, it was determined a total daily output of 130,000 gallons could be taken from the two wells if necessary. He added that the water generation figure was calculated into the department's plans for future water wholesaling.

At no time, he emphasized, could the department ever authorize the construction of a salt shed in the vicinity. Because the gravel pit would act as an effective conduit, the water could easily become polluted from the salt.

Litchfield said it was important that town meeting appropriate the money, because of a funding deadline. If the money is not granted to grade the property, the town will lose the state funds to construct the salt shed.

Currently, the salt is stored outside by the highway dept. barn. Because of the inadequate storage and the possibility of the reconstruction of the commuter rail, Litchfield felt it was a good opportunity for the town to accept the state funds.

In other warrant action this week, selectmen wondered why an article was submitted by the Water Dept. to cover an increase in the insurance costs when all other town departments experienced the same rate hike..

Commission Chairman Pratt explained Tuesday that because the Water Dept. is not allowed under law to transfer finances from budget line items, such a request has to be approved by town meeting.

Pratt said the procedure was checked with the former town accountant, who said the budget transfer must be approved by town meeting vote. No departmental transfer of funds can be completed without the authority of that vote, he added.

Chiropractic for HEALTH

REMOVING NERVE INTERFERENCE

Chiropractic does not specifically purport to cure disease or to directly treat symptoms. It is designed to remove nerve interference. Chiropractic maintains that these "subluxations" can be the cause of aggravated diseases which eventually may lead to symptoms. A subluxation is a condition in which one or more vertebrae of the spine are out of alignment to the extent that a nerve is impinged and normal transmission of nerve energy is obstructed. Through reflex action, almost any part of the nervous system can directly or indirectly cause sympathetic reactions in another part of the body. For example, a subluxation may trigger a headache but removal of nerve interference may bring relief.

Everyday as well as chronic situations may well be the result of such nerve interference. From chronic pain to even nervousness and sensitivity, such discomforts may well respond favorably to chiropractic techniques. Come in today to the COHASSET CHIROPRACTIC OFFICE, 760 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy., Suite 12, and let us explain how chiropractic can serve to allow Mother Nature's natural healing process to be enhanced. Representatives vote against gay foster care

By Karen Cubie

Members of the House of Representatives gave their overwhelming stamp of approval to an amendment stating that no child in the state's care may knowingly be placed in the care of any "person or persons whose sexual preference threatens the psychological or physical well-being of the child," during a meeting of the budget session May 24.

Voting "yea" were Reps. Robert Cerasoli, William Flynn, Frank Hynes, Charles Mann and Mary Jeanette Murray. Rep. Suzanne Bump voted "nay."

Cohasset Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray voted in favor of this amendment.

"I think when you look at a family, it is a mother, a father, and children," she said in explanation of her vote. "Two men bringing up a child do not see the other side of the argument."

Braintree Representative Suzanne Bump disagrees and voted against the amendment.

"The amendment says that a homosexual is a threat to the life of a child," she says. "This goes far beyond what most people are concerned with. It suggets that homosexuals are inherently evil.

"Furthermore, the amendment applies not only to foster care, but to adoptions and guardianships. If parents are killed, [gay] brothers and sisters could not even act as guardians for their own siblings! If the idea is to keep the family intact, to say that is ludicrous."

Bump feels that the amendment's implications for respite care are also negative.

"Respite care is a service offered by the state which provides individuals to care for physically or mentally disabled persons while the main caretakers vacation. The job is not well paid, and many of these individuals are gay. This amendment prohibits them from being involved. It went far too far."

However she added the amendment is an attempt to deal with legitimate social concerns.

"It attempts to deal with the question of whether gay households can meet all the social needs for someone in their care," she said. "The amendment, though, was hardly the way to address this."

Marshfield Representative Frank Hynes supports the amendment.

"My feeling is that children removed from families have already experienced severe trauma," he said. "They should be placed in as nurturing an environment with as much emotional support for the growth of children as possible."

Hynes believes that, as a member of a gay household, a child would have to deal with unnecessary antagonism from society.

"A homosexual couple is not approved of by the majority of society," he said. "Common sense will tell you that as children grow up, social approbation against homosexuality is sharp. One of the most critical denouncements is to call someone 'gay,' or 'homo'."

Hynes feels that children have enough problems dealing with their own sexuality without having to deal with unusual sexuality in their parent figures.

"We know that pre-adolescents and adolescents experience extreme concern over their own sexual identity," he said. "We don't know if living with a homosexual couple would exacerbate this. I tend to think it may. The natural process of coming to terms with their own identity could be made more stressful and tense."

Hanover Representative William Flynn agrees.

"I believe in live and let live," he says in defense of his vote in favor of the amendment, "But I don't care to put a stamp of approval on what I consider to be a form of perversion."

Flynn has talked with gay rights lobbyists, and to him they seem to claim that they are normal, while heterosexuals are abnormal.

"If they start from that premise, they might want to influence children to the gay lifestyle," he says.

Flynn said that until he is convinced that homosexuality is not a perversion he will react with "common sense."

"Children are impressionable people," he said. "I don't want them to believe the gay lifestyle is normal. Clearly, we have to draw the line."

Hanson Representative Charles Mann also voted for the amendment. He believes that a person's sexual choice is his own business; however, he claims that a homosexual household is not a normal atmosphere, and would not be conducive to the best interests of a child.

Weymouth Sen. William Golden supported a similar, non-binding resolution which was proposed by Senator David Locke in the Senate.

"Our primary consideration is the welfare of the child," Golden said. "Any factor which would endanger a child and the upbringing, or make a difficult situation more difficult, should not be allowed."

Whitman Senator Edward Kirby also supported this resolution.

"It's a salutory provision," he said. "It's obvious to me that the placing of a child in such a radically different atmosphere, whether there's any gross physical or psychological effects or not, has negative long term effects on society. Overwhelming support has been expressed in favor of protecting children from the influence of gays and lesbians."

Golden happy with water transit support

State Sen. William Golden (D-Weymouth) said he was extremely pleased with Governor Dukakis' Water Transportation proposal, announced Wednesday at the Mass Tech Center in Boston.

Senator Golden, whose district includes the coastal communities of Weymouth, Hingham, Hull, Cohasset, Scituate, Marshfield and Duxbury, applauded the Governor's plan to expand water transportation in Boston and the South Shore.

"Water transportation is part of the future of the South Shore", said Senator Golden. "The tremendous growth on the lower South Shore has made people aware of the need for expanded commuter boat service to and from Boston, and for accessibility to downtown ports and Logan Airport."

Gov. Mike Dukakis accepted an invitation by Senator Golden to see first hand how commuter boat service operates, by taking a commuter boat from Boston to Hingham, when the Governor visits the South Shore on July 2.

Senator Golden added, "The Governor has committed himself to water transportation, and is determined to see that the service is beneficial for everyone. This is very good news for the people of the South Shore."

Also, Hingham resident and former Boston Globe columnist, Ian Menzies was presented the Boston Harbor Award by the Governor, as a special tribute to one of Boston Harbor's most dedicated advocates.

"I was especially pleased to see Ian Menzies recognized for his work over the years in support of Boston Harbor and expanded water transportation," said Senator Golden. "Even more gratifying is the fact that Mr. Menzies is a South Shore resident, and a true supporter of transportation alternatives to and from the South of Boston."

McKinnon & Harbor Tunnel

The South Shore Transportation Committee has held its first meeting under new Committee Chairman, Nat Shulman, President of Best Chevrolet in Hingham.

Mr. Shulman called the meeting of chamber members and legislative and transportation leaders to reaffirm priorities and set new goals for the Chamber's Transportation Department.

Former State Senator Allan McKinnon was the guest speaker. McKinnon is the Deputy Secretary of the Executive Office of Transportation and Construction for special projects.

Barnum auditions set for Sunday

A final reminder that the Young People's Summer Theatre will hold auditions for this year's musical, BARNUM, Sunday, June 9 from 1 to 4:30 p.m. and 5:30 to 9:30 at the First Trinitarian Congregational Church on Country Way.

Those planning to audition should attend only one of these timeslots.

The group is open to any area youth between 13 and 22 years old.

Those interested in a major role or a small dialogue part or singing solo will be required to give a speaking and singing audition. Scripts and music will be provided.

Anyone interested in being in the chorus or dance section only should attend auditions to register but will not be required to give a speaking or singing audition. No one is turned down from membership to the group.

Those with a specialty act such as juggling, acrobatics, stiltwalking, or any unusual talent should attend auditions.

There is a $15 registration fee for the summer program. BARNUM will be presented August 1, 2 and 3 at Scituate High School.

More information can be obtained at the auditions or by calling 871-5831.

Cohasset sports for the week . . .

By Lisa Shumaker

Girls' Softball

The girls were knocked out of the first round of the state tournament on Friday when they lost to Old Rochester 5-3. Coach Bill Fallon thought his team put in a good effort defensively, but fell short on the offensive end.

Cohasset had a total of four hits, two of which came from Carla Lucas who has led the Skippers the entire season in hitting. Kerry O'Brien pitched well for Cohasset.

Next year will be challenging for the softball team as they lose several outstanding seniors to graduation. These include Carla Lucas, Janet DiGirolamo, Jill Nedrow, Kerry O'Brien, and Tara Stanford. Carla, Janet, and Tara were named to this year's South Shore League All-Star team.

Despite the loss of the seniors, Coach Fallon is looking forward to next year. With some younger players moving up from the J.V. team and returning underclassmen, Fallon expects his young team to be competitive.

Making the state tournament in softball enabled several girls on the team to accomplish an unsual feat. It is very rare that a high school athlete makes one state tournament team, but this year Janet DiGirolamo, Carla Lucas, Kerry O'Brien, Jill Nedrow, Kristen O'Brien, Anne O'Leary, Lisa Shumaker, and Maria Cahill made the state tournament in three sports. Not only did the girls' softball team, tennis team, and basketball team make the tournament, but the girls' soccer and field hockey teams made it also. This has truly been a remarkable year for girls' sports at Cohasset High School.

Emmons plans for future

By Melissa L. Barcomb

Ron Emmons, coach for Cohasset High School's girls' track team, emphasizes, "Track is a team sport."

Unfortunately, the girls' track team doesn't receive the spectatorship or acclaimation that they deserve.

The girls practice two hours every afternoon.

Because track is such a diverse sport, it requires additional concentration and courage, according to Emmons.

A particularly difficult, new event is the triple jump. Eighth grader Julie Bowdoin, demonstrates her versatility and coordination in this event.

There are only two seniors one sophomore and the rest, seventh, eighth and ninth graders.

This year's girls' track team broke more records individually, than any other year.

Although their team record for the year wasn't as impressive as the individual accomplishments, Emmons says, "Next year will be more encouraging."

A tremendous loss to the team and school will be freshman, Jane Delima.

Delima will be attending Milton Academy next year.

Winning at least one first each meet, Delima was the highest point scorer for the season.

"Jane could do almost any event," coach Emmons stated.

Sophomore, Katlin Staunton, broke a record for the 440 run. The record has stood for almost ten years, untouchable.

Junior high students, Kerry Anglin, Madeline Macdonald, Erin Chase, Nancy Riley, Julie Bowdoin and Sonya Butler are all track stars we should be following next year.

Eighth grader Sonya Butler, placed sixth in the principal meet.

Thanks to Eileen Mills, coordinator for METCO transportation, students like Sonya have an opportunity to train consistently, as opposed to past years where transportation for afternoon sports was always a problem.

Emmons considered Mills a huge help this season.

Unfortunately, Cohasset's track is dirt and is rapidly deteriorating. Because of this, most of the meets are away.

"It's sad when you have to wait for your best performance away from home," Emmons commented.

Coach Ron Emmons is hopeful for next year's season and is anticipating a good turnout.

Check out science in Norwell

Kids and Parents, too—Put a big circle on your calendar around Saturday, June 22, for the Kids Festival Day at the Science Center, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Come see the colorful striped hot air balloon fill up; watch and be taught break dancing by the Freeze Masters. Andrew Schwartz, master juggler, will blend a dash of humor with his performances—sure to catch the eye and ear. Learn all about animals which will be visiting from Trailside Museum. Robert Warren, director of the Canine Academy in Natick, will demonstrate with puppies and grown dogs, just what a dog learns in school, how to approach a strange dog and how to pick out a puppy. Join in the fun and laughter with Rick Cobban—a one-man band who was once with Ringling Brothers, Barnum and Bailey Circus. Visit the Indian Settlement and talk to the residents.

All sorts of fun tables will be set up—balloon decorating, The Portable You, a Carp Kite, Face Painting, Sprout Growing, a Teddy Bear clinic (bring your Teddy for a health check—, baked goods, plants and recycle tables. Give the Pocket Lady a coin-then pick a prize from one of her many pockets. There will be games galore—those of skill and competition. Take a ride in the hay or on a tractor.

Popular 'Kids' food will be available—pizza, hot dogs, snow cones, popcorn, cookies and drinks. A 16-foot canoe and an L.L. Bean Gift Certificate will be raffled off. Entry fee: $1.50 adults; 75-cents children 14 and under; free for toddlers under 3. The fees include all the shows. Parking is free.

Sure to be a great day! Call 659-2559 for further information.

The Kids Festival is partially funded by the Massachusetts Council on the Arts and Humanities, a state agency.

Inside Sandwich

Mary Plemmons will lead a trip to Sandwich on June 12 from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. Come see where the Cape Cod Canal meets Massachusetts Bay. Meet Thornton Burgess' Sammy Jay, see Coho Salmon growing up; observe a session of jam making and explore some tide pools. Bring a lunch of picnic on the beach. Dress for outdoors and walking. Meet at the Science Center to share rides. Fee: $10 members; $12 non-members. Pre-paid registration required. For further info, call 659-2559.

Curl Sampler Basket

Diane Stanton gives instruction on making a 7x8" basket embellished with curling techniques on Saturday, June 15 from 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Learn about the Micman and Algonquin curls. The basket can be used as a planter. Pre-paid registration required. Fee: $24.50 members; $27.50 non-members. Bring: pail, utility or mat knife, wire cutters, awl, ice pick or knitting needles, 10 clip clothespins, ruler or tape measure, pencil, scissors, hand towel and lunch. For further information, call 659-2559.

Camp Regis.. ation

On Sunday, June 16, 1 to 4 p.m., take the opportunity to register your child at the Science Center's Nature Day Camp. This will be a chance to meet some of the Camp counselors and get acquainted with the Science Center. Walk the trails, ask questions, enjoy yourself. For info, call 659-2559.

The South Shore Natural Science Center is located on Jacobs Lane just off Route 123 and is open from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Saturday and 1 to 4 p.m. Sundays and most holidays.

Lodge meets Friday

The Konoohassett Lodge, A.F. & A.M. will meet Friday, June 7 at 7:30 p.m. at the lodge for a business meeting, election of officers and the annual Strawberry Festival.

. . . knowing this class as well as I do, there isn't one that won't succeed in what he or she attempts to do . . . Good luck class of 1985, keep in touch so we can report your news.

☐ While speaking about graduations, Meg McCullough was graduated from Hebron in a lovely ceremony last Saturday . . . the rain even held off until the class was through with the festivities!

☐ Best of luck to Steve O'Connor in the future as he graduated from Williston Academy last weekend . . . may all of your plans and dreams become realities, "Beava".

☐ Had a note from Marie Johnson of Johnston Interiors recently. Marie wants to let everyone know that if you need a problem solved, she's the one to consider. Her background, delightful flair, and good taste combine to make her a sought after gal, so be sure to visit her shop on Beacon Hill's Charles Street. As Marie says, if you love beautiful things then a visit to Johnston Interiors is a must.

☐ Congratulations to John P. Giuggio, who was re-elected Director of the Greater Boston Chamber of Commerce at its Annual meeting on May 23. Mr. Giuggio is the President and Chief operating officer of the Globe Newspaper Company and Affiliated Publications.

☐ Here's wishing Diane Thayer good luck and much success. She graduated from Thayer Academy and will be attending St. Michael's in the Fall.

☐ Jennifer Anne (Ginger) Ralff, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David John Ralff of 12 Lantern Ln., received class honors during the past year at Duke University in North Carolina. Ginger scored a grade point average of more than 3.3 throughout the 1984-85 school year.

☐ Susan E. Cuff of 271 S. Main St., received a BS in Consumer Affairs at the May 26 commencement ceremonies at the University of Rhode Island.

☐ Cohasset recently had two graduated from the same college. Steven M. Taylor, son of Mr. and Mrs. Willard S. Taylor, 70 Pond St., received a BA degree in government from St. Lawrence University in New York. He was a member of Phi Kappa Sigma fraternity.

☐ That's the news from here, I'm sure you must have some from there, so please call it in.

Ohio youth choir

Cohasset will be the scene of a five-day visit by the senior high youth choir from Far Hills Baptist Church from Dayton, Ohio. The group will arrive in the Boston area Saturday, June 22, and will spend mornings conducting backyard Bible clubs and census surveys. Sunday evening they will present a program in the Cohasset Town Hall at 7:00 p.m., to which the public is invited.

The week's activities have a twofold purpose: to assist the Greater Boston Baptist Association in establishing an evangelical work, and to enrich the spiritual growth of the young people involved. In addition to the more strenuous responsibilities, the group also plans to take time out for sightseeing and recreation in the Boston area.

One more rider to thank

Richard McLaughlin, age 13, rode 44 miles in the Ride-A-Bike for retarded citizens two weeks ago. His name was not among those published last week. He did a magnificent job, according to Coordinator Maria Plante.

John Linsley winds up and fires in a pitch to a waiting batter.

Summer festival plans

Many hours of volunteer time are being put into creating the South Shore Art Center's 30th anniversary of its summer festival.

The South Shore Art Festival, long a tradition on the Cohasset Common, comes together the last weekend of June only after many hours of hard work by many volunteers on the South Shore. The Center, 103 Ripley Road in Cohasset, has planned a diverse agenda of activities from a jazz concert to juried exhibits to artist demonstrations to children's events the weekend of June 28-30 on the Cohasset Common and the Town Hall.

Chairpersons for the art exhibits are: Becky Haletky, Marie Macklin and Rosemary Cundari, juried shows; Claffy Williams, jurors luncheon; Helen Gallop, members' show, and Barbara Gurnis and Ron Goodwin, invitational sculpture show. Susan Kilmartin and Carol Matzell of the Patriot Ledger are working on the Patriot Ledger Art Awards.

Suzan Kilillea and Barbara Cross are planning the champagne preview at the Oaks, headquarters for Yankee Gas and Oil, on Thursday, June 27. Hostesses for the festival are being arranged by Jane Zooleck, Elizabeth Baglione, Anna Babin and Joyce Webster. The Friday night jazz concert by Ray Smith and the Paramount Jazz Band is being arranged by Anita Franks and Ali Swedock. Franks is also working on the summer dance program.

Roz Farbush is arranging for artists' demonstrations; Joni Jensen, program business sponsors and awards patrons as well as a drama program; Janet Tooker, crafts exhibit, and Virginia Williams, Carlene Laney and Mary Lizotte, ticket sellers. Dudley Burke is in charge of tents and security; Stan Nikkel, treasurer; Don Lettis, panel set-up and hanging, and Sheldon Ripley and Margaret Dillon, president's choice exhibit. Marion Bush is coordinating volunteers and Ellen Winn is providing secretarial assistance.

With all these hands working on the 30th anniversary of the festival, it should be a "roaring success."

Town gets tough on mooring violations . . .

position on the waiting list, and those who have not paid for their mooring.

Henderson said it was important for the town to enforce the harbor bylaws, but also be consistent in the enforcement.

"We must say to the over 100 people who have not paid their mooring fees, and the more than 60 who have not reaffirmed, that we will begin immediately (to enforce the bylaws)," Henderson said to selectmen.

He then suggested that selectmen give an extension period in which people may pay their mooring fees, and reaffirm their position on the waiting list. Selectmen voted to allow these people until 5 p.m., Thursday, June 20 to pay the fee and reaffirm their position.

This will be a one-time "grace" period for violators, according to selectmen. No such extension will be granted in the future, they noted.

The usual deadline for affirming one's position on the mooring waiting list, or to pay the mooring fee, is June 1. But this year only, selectmen voted to extend that date until June 20. Violators will be notified by the harbormaster after that day.

In the future, they emphasized, they will adhere strictly to the June 1 deadline.

In a related discussion, selectmen noted the Harbor Study Committee should review the limitation on the number of years a mooring can be abandoned before it is taken away from the boatowner.

Selectman Sullivan said consistent abandonment has wrc ıgfully burdened others on the mooring list. Because many people do not use their moorings for many years, others who have waited to get a mooring are penalized.

When Selectman Mary Jane McArthur suggested a three-year maximum time period be enforced, Sullivan said that would be too long. The board voted to have the Harbor Study Committee study the problem and make recommendations.

And in another harbor-related discussion, Town Counsel Henderson noted that the harbor committee should probably review the town's liability in an accident caused when the Harbormaster removes a boat from the water.

A waiver form could be developed which a mooring user would have to sign. That form would dismiss the town from liability in an accident, but Henderson said the town would likely be sued as a co-defendant in such a legal proceeding. He suggested the insurance or harbor committee research the town's actual liability in such cases. If the harbormaster orders the removal of a boat, and the process results in damage to the boat or someone else's property, is the town liable in any way, Henderson questioned.

Cohasset Museums to open June 22

The Cohasset Historical Society's two museums at Cohasset Center will open for the summer season Saturday June 22. There will be an open house at the Elm Street museums from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. and the public is invited.

The Society's Captain John Wilson Historical House and Maritime Museum hold collections of historical artifacts, documents, prints and paintings covering two and a half centuries of Cohasset's early history.

Today's Maritime Museum began as the 18th century Bates' Ship Chandlery on Border Street. It was moved to the center of town when given to the Society during the 1950's.

The building's first floor is filled with relics of Cohasset's seafaring past.

Summer visiting hours at the Historical Society's two museums will be 1:30 to 4:30 p.m each afternoon except Mondays, through the end of September. Admission by donation is $1.50 per adult for both buildings (75 cents for each building), and 25 cents per building for children 12 years and under.

Group tours can be scheduled at reduced rate by contacting the Society at 383-6930 or 383-0773.

New drinking age

After June 1, 1985, the legal drinking age in Massachusetts will be 21 years.

Under the "grandfather" provisions of the new law, those persons who have reached their 20th birthday on or before June 1, 1985, will be considered to be of legal age.

The law applies to everyone who buys or consumes alcoholic beverages, including all visitors, tourists, college students and others, regardless of the legal drinking age in their home states or countries.

A valid Driver's License from Massachusetts or any other state or a Massachusetts Liquor Identification Purchase Card is sufficient for anyone who is 21 years of age or older.

However, an out-of-state driver's license is not sufficient for persons under the grandfather provision.

Grandfathered persons who wish to drink or purchase liquor and do not have a Massachusetts Driver's License must obtain a Liquor Purchase Indentification Card. These cards are available at the Registry of Motor Vehicle offices.

In order to issue a Liquor Purchase Identification Card, the Registry requires three positive proofs of identification. Acceptable documents include out-of-state or expired Massahusetts Driver's License, birth certificate, college or work picture ID, high school yearbook with picture, W-2 Form, bank book, passport with valid signature and picture, lease or loan papers, home mortgage papers, life insurance, pistol permit or any legal document with applicant's signature.

"Doran & Mason gave us $5.00 just to review our homeowner's policy with them," reported Linda Bertino of Hanson.

"We found we could increase the insurance and broaden the coverage on our house, get replacement cost coverage for contents — and save money, too," the Bertinos said.

Doran & Mason took time to understand Linda and Lance Bertino's needs and tailored a new homeowner's policy to meet them. There are no shortcomings to surprise them later.

"We bought exactly the coverages we wanted, we're saving a lot and we got $5.00 for doing it. How can you beat that?" Linda asked.

Doran & Mason recently checked out insurance policies for 100 homeowners. 64 discovered they didn't have the coverage they had thought they had. In 93 comparisons, Doran & Mason produced savings averaging $61.00 per year.

If you could use a crisp, new $5.00 bill, fill out our request form. It'll be worth at least five dollars to you — maybe ten. If your present coverage fully satisfies your objectives and Doran & Mason can't save you money on that coverage, we'll give you a crisp, new $10.00 bill.

But the best feature could be your getting the homeowner's coverage you want and a chance to save money on that.

You can't lose! You can only win! Send us your request now!

YES! I'd like to receive a crisp, new $5.00 bill and find out if my homeowner's insurance will do everything I think it will. I understand that it's Doran & Mason's way of thanking me for allowing them to compare my policy with policies offered by companies they represent and that I will not be further obligated in any way. I also understand that I may qualify to receive a $10.00 bill as described above, and that the comparison requires at least fifteen minutes, at my house or a mutually convenient location.

Museums open for summer

The Cohasset Historical Society's two museums at Cohasset Center will open for the summer season Saturday June 22. There will be an open house at the Elm Street museums from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. and the public is invited.

The Society's Captain John Wilson Historical House and Maritime Museum hold collections of historical artifacts, documents, prints and paintings covering two and a half centuries of Cohasset's early history.

Itself a small New England seacoast village, Cohasset originally was an offshoot of the nearby older town of Hingham. Known to its resident Amerinds as Quonahassit and to earliest European settlers as Conahasset.

This rocky promintory was settled first by residents of Hingham following the dividing up of the land in the year 1670.

By 1700 the area had become a thriving agricultural community with a growing maritime-related industry.

Samuel Bates' stone wharf at Cohasset Harbor is the earliest known location of a family-owned fishing business.

Today's Maritime Museum began as the 18th century Bates' Ship Chandlery on Border Street. It was moved to the center of town when given to the Society during the 1950's.

The building's first floor is filled with relics of Cohasset's seafaring past.

The town's preeminence as a mackerel fishing village during the 19th century "Age of Sail" placed it, for a while, among the leading fishing ports in Massachusetts, and its "Deep Sea Captains" ranged across the oceans of the world seeking adventure and mercantile rewards.

At home, shipbuilding, fish packing, and the minding of the family store provided a way of life closely tied to the sea.

The collapse of the first Minot's Ledge Lighthouse in 1851 and the construction of the present granite lighthouse formed a distinct chapter in Cohasset's history, as did the numerous shipwrecks occurring along our rocky shores.

All of these subjects and more are represented in the Society's Maritime Museum.

Also to be found are general collections ranging from Indian stone tools to early housewright's and cordwainer's equipment to school desks. Next door on Elm Street, the Society's Captain John Wilson House, dating from 1810, (Cohasset's first historical museum, established in 1936), contains an extensive collection of early household furnishings, artwork and children's toys representative of those found in the town's older homes.

Many date from the early 19th century or earlier. The house itself, once the home of a Cohasset seafaring family, is maintained in something close to its original condition and remains perhaps the only primitive dwelling remaining in the town.

On the first floor can be seen the old hand-hewn beams characteristic of early home building. The builder of the Capt. Wilson House was David Nichols, housewright, who conveyed the house to the sea captain in 1810 for less than $500.

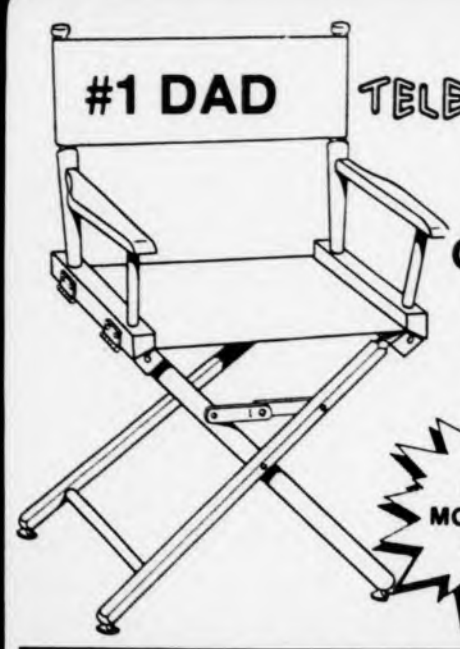
Summer visiting hours at the Historical Society's two museums will be 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. each afternoon except Mondays, through the end of September. Admission by donation is $1.50 per adult for both buildings (75 cents for each building), and 25 cents per building for children 12 years and under.

Group tours can be scheduled at reduced rate by contacting the Society at 383-6930 or 383-0773.

CCC summer hours

The Community Center office hours for the month of June will be Monday, Wednesday and Friday, 9 a.m. to noon. Anyone interested in program information or wishing to teach a class in the fall should contact the office during the above hours or write to the Center at 3 N. Main St., Cohasset, Ma. 02025.

The Center is looking for a part-time bowling attendant, as Bill O'Connell will be retiring the end of June. Anyone interested in this position or wishing further information is requested to call the office (383-0088) or 383-0752.



Bloodmobile June 17

The Cohasset chapter of the American Red Cross will conduct a Bloodmobile on Monday, June 17.

It will be held at the Unitarian Parish House on the Common, and the hours will be 2:30 to 7:30 p.m. Everyone in good health between the ages of 17 and 65 are urged to attend. Blood is life—pass it on!

After Cohasset there's only retirement town accountant can be more effective as secretary to the board of selectmen. He's in constant contact with the selectmen, yet he has the statutory powers of the accountant. I think I'll be of better use to selectmen in the combination job," he said.

Don Andrews, Cohasset's acting Town Accountant/Executive Secretary, on his first day at the job.

(Bill Quigley)

When he left Oak Bluffs, he realized the advantages of the dual position, but noted if the combination was not approved by Cohasset's town meeting, "I'd prefer keeping the town accountant's position. There's more responsibility," he stated.

Andrew said the confines of Cohasset Town Hall are about as different from the Brookline municipal building as possible. There, he noted, the town hall was six stories high, and employees weren't noted for their friendly attitude.

"I sense an entirely different attitude here. I like a smaller town," he added.

Andrew compared Cohasset "to somewhere in between Brookline and Oak Bluffs," where the population would swell from 2500 in winter, to ten times that number in the summer.

The bachelor said his foremost hobby, one which he will continue in Cohasset, is collecting antique and classic cars. He now owns a 1965 Pontiac Lemans convertible and a 1950 Plymouth "which was rotting away in the woods on the vineyard until I bought and restored it."

He is also a "political nut," collecting political items such as "thousands" of campaign buttons and posters.

Andrew frequently visits picturesque Martha's Vineyard, where his mother lives and where he maintains a home he bought after his college graduation.

"I think things will work out here," he said Monday. "I did the same thing in Oak Bluffs for seven years. I have known the terms of the position since the very beginning, and I'm confident everything will turn out fine.

"I would never applied for the job if William Signorelli hadn't left voluntarily. I have known him for years, and I hope everything goes well for him now."

Bank income produces record amount

Net income of Cohasset Savings Bank continues to show gains over its record-setting 1984 results after paying greater total dividends to depositors and maintaining a healthy reserve of more than 9%, Osborne F. Ingram, president, told a recent meeting of bank trustees and corporators.

For the first four months of this year, the bank's income from investments in bonds, stocks, Federal funds and short-term loans has increased substantially over the similar period in 1984, Ingram said. Income from real estate mortgages was only slightly lower despite the steady drop in mortgage interest rates.

Particularly significant, he said, was an increase of about 20% in net income from operations before including non-recurring gains on the sales of securities. During the four-month period through April 30, 1985 income from operations, after paying over $1,000,000 in dividends to depositors, was $156,865 compared with $128,489 in 1984. Taking into consideration provision for state and federal taxes, gains on the sales of securities and other non-recurring income items, the total net income for the year to date was $191,109 compared with $139,350.

Officer Rowland calls promotion bittersweet

By Mike Berger

Newly commissioned Warrant Officer William Rowland called his new promotion a bittersweet occasion as he handed over the reigns of authority of the Scituate Coast Guard Station to Chief Petty Officer Aldridge (Roy) Lees.

"I'm sad to leave such a fine crew and all my civilian friends in Scituate. It is sweet that I'm on a new adventure and a new promotion," said Rowland who will be leaving to supervise five Coast Guard Stations and three cutters off Cape May, New Jersey.

Chief Lees arrives in Scituate from Governors Island where he commanded a 65-foot tugboat.

Monday's ceremony was attended by Rear Admiral Richard Bauman of the First District and Capt. Paul Pakos of the Boston office who spoke highly of Rowland for his tour of duty in Scituate as well as praise for the entire Scituate station.

They also praised the Scituate Fire Dept for salvaging the Coast Guard station which was hit by a fire in February of 1984. Final agreements with construction contractors have kept personnel from moving back into the building. The men live in trailers adjacent to the station. Chief Lees is hoping his men will be moving into their new headquarters in the fall.

Monday's ceremony also marked special commendations and medals for Chief Rowland and five crewmen for their parts in an Oct. 14 rescue of a pleasure boat off Humarock.

Rear Admiral Bauman said he heard the entire rescue on his radio in Salem and commended the staff on a job well done.

One of two men who had been on board drowned as he was swept from the deck of a 25-foot cabin cruiser. The wind was estimated at 30 knots with a surf of four to five feet. A 44-foot Coast Guard cutter was slammed aground by gale winds in an attempt to rescue a 38-year old Wrentham man.

Hurricane Joseph was moving toward southern New England at the time with winds of 85 miles per hour at the center.

Honored were Mark Wilbert, Jeffrey Ward, Bill McClintock, Dennis Tobin, Todd Kelley and Chief Rowland.

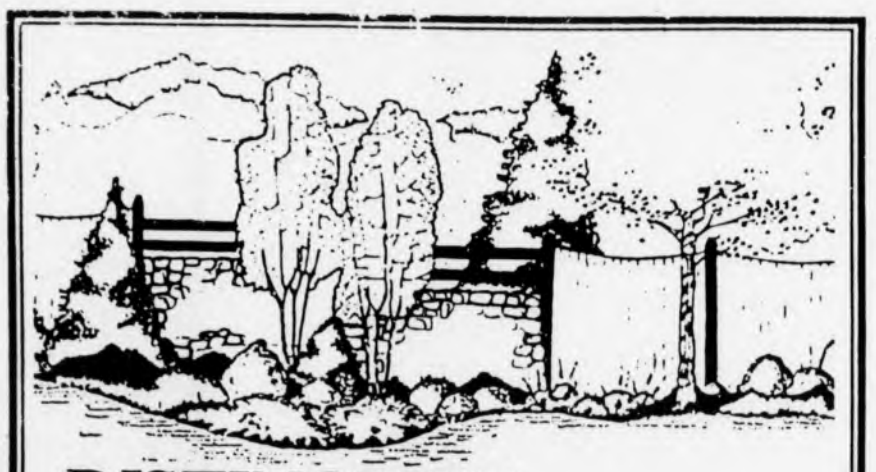
Kahn-Quinn announces auction of Paragon Park

The Kahn-Quinn Group, Ltd., developers of The Plaza at Paragon Park — a 529 unit luxury condominium community planned at the site of the historic amusement center — announced plans for a public auction of all rides, games and memorabilia to be held Wednesday, June 12, at Paragon Park, beginning at 10:30 a.m.

David A. Norton of Norton's Auctioneers, of Coldwater, Michigan who specializes in liquidation of amusement centers, tourist attractions, carnivals, zoos and private collections — will coordinate the event.

All of the Paragon Park attractions will be auctioned including the skyride, three roller coasters, rides, arcade games, memorabilia, and signs. "The attractions will be tagged and numbered. Each piece will then be auctioned off in numerical order and will go to the highest bidder. Only cash and certified checks will be accepted as payment," said Norton.

Not included in the auction is the world-famous carousel, built in 1928. It was purchased by Kahn-Quinn in April and plans are now being finalized for a permanent location in Hull.



During the auction, the rides will be operating for viewing only and cameras will be prohibited. Refreshments will be available.

Developers Chester Kahn and Paul Quinn plan to begin dismantling the park immediately after the auction. Phase I construction is scheduled for the fall with initial occupancy expected in the fall.

The first 100 units have already been sold; and sales activities for Phase II construction will commence this summer. Kahn-Quinn's plans for The Plaza include retail shops, a pool, recreation areas and health facilities in the spacious condominium complex at Nantasket Beach — one of the last major waterfront developments in the Northeast.

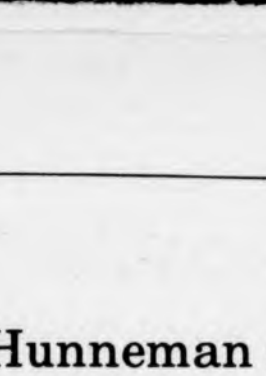
Associates from Hunneman's Better Homes and Gardens were among the recent graduates of the 'Quick Start' program.



Hunneman associates complete program

Liz Murdy, manager of Hunneman & Company/ Better Homes and Gardens' Cohasset office, announced that new sales associates Betsy Horak and Lauraine Hoy recently completed the company's intensive training program on real estate fundamentals at Bentley College.

Titled "Quick Start," this program was implemented by Hunneman as an extension of the company's already well-established orientation and education programs for new brokers. This newly developed program provides new associates to Hunneman with the professional and sophisticated tools they need to serve our clients well. The five-day-long course examined such subject matters as: Hunneman's Home Marketing System, real estate law, financing and architecture, and other related topics.

Host families needed for AFS

Cohasset has been selected for the third time to be one of approximately 230 communities across the country to host a group of foreign exchange students from around the world as part of the AFS International student exchange program.

Thirty-seven students, ranging in age from 17 to 19, representing countries in Central and South America, Europe, Africa and the Far East, will arrive in Cohasset by charter bus on July 2, to spend four days with local host families.

The students will be arriving from cities throughout Maryland where they have spent the past year living with host families.

The Cohasset group is part of over 300 students in 50 states who will make end-of-stay bus trips on the way to international departure points in New York and Los Angeles.

The bus trip is one way the AFS International helps students make the often difficult adjustment of returning to their native country by allowing a gradual transition to put their year in the U.S. in perspective.

During their stay, the teenagers will have several days to explore Cohasset sights before a day-long bus trip to Boston. This will be followed by a cookout and talent show. Departure is scheduled for Saturday morning.

The AFS is a privately supported, non-profit internationalstudentexchangeprogram active in 55 nations and 2,700 communities throughout the United States. Foreign high school students live for a year with adopted American families and attend local schools. American teenagers travel abroad to live for a year in foreign countries in similar AFS programs. Annually, AFS exchanges over 7,000 students around the world. In fact, here in Cohasset Alejandra Castro from Honduras has been hosted by the Dan Rossi family and Mauricio Gulfiri from Argentina was hosted by the Ellis family as well as the Sandell family. Next year, in 1985-1986 the William Lean family will host Corine from Belgium. She will arrive the first week in August, and will stay for a year.

Cohasset families who are interested in being a host for the July visit can contact Gordon Hislop, 383-6085 or JoAnn Rossi, 383-6818.

First Parish

Parish news - Everyone should mark their calendars. The annual meeting of the parish will be held Thursday, June 27 at 7:30 p.m. in Trueblood Hall. All committee reports must be in by Friday, June 7.

Denominational news - The Unitarian Universalist United Nations office seeks executive director for New York position. The UU United Nations office seeks the director beginning January 1, 1986. The office, across from UN headquarters, requires an active Unitarian Universalist with excellent communication skills and interest and experience in a variety of issues, especially disarmament and human rights. The executive director should be knowledgeable about the United Nations. Salary low 30's plus competitive benefits. Call the church office for more details, at 383-1100.

Second Congregation

Church school - It will be Birthday Sunday for the whole summer. If your birthday is between now and September, please bring your pennies. All children should remember something for the offering if possible.

Children's Sunday will be June 9. The Church School picnic will be after church on June 9 at the Hislop's house or in Bates Hall in case of rain. We hope to see all teachers and children there!

Talent show at Family Supper is June 21. Whether you juggle, play an instrument, breakdance, sing or whatever, be ready to participate. Open to all through high school. Anyone interested in teaching Sunday School next year, please see Marsha or call her at 383-0500.

Welcome new members - Fifteen new members were received by Confirmation of Christian Baptism. They are: Jennifer Aaron, Michael Anderson, Paul Bishop, Erica Ford, Kathy Haase, Kyle Hublitz, Karen Milburn, Kimberly Milburn, Stephen Myers, Timothy Myers, Margo Nedrow, Alice Seddon, Jill Shockman, Peter Sandblom and David Shultz.

Eyes for the needy - Your discarded eyeglasses and jewelry can help needy people around the world. A basket in Bates Hall will collect metal eyeglass frames in any condition, unbroken plastic frames with lenses, sunglasses, cataract lenses, and precious metal scrap (old watches, broken or outdated jewelry, damaged silver, etc.). The lenses will be used in overseas programs: other items support US programs to provide eye care for people who cannot afford it. Contact Mrs. Robert Wilson (383-9520) for more information.

Choir - There will be choir on June 9.

Scholarship fund guidelines set

The Cohasset School Committee met Monday, June 3 at the high school to discuss the establishment of guidelines for the distributions of the Alice and Walter Shuebruk, and Margaret Mary Hardy Scholarship funds.

The Margaret Mary Hardy scholarship fund of $213,000, is the largest endowment that Cohasset High School has ever received.

This large endowment, along with other organizations in the community, will make funds of between $40,000 and $50,000 available per year, for Cohasset graduates who qualify and meet the specific requirements of the various scholarships awarded.

Students who are interested in applying for scholarship assistance have access through the Guidance Dept. of the high school to available scholarship information.

In reviewing both the Shuebruk and Hardy trusts, which are very specific in their selection guidelines, the school committee concurred that the emphasis for selection would be in the qualification of "need." And the process by which "need" should be determined was discussed.

It was suggested by Dr. Joseph Nedrow that in order to facilitate more students in a fair and equitable way, so that multi duplications of scholarships not be awarded, it would be advantageous to the school committee to adjourn further discussions until more information from other scholarship donors could be reviewed.

The committee will again meet June 24 to continue further discussion on the guidelines for scholarship distribution selection.

Lead poisoning concern

The Massachusetts Department of Public Health's (DPH) Childhood Lead Poisoning Prevention Program (CLPPP) advises gardeners to plant away from painted structures and busy roadways where lead is likely to have accumulated in the soil as a result of chipped paint or leaded gasoline fumes.

According to DPH's Childhood Lead Poisoning Prevention Program Director Dr. Edward Cosgrove, "The primary source of lead poisoning in Massachusetts children is lead-based paint found in older housing units throughout the state. However, another important source of environmental lead is lead in soil, especially in older urban neighborhoods where chipping exterior lead-based paint has contaminated the ground near houses, sheds, old wooden fences, and porches, and where exhaust fumes from leaded gasoline have contaminated the ground near roadways.

"Children may be exposed to lead in soil when playing in these areas or when they eat certain garden vegetables grown in contaminated soil," continued Dr. Cosgrove. "Some garden plants including leafy green vegetables and root crops, readily absorb lead from the soil. While the lead hazard presented to children by food grown in contaminated soil is small, it can be avoided by careful planting. Garden soil can also be analyzed for lead contamination, and removed or reserved for plants that do not absorb large amounts of lead as they grow."

Children ages six and under are at highest risk for lead poisoning. Their bodies cannot excrete lead as effectively as those of older children and adults. A diet rich in calcium and iron and low in fats will discourage lead absorption.

Shirley Manna and Snapper Sneaker lead the parade.

Osgood celebration

The Osgood School celebrated a healthy spring with Snapper Sneakers Day Thursday, May 23.

The festivities began with a balloon parade and the Star Spangled Banner sung by John Pereira from Cohasset High School. Two retiring teachers, Helen Pratt and June Simeone, were honored by their students. Snapper Sneakers herself presented them with balloon bouquets.

The remainder of the morning was filled with jogging and a tug of war. We all let our imaginations fly with the climax of a balloon blast-off.

Sixth grade competition

The sixth grade students at Deer Hill School again this year participated in a math competition sponsored by the New England Math League.

Over 600 students throughout New England took the 40 question test.

Michael Cisneros, a student in Mr. Larry Shultz's room, placed fifth in New England with his score of 38. Among all the students participating from Norfolk County, Michael placed first. Recently he completed Level XII of the I.M.S. (Individualized Math Systems) Program at Deer Hill. He is the first student to accomplish this since the program was initiated 10 years ago.

Congratulations to Michael on a job well done.

Arbor Day observance

The clouds parted Friday afternoon and the sun shone on Osgood School's Arbor Day celebration. Under the direction of John MacInnis, kindergarten through third grade performed individually, selections ranging from "Rainbow Connection" to "She'll Be Comin' 'Round the Mountain."

The musical program concluded with the entire school collaborating on "Candy Man, Salty Dog," and "We are the World." Diana Kornet of the Garden Club dedicated the planting of flowering vines along the fence and Mr. Creamer remembered the late Carol Wallace with a special plaque presented by the Cohasset Special Olympics Association.

Calendar

Thursday, June 6: Whale Watch trip; Jr./Sr. faculty meeting.

Thursday, June 13: End of fourth quarter, Grades 7-11; PSO board meeting, 7:45 p.m.

Friday, June 14: Jr./Sr. High exams begin.

Jane Cooke: behind the scenes at Music Circus

The South Shore Music Circus has changed dramatically since it opened on the Bancroft Estate grounds in Cohasset in 1951 — and even more so since summer theatre first came to the town over 50 years ago.

"Theatre has always been very much a part of Cohasset," recalled Mrs. Jane Cooke, a member of the Music Circus board of directors and life-long Cohasset resident, during a recent telephone interview.

Mrs. Cooke, whose mother, Mrs. Hugh Sawyer, donated the land which now is the site of the South Shore Music Circus, remembered earlier days when great actors like William Crane and Lawrence Barrett resided in this seacoast town. Visiting performers included Henry Booth, brother of John Wilkes Booth and a great Shakespearean actor of his time, Edith Barrett, granddaughter of Lawrence Barrett and a prominent leading lady. "Historically, Cohasset has always been interested in actors, and actors have been interested in Cohasset," she said.

The first regular season of summer entertainment on the South Shore was actually in 1932, when Cape Cod Playhouse founder Raymond Moore chose Cohasset's Town Hall as the site for a second location to bring his performances.

It was not, however, an instant success. Despite stars like Humphrey Bogart, Sam Jaffe, Josephine Hull and Van Heflin, Moore lost over $50,000 that year and immediately gave up his plans for two summer theatres.

Mrs. Cooke, who said her family was one of the first 'season ticket holders' during those early years, recalled the summer when Bogart joined the regular company. "He was signed for 'The Petrified Forest' that fall, which gave him his first big role," she said. "He was well-known but not nationally know until that film.

"He spent a great deal of time at my mother's house that summer," she remembered. "He and another actor, Bob Crawford, would often spend the afternoons sailing toy boats in the swimming pool, like two little boys. His (Bogart's) father was a doctor, and he said he thought he would be a doctor too until he got into acting. He was an intelligent and sensitive man, not at all like the types he played. He had a wonderful sense of humor and, of course, great charm."

> "His (Humphrey Bogart's) father was a doctor, and he said he thought he would be a doctor too until he got into acting. He was an intelligent and sensitive man, not at all like the types he played. He had a wonderful sense of humor and, of course, great charm." — Mrs. Cooke

Mrs. Cooke also took part in many of the productions. "Grant Hunter, a very talented actor, appeared in 'Pursuit of Happiness' and the leading lady became ill, so they called on me as a sort of 'pitch hitter.' He gave me the greatest education in theatre by teaching me how to listen. He was a true inspiration."

Although Raymond Moore did not pursue his plans for summer theatre in Cohasset, the idea survived. In 1933 Alexander Dean of the Yale University Drama School took over the project and continued to bring such names as Sylvia Sydney, Cyril Ritchard, Arthur Treacher and Edward Everett Horton to the stage. He also arranged for a production of "Our Town" with Thornton Wilder reading the part of the stage manager. Sinclair Lewis also appeared there, starring in his won play, "Angela is 22." In '33 the South Shore Players began productions, and when Dean died in 1939, his wife took over and continued with it until World War II.

By 1949 the group had grown so popular that it outgrew the capacity of the Town Hall, and some Cohasset residents began a search for a new center for the performing arts. Eventually, Mrs. Cooke's mother donated the old horse show grounds of the Bancroft Estate, and a "new" concept in summer theatre came to the South Shore: the "Lambertville" tent surrounding a round stage.

The South Shore Music Circus opened on June 25, 1951 with a dazzling production of "Show Boat." Four performances were sold out prior to the opening and three others were nearly sold out. Ticket prices ranged from $1.20 to $3. Mrs. Cooke's family was still part of the theatre: one of her children had a part in that musical.

Things have changed since 1932. The resident company that learned one play, rehearsed a second and performed a third, all at the same time, was replaced by large productions that toured the country with "star" names. Today, the gala musical productions have in turn been replaced by major concert attractions who swing into town for a night or two. The changes stem from the high cost of bringing major plays and musical productions, and their dwindling popularity. Since the Music Circus is a non-profit charitable organization — donating all of its profits to various charitable, educational and youth activities all across the South Shore — the new tempo of the performances have generated new funds for local worthwhile organization. The music has gotten louder — as evidenced by the recent protest from residential abuttors — and tickets can now cost anywhere from $25 for a Wayne Newton performance to $16.50.

Ron Rawson, in his 18th year as producer at the Music Circus, is cited as the main force behind the theatre's success. Rawson, an Iowa native, started out in mid-West radio stations, eventually located in New York as a leading commercial spokesman and program announcer, and became involved in theatre in 1951 on Long Island. Among the actors he helped give "first stage roles" to were Eva Marie Saint, Tammy Grimes, Bert Parks, and Keir Dullea. In Cohasset he has been credited with reversing a financial decline at the Music Circus and polishing its image as a first-ranked summer theatre. Besides being able to draw some of the country's top entertainers to the South Shore, Rawson still adds a personal touch to all Music Circus commercials by supplying the voice-overs himself.

Politicus — by David A. Mittell, Jr.

A few thoughts on 'Hurricane Gay'

By David A. Mittell, Jr.

In his mischievous way Robert Frost used to articulate the need in politics for a "semi-revolution." Frost's unassailable thinking was that when the cartwheel does a complete revolution, the same points on the wheel always end up exactly at the top and bottom as before. So, in politics, "complete revolutions" end up with the same folks running the show. Only a "semi-revolution,"Frost reasoned, would put the poor folks on top and give the ruling class a taste of hard work for any length of time.

Any doubt that the great American cultural revolution that began about 20 years ago was doing anything but going in a complete circle ought to have been disspelled by last week's overwhelming vote by the putatively liberal Massachusetts legislature to exclude gay couples (they didn't mean merry couples) from receiving foster children from the state.

Being a gay, I mean cheerful, observer of political history, I find this vote primarily amusing, for it reveals the present totality of the victory of Ronald Reagan's America over the "movement politics" of the last 20 years. Can there be any doubt that the 1950s live when Mike Dukakis and Phil Johnston draw high praise from Bay State Reaganauts such as Sen. David Locke and Rep. Royal Switzler?

As to the issue at hand, I would not presume to tell my sainted readership what to think. I would only express the preference, when the choice is between a home where a child has been visited with violence or heterosexual rape, and the home of a stable gay couple, for the latter. Many foster care choices that the Department of Social Services has to make are precisely ones such as that. But say the word "ess-eee-ecks-- and the public, the pols, and the press get. . .well. . .aroused. On the other hand, when the state advertises for a few decent foster homes, it feels like an astrophysicist looking for life in distant nebulae. There is a chronic shortage of stable, married foster care in Massachusetts, and that is the reason behind the recent passing of the eye of "Hurricane Gay" over Beacon Hill.

I believe a deeper issue is involved here, one that has been obscured by the high winds of "Hurricane Gay." That is the question of the care in general that the Department of Social Services takes when it places foster children in new homes. No one, it is worth noting, has alleged abuse in the case of David X and David Y, the gay couple at the eye of the hurricane. But there have been countless cases of child abuse in foster homes generally in the last five years. That, and the cause of that, are what we ought really to be "aroused" about.

The fact is that foster care is saddled today with most of tne burden of abandoned, abused, disabled and handicapped children, and the burden is quite beyond the ability of the Department of Social Services to cope. The state, under the old Division of Child Guardiansip, used to be able to be far more selective about putting children into foster homes than is today's Department of Social Services. But along the way a supposedly enlightened decision was made to "deinstutionalize" children in much the same way that a concomitant decision was made to deinstitutionalize mental patients. (Our teeming homeless speak to the enlightenment of that decision.)

The effect of the deinstitutionalization of children was this: Children who used to be sent to places like the Judge Baker Guidance Center in Boston, the Nazareth Center and the New England Home in Jamaica Plain, and St. Anne's Home in Methuen, were farmed out to foster care in numbers greater than the foster home market would bear. Whereas in the former institutions children were supervised by staffs that were themselves tightly supervised, in foster care they and their foster families are, for all intents and purposes, unsupervised. That is why we hear horrible stories of the rapes and murders of orphans and disturbed children.

Ideally, foster care should be a long-term placement leading to adoption. It should never be undertaken without the most thorough and lengthy examination of the potential foster family. But because foster care under the Department of Social Services has now been required to take on most of the burden of needy children in Massachusetts, proper precautions are not taken. Thus some children get sent to heroic foster parents and thrive while others become subject to the continued abuse that in their short, troubled lives is all they have known.

The real social service story of 1985 ought not to have been the overblown brouhaha over the placement of one child with one David X and one David Y, it ought to have been the announcement last month of the permanent closing of the Nazareth Child Care Center in Jamaica Plain. Superbly run for 30 years, Nazareth used to be home for 450 children. Now it is about to close and the vultures, I mean the condominium developers, are beginning to circle its near-empty facilities. As I write, its remaining staff are working to rush its remaining children into foster care. We ought to fear for those children and for the children who will come after them.

The philosophy that produced the demise of institutions such as Nazareth took as its starting point the assumption that all homes for children were something out of Charles Dickens. That was not the case. One of the pillars of my own education was six years (1967-73) at the above-named Judge Baker Guidance Center. At Judge Baker there were naturally individual instances of rigidity, ambition, sloth, and the like getting in the way of what should have been happening. But the real story at that excellent institution was of a tremendously vibrant society centered around children, in which everyone, from child to child care worker to senior psychiatrist, grew and grew healthier.

As a society we "reformed" that sort of institution out of existence — more it seems to me out of dislike for the word "institution" than on any rational ground. To date we haven't found an institution to replace the institution except a foster care system that is too diffuse to be under control. Thus, the occasional foster-care rape, the occasional foster-care murder, as well as the occasional diversionary hurricane over a couple of gays. Sad.

Beacon Hill Roll Call

"Beacon Hill Roll Call" records local representatives votes on several roll calls from the week of May 27-31 and from late action on the state budget.

STATE BUDGET (H 6000)

House 124-17, gave near final approval and sent to the Senate the $8.8 billion fiscal 1986 state budget. Supporters said the package was a fiscally responsible one which will provide quality services and additional local aid.

Opponents said the budget was loaded with unnecessary items and does not offer any tax relief.

Voting "yea" were Reps. Suzanne Bump, Robert Cerasoli, William Flynn and Frank Hynes. Mary Jeannette Murray voted "nay" and Reps. Mann and Ambler did not vote.

MENTAL HEALTH (H 6000)

House 75-67, approved an amendment earmarking $500,000 in funds from the Department of Mental Health budget, for hiring psychiatrists and clinical psychologists for state mental hospitals.

Supporters said the amendment insures this money will go directly to help patients and to determine when patients should be released.

Opponents said the earmarking is too restrictive and said the commissioner needs the flexibility to hire other mental health workers.

Voting "yea" were Reps. Bump, Mann and Murray. Reps. Cerasoli, Flynn and Hynes voted "nay." Rep. Ambler did not vote.

LANDFILLS (H 6000)

House 105-33, rejected an amendment providing a $12.5 million reserve to eventually fund the correction of design deficiencies in municipal sanitary landfills.

Supporters, noting the state auditor recently decided the state should pay for mandated landfill projects, said the amendment will send Governor Dukakis a message to act quickly on this dangerous situation.

Opponents said the amendment was a bandaid approach to a serious problem and urged the House to wait for Dukakis to file his comprehensive bill dealing with the problem.

Reps. Mann and Murray voted "yea." Reps. Cerasoli, Flynn and Hynes voted "nay." Reps. Ambler and Bump did not vote.

NURSES (S 2164)

House 103-41, gave initial approval to a bill allowing physician assistants, nurse practitioners, nurse midwives, and psychiatric nurses to order certain diagnostic tests and prescribe drugs for patients.

Supporters, noting the nurses could only do so under a doctor's supervision, said the bill includes safeguards and will reduce costs and improve access without sacrificing quality.

Opponents said the bill grants a dangerous extension of authority and noted that the "supervision" does not even require the presence of a doctor.

Voting "yea" were Reps. Bump, Cerasoli and Hynes. Reps. Mann, Murray and Ambler voted "nay." Rep. Flynn did not vote.

POLLING PLACES (H 2715)

House first rejected 72-70, then gave initial approval 74-63, to a bill expanding the current law which prohibits the display or distribution of materials relating to the ongoing election within 150 feet of polling places.

The bill would apply the same prohibition to materials relating to future elections.

Supporters of the bill said this eliminates a loophole in the current law which has allowed future candidates to stand at the polling place door and harass voters.

Opponents said the bill discourages personal contact and signature gathering and claimed it actually destroys its own intent by placing everyone at 150 feet and not allowing voters to easily get through to the polling place.

Voting "yea" on both bills were Reps. Murray, Mann, Hynes and Bump. Rep. Cerasoli voted "nay." Rep. Flynn did not vote and Rep. Ambler voted "nay" on the first bill and "yea" on the second bill.

THE SENATE

DRUG DEALERS (S 604)

Senate 18-18, refused to accept the recommendation of the Criminal Justice Committee that the Senate defeat a bill providing that any person in possession of illegal drugs worth more than $25,000 be held without bail.

Supporters of the bill said this will prevent big drug dealers from posting bail and then disappearing.

Opponents said the bill is unconstitutional and noted the state has other laws that are tough on pushers. (A "yea" vote is against the bill. A "nay" vote is for it.)

Voting "yea" were Sen. Paul Harold. Voting "nay" were Reps. Buckley, Golden and Kirby.

GAYS

Senate 22-10, refused to table resolutions stating it should be the policy of the Department of Social Services to place children in need of foster care in the care of persons whose sexual orientation presents no threat to the well-being of the child.

Supporters said it was irresponsible and immoral to place children with gays. Some opponents said the resolutions are unfair, anti-gay, and noted gays can provide the proper environment for children. Others said the resolutions are unnecessary because the Department has already adopted a policy and several said the Senate should wait until more facts are known. (A "Yea" vote is for tabling the resolutions. A "nay" vote is against tabling.

Voting "nay" were Sens. Harold, Kirby and Buckley. Sen. Golden voted "yea."

Freshwater Fishing Report

Trout—Due to very low water levels and more fish concentrated in less water, the lakes in the Plymouth County area seem to be very active with trout this year. Ponds and lakes on the Cape, such as Spectacle, Gull, and Mashby-Wakeby, have been producing a good harvest of rainbows and a few good brookies and browns. Shrimp on fly rods and trolling with jointed rapalas are two good methods for plenty of action in all the local and Cape ponds. Worms, salmon eggs, and corn will take a few fish on the bottom from the shore.

Large and Smallmouth Bass—The low water levels in local bass ponds seem to have the fish confused. Last year's high water had fish spawning in areas that were new and very fertile. With the ponds so low, bass seem to be reluctant to spawn and are not even making spawn beds in some of the smaller ponds. I have had many reports from fishermen saying fish are scurrying around in the shallows and are not doing anything. On many of the large lakes, the fish have spawned and are beginning to feed heavily. Look for the beds that have a light silt on them and fish in that area. You should find hungry bass eager to hit swimming lures, such as Rebels, Bombers, Rapalas. Color will not be a major factor as fish are ready to eat almost anything that looks alive.

Sunfish and Perch—Plenty hungry and everywhere you look in the pond—use worms.

PATCHES by Lois Martin

Cora's party line makes a comeback in Phone-a-friend

Cora Blodgett was right. I've said that before and now New England Telephone Company is moving ahead by rolling back the years to a party line.

On a trial basis the communications company is offering Phone-a-Friend, in the Worcester area only, for one year.

I rest my case.

Years ago the swells in town had private lines. Back then there was usually one phone, the phone in the house. Private liners could pick up The Phone and place a call on a whim.

The rest of us had a party line, usually three to five people and you prayed at least three of them would move and leave that line open.

PATCHES

You'd head toward The Phone and pick it up to crank. There would be Agnes and her sister, Eunice exchanging confidences. Everyone was fine-tuned to another person's picking up of the phone. "Someone's on the line," they'd say as a warning not to say anything you didn't want to broadcast and as a muted threat to the intruder.

The party line was an education. Itwouldn't be one week on a new line before you'd know who used the phone all the time and who picked it up and listened all the time. You could envision the snoopers, hand over the mouthpiece, eyes abulge at the eavesdropping revelations.

Although newspapers published in days of party lines, they were less essential for local news than with the private lines. Word of mouth was the way it went, whose ulcer acted up and what supper content stimulated the problem. Not to mention far more personal matters.

It had its benefits. Cora, the telephone operator of the Brookville, Maine exchange, in case you haven't kept pace with the reference, would let you know who'd gone out and where and for how long. And in fire emergencies, she'd let loose a long ring on everyone's phone. That incited near panic at Gram's one day when lightening struck the church steeple. Not to worry. Cora reached out and touched everyone with a singular unending and unnerving crank from her main switchboard.

Apparently we of the 80's seem bored with limited telephone conversations.

In Europe, said the telephone man, conference calls (new term for party line) are old hat. In New York they've been on trial. In the Worcester County the service started last March and handles 44 communities.

You know perfectly well that if I were within that area I'd have been on the line with unknown parties by now. Don Howe, the New England Telephone Company man heading the Cora Blodgett Revival of the Party Line, said there are specific rules for participating.

I, for example, might call and be connected to the 'bridge' that handles as many as five people. I am not to talk dirty. Don Howe said that. I'd be disciplined or disconnected were I to infuse trash talk into the conversation.

A moderator, hired from the outside rather than an-in-house company person, will greet the Phone-a-Friend caller. He or she then joins your line with an ongoing conversation.

With that in mind, the situation becomes clear. You and a new acquaintance are chatting away about the Celtics. A new person is introduced. There are more options. The original talkers can choose to ignore the newcomer. Nice.

There you are on the line, knowing nothing about the Celtics except that they are a group of very tall men who play basketball seemingly year round. And you wait politely to feel inlcuded. In many ways this is a cocktail party circuit without cocktails. You introduce yourself. They don't recommend you spit out your full name, address and telephone number right away. But you can cleverly arrange to talk with interesting people another time if you choose. You won't always be joining the same conversation. In fact you may never run into those voices again. Unless you arrange to do so.

There are three numbers now - a young adult one, an adult one and one for senior citizens. This is a form of entertainment, and it has obvious possibilities. My little mind sees a dank, dark night. Nothing good on TV, no one around with whom to shoot the breeze.

I hanker then as never before to snag a stranger on the airwaves. I am given privacy. The partyliners can't see my bathrobe. They haven't the foggiest notion of whether I'm a contract negotiator for General Dynamics or their nearby supermarket cashier. Anonymity in a acquaintanceship. Or, if you make a mutual move, new friends.

This service now costs from 82 cents to $1.23 for a 10 minute call. Personally, I'm going for the $1.23. Don Howe says 40 percent of the people calling don't speak. They're listening. So there are other satisfactions. If you're someone who thrives on listening to others, this is for you.

I plan to talk, if I get near the line. And it's a 24-hour service, a "software arrangement."

That means it isn't a piece of equipment but rather a use of a piece of equipment. It's an extra offer of the phone company.

But we know better than that. It's a party line. The company has finally recognized that Cora's way is the best. Those honchos know people don't want to be subtracted from one another by technology. They wisely are employing personal service because they believe humanity in service pays off.

They're so right. Shelve those recordings. Do away with canned voices and concepts. Bring back the Cora Blodgett to New England Telephone Company. In fact, the day they put Cora back on the cover of the phone book, we'll have come full circle back home. Cora knew the true meaning of high touchology.

FROM THE KITCHEN

by JOAN PINKHAM

At times it would seem they're a vanishing breed, yet if you search long and hard, you'll find there are still women whose favorite place to be is in the kitcher. Their casseroles are always the first to go at church suppers and their name leaps to mind when a bake sale is in the offing. Eating their food is like going home to the kind of food you remember your mother used to make, which may be why the luncheons served by the following women of the First Baptist Church are still drawing crowds after at least 50 years. On the first and third Wednesday starting in May, the tables groan with dishes prepared by Avis Ludlow, Ruth Melvin, Sylvia Young, Kay Seadale, Helen Melvin, Lucy Peters, Esther Osborne, Carol Melvin, Agnes Carey, Phyllis Hughes and Edith Shepherd. This is a dish Ruth says disappears like lightning, for the food's served family style. This is her basic recipe, which may be doubled, tripled, but this serves 4, making about 12

SWEDISH MEATBALLS

1 lb. lean hamburg
1 beaten egg
Minced onion, according to taste
1 tsp. salt, dash each of pepper and nutmeg
1/4 c. milk
1/3 c. seasoned breadcrumbs
1 tsp. sugar

Beat egg and milk together, stir in onion, crumbs and seasonings. Add crumbled beef and mix well, shaping into balls about the size of a medium egg. Place on cookie sheet. Bake in 350 oven for 15 to 20 min. Drain off any fat. Serve with canned mushroom gravy, mashed potato, a vegetable and salad.

Time was when there were vegetable stands at every turn of the road and out back was the garden where you could see your evening meal growing. During June rickety, old tables were set up by the roadside, tempting the passerby with heaping quarts of native strawberries. Now that rhubarb is in season, members of the First Congregational Church gather for coffee after the Sunday service and it's first come, first serve for the pies baked by Mary Sinnott, Iris Brough and other churchwomen. When strawberries ripen this month, up will go the Gardening for God sign and native produce will be offered for sale to the public again. This is the third year volunteers have staffed the stand outside their parish hall on Ocean St., and last summer they made $3700 for the church. Thoughts of their corn grown by Paul Cevilli in Hanover makes one's mouth water, as does this recipe for

STRAWBERRY-RHUBARB PIE

1 c. sugar — 1/8 tsp. salt
1 T cornstarch — 2 c. strawberries
1 tsp. minute tapioca — 1 c. rhubarb, cut in 1/4" slices
1 T butter

Mix first four ingredients together. Line a 9" pie plate with pastry. Mix berries, rhubarb and sugar mixture together and place in a pie plate. Dot with butter and top with crust. Bake in 450 oven for 10 min.; reduce heat to 350 and bake approx. 30 min. longer.

Not too many church groups serve luncheon on a regular basis any more, but the familiar dishes that are offered are made with such care, special touches and visual appeal that people are attracted to the home-style cooking. When Barbara Wilkinson prepared this dish for a Community League luncheon last month, several guests asked for the recipe, for it also makes an excellent brunch dish that can be prepared the day before, popped in the oven the next morning and kept warm for overnight guests which those of us on the South Shore expect in beach weather. Here is Barbara's recipe which serves 8:

EGG CASSEROLE

1 #2 can of peas
1 can each pimento (cut up), sliced mushrooms, small 6 eggs, hard-boiled, sliced
1 lb. Cheddar Cheese
1 qt. very thick white sauce (1/2 c. butter, 1 c. flour, 1 tsp. salt Use liquid from peas, mushrooms, adding milk).

Grate 1/2 the cheese, melting remaining half in above sauce. Arrange in layers in buttered baking dish. 1. Layer of peas. 2. White Sauce. 3. Cheese. 4. Pimento. 5. White Sauce. 6. Mushrooms. 7. White Sauce. 8. Eggs. 9. White Sauce. Sprinkle with butter crumbs, or use crushed Ritz Crackers. Heat in 350 oven until bubbly.

Warren Waitkus' World of Weather

By Warren Waitkus

Summer officially begins this year on June 21 at 6:44 a.m. At that precise time, what is commonly known as the summer solstice occurs, but true summer-like weather has been known to appear well before this particular instance. On June 5, 1816, 168 years ago, the temperatures soared to 92 degrees at Salem, Mass. The still supersititious people of Salem must have thought that a sorceress was at work when the temperature dropped 49 degrees during the next 24 hours. Indeed, 1816 was a strange year weatherwise. It is a year that is indelibly written in the pages of weather history. It is known in New England as "The year without a summer."

During June, July, August and September of 1816, record breaking cold spells occurred, wreaking havoc on agriculturally independent New England. Food crops of corn, cucumbers, tomatoes and most other garden variety vegetables were killed, and farmers feared a widespread famine.

April and May, 1816 were cold months, and a harbinger of the bewildering weather that lay ahead. The beginning of June was summerlike, and joyous farmers returned to their fields, left barren by the hard frosts of May. Even as they toiled, the first of several extraordinary cold waves was approaching.

On June 6, a severely cold air mass plunged into the Northeast. Temperatures in Massachusetts spiraled downward 49 degrees in a matter of hours. Between June 6 and 11, moderate to heavy snow fell in Maine, Vermont and New Hampshire, with lesser amounts reported in northern Massachusetts.

There were snow squalls and scattered frost throughout New England, with freezing temperatures reaching as far south as Virginia. In Canada, 12 inches of snow was recorded near Quebec City.

Residents of the time reeled under the meteorological onslaught, suffering the consequences in helpless amazement, while once again there was a return of serene summer air.

It was a short-lived respite, for on July 6, New England was again poked by the frigid finger of frost. Though not as severe as the previous outbreak of cold, frost caused extensive crop damages and great distress comfort to the populace. And so it went, on and on, July 18, August 20 and September 11.

The temperature abnormalities culminated on September 27, when all hope of crop replanting vanished. Thus, the summer of 1816 ended in the hoary stillness of a winter's night.

May Summary

The major weather story for the month of May took place when the cyclone (hurricane) lashed the southern coast and offshore islands of Bangladesh. This vicious storm created a storm surge (a dome of water) which roared in across the Bay of Bengal, making landfall at the estuary where the Ganges River empties into the sea. Authorities say that the storm claimed the lives of 6,000 to 10,000 people, and at least 15,000 head of cattle. The exact death toll may never be known and is expected to possibly reach 25,000. It was the worst storm to strike the region since a cyclone killed at least 300,000 people in 1970.

On May 31, tornadoes ripped through southern Canada, Ohio, N.Y., and Pennsylvania, leaving 94 persons dead. Pennsylvania was the hardest hit with 61 dead and at least 200 others hospitalized.

During the afternoon of May 21, funnel clouds were reported in southwestern Mass., as a storm unleashed high winds, lightning, and rain across the state. Police in Chicopee and Springfield said that a squall line preceded by thunderstorms tore through their communities, knocking down trees and power lines. No serious injuries were reported.

Witnesses reported seeing a funnel come a little off the ground and disperse, then start again. That same afternoon in our area we experienced thunderstorms with heavy rain and winds gusting to 30 MPH.

Total precipitation for May, at my station in Marshfield, was 4.84 inches, 1.24 inches above normal. Maximum 24-hour rainfall was 2.04 inches on May 3. Rain, .01 inch or more occurred on 12 days with a trace on four days.

The mean temperature was 56.5 degrees, .4 degrees below normal. The average daily maximum reading was 68.7 degrees, while the average daily minimum was 44.2 degrees. The low temperature for the month was 28 degrees on the 4th, with a high reading of 91 degrees on May 11.

There were only two clear days, 21 partly cloudy days, and eight cloudy days. The average wind speed was 13.2 MPH; normal is 12.1 MPH. The highest gust was 42 MPH on May 8.

Total precipitation this year has been 14.08 inches, 4.33 inches below normal.

Hurricane Season

Twenty-one names have been selected by NOAA to identify hurricanes and tropical storms occurring in the Atlantic, Caribbean and Gulf of Mexico. The hurricane season runs from June through November. The 1985 names are: Ana, Bob, Claudette, Danny, Elena, Fabian, Gloria, Henri, Isabel, Juan, Kate, Larry, Mindy, Nicholas, Odette, Peter, Rose, Sam, Teresa, Victor and Wanda.

Summer Outlook

The National Weather Service outlook for June, July and August indicates that east of the Rockies summer is expected to be hotter than normal in the northern half of the country and cooler than normal to the south, while much of the far west should be relatively cool. The chances of extra heat reach 60 percent in most of New England.

Rainfall probabilities can be given for only a few areas. There is insufficient evidence to establish a probability for all of the drought stricken East.

It looks like it's going to be hot and dry.

Weather Q and A

Q. Where are hurricanes born?

A. Tropical cyclones (hurricanes) which affect the United States originate over the warm tropical waters of the Atlantic Ocean, the Caribbean Sea, the Gulf of Mexico, the coasts of Central America and Mexico, and the eastern North Pacific Ocean. Most of the storms are born between 5 degrees and 15 degress north latitude.

Have a good day and a nice forever.

From the Garden - Strawberries should be at their best

By Joan Pinkham

June's Moon of the Strawberries should be at its best just about now, shining down on all that is plush and lush. The bright green of our lawns and trees is a perfect setting for the splashes of pink provided by our azaleas, rhododendrons, peonies, laurel and wild roses. Here by the seaside, flowering annuals of the low variety are best to withstand the strong winds that blow in from the ocean. Sweet Alyssum, lobelia, ageratum, nasturtium and dwarf varieties of snapdragons, petunias and marigolds bloom all summer in the warm soil and sunshine. Shady spots in the garden welcome patience plants, begonias, coleus, caladiums and fuchias grown in hanging baskets. Constant wind, sandy soil and salt spray can be discouraging, but yards by our beaches are made colorful with window boxes, planters, large clay pots and hanging baskets.

Planting two hundred marigolds and dividing the cosmos and bachelor buttons that multiply all too readily are but a few of the tasks that Lenny Houghton and Joseph Martin are busily engaged in at the War Memorial Park at the corner of Rte. 3A. It's a charming little oasis in the midst of our summer traffic, and it's home to some month-old goslings. Keeping the water wheel going seems to be an impossible task, as vandals pull out the planks during the night. Cool, clear water is what all birds want on a hot summer day and Bev Litchfield, birder par excellence, advises that we clean the bird baths every day, scrubbing away the pollen and mold that pollutes the water. Birds appreciate anything that drips, squirts, sprays, runs or holds fresh water and if you are going to buy or build a bird bath, remember that they should be no deeper than two inches and rough on the bottom so the birds won't slip. Baths should be located near a fence, tree, or building where the birds can fly to sun and preen after bathing. During nesting season, Bev says that you will attract entire families to your feeder if you keep it stocked with seed, but if you find a baby bird fallen to the ground, she advises putting it back in its nest and leaving nature to care for it.

Why drive miles to Vermont or New Hampshrie when we have a pastoral scene that must surely rival their beauty. Topping Nelson's Hill, (once known as Toilsome Hill), are broad fields bordered by weathered stone walls stretching off to the woods beyond. At the foot of the hill abutting Damon's Pond are the gardens of the Allen Kellys, 12 acres they have transformed into a charming setting for the rambling home they purchased 24 years ago. Brick walks and patios they have designed are surrounded by giant peonies, pink and lavender wisteria on the weathered barn and down by the shores of the pond, home to a number of geese, is an unusual white wisteria. A long, stone wall is a backdrop for a variety of annuals and the massive rhododendron nestled among the pines on the side of the hill, was once an 89¢ foot-high plant from Angelo's. Clay soil is everywhere, but mixed with pine needles and compost, there is nothing that won't grow in this charming country garden.

Stopping by at Paul Cretinon's roadside stand on Union St. usually leads to a discourse on the ways of gardening and the other day he mentioned how the phases of the moon have long been used as a guide for planting crops. It seems the best time to plant flowers and vegetables that bear crops above the ground is during the LIGHT of the moon; that is, between the day the moon is new to the day it is full. Flowering bulbs and vegetables that bear crops below ground should be planted during the DARK of the moon; that is, from the day after it is full to the day before it is new again.

Enough to ruin anyone's day is the news that although June offers us the longest day of the year when summer begins on the 21st, by the end of the month, the days are already moving toward fall and winter. Keep your fingers crossed—some say that if it rains on the 27th, it will rain for seven weeks after. June is also a busy month for gardeners and it's not too late to sow annual flower seeds, as they will grow rapidly and fill in bare spots in the garden. Always water in the morning, never in the evening, because a damp tuft can pick up fungus infections. Before you sit down to admire your garden, remember to pinch back your chrysanthemums, nipping them off just below a leaf node and so keeping the plants low and bushy.

Charles Sinnott has lived a long and productive life in this, his native town and down on the lane that bears the family name he and his wife, Mary, lead active lives. His pet project now is the vegetable stand soon to make its third appearance with the arrival of our native strawberries. Money earned at the "Gardening for God" stand outside the parish hall of First Congregational Church, supports church activities and Sinnott says much of their success is owed to those people who drop off their surplus rhubarb, tomatoes, squash and other crops that have proved to be more than they can use. "Sometimes we don't even know who to thank," says Sinnott. "They drop off baskets of their extra produce when the stand is closed, but we're very grateful for all their generosity."

Luring birds into one's garden with a feeder and bird bath, attracts chickadees, downy woodpeckers, robins, nuthatches, wrens, bluebirds and song sparrows and it's smart to woo them, for they are helpful allies in ridding one's garden of insects. They can devour millions of harmful insects in a season, but all too often, the family cat is waiting to pounce and scare away our feathered friends. If you place your feeder on top of poles or metal pipes, it discourages both the squirrels and the cats—belling the cat is one way of warning the birds.

Historical Society's museums open for summer

The Cohasset Historical Society's two museums at Cohasset Center will open for the summer season, Saturday, June 22. On that day, there will be an open house at the Elm Street museums from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. The public is invited.

The Society's Captain John Wilson Historical House and Maritime Museum hold collections of historical artifacts, documents, prints and paintings spanning two and a half centuries of Cohasset's early history.

Itself a small New England seacoast village, Cohasset originally was an offshoot of the nearby older town of Hingham. Known to its residents Amerinds as Quonahassit and to earliest European settlers as Conahasset, this rocky promintory was settled first by residents of Hingham following the dividing up of the land in 1670.

By 1700 the area had become a thriving agricultural community with a growing maritime-related industry. Samuel Bates' stone wharf at Cohasset Harbor is the earliest known location of a family-owned fishing business. Today's Maritime Museum began as the 18th century Bates' Ship Chandlery on Border Street. It was moved to the center of town when given to the Society during the 1950's. The building's first floor is filled with relics of Cohasset's seafaring past. The town's preeminence as a mackerel fishing village during the 19th century "Age of Sail" placed it, for a while, among the leading fishing ports in Massachusetts, and its "Deep Sea Captains" ranged across the oceans of the world seeking adventure and mercantile rewards.

At home, shipbuilding, fish packing, and the minding of the family store provided a way of life loosely tied to the sea. The collapse of the first Minot's Ledge Lighthouse in 1851 and the construction of the present granite lighthouse formed a distinct chapter in Cohasset's history, as did the numerous shipwrecks occurring along our rocky shore.

All of these subjects and more are presented in the Society's Maritime Museum. Also to be found are general collections ranging from Indian stone tools to early housewright's and cordwainer's equipment, to school desks.

Next door on Elm Street, the Society's Captain John Wilson House, dating from 1810, (Cohasset's first hisorical museum, established in 1936), contains an extensive collection of early household furnishings, artwork, and children's toys representative of those found in the town's older homes. Many date from the early 19th century or earlier. The house itself, once the home of a Cohasset seafaring family, is maintained in something close to its original condition and remains perhaps the only primitive dwelling in the town. On the first floor can be seen the old hand-hewn beams characteristic of early home building. The builder of the Capt. Wilson House was housewright David Nichols, who conveyed the house to the sea captain in 1810 for less than $500.

Summer visiting hours at the Historical Society's two museums will be 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. each afternoon except Mondays, through the end of September. Admission by donation is $1.50 per adult for both buildings ($.75 for each building), and $.25 per building for children 12 years and under. Group tours can be scheduled at reduced rates by contacting the Society at 383-6930 or 383-0773.

Cohasset Recreation Dept. schedule

Current program registrations

The Cohasset Recreation Department is currently accepting telephone registrations for Golf, Dog Obedience, and Adult Tennis Lessons. Various levels of instruction in all programs are offered. If interested, please call the Recreation Department office at 383-6791. Non residents will be accepted on a space available basis. All programs are $15 per person for the course duration.

Walking clinic

The Cohasset Recreation Department's Walking Clinic is under way. Anyone else interested may call the Recreation office for details.

Summer registrations

An eight-page flier depicting the summer activities will soon be sent home via the Osgood and Deer Hill schools. Copies are also available in the lobby of the Town Hall, outside the Recreation Department office.

Registrations for Summer Playground programs, ages four through 12 years, will be held at the Recreation office from 9 a.m. to noon, Monday through Thursday, June 17 through June 20.

Youth Tennis registrations will be held at the same place, on the same days, from 1 to 3 p.m.

Summer Soccer Camp

Boys' and girls' interested in the Summer Soccer Camp put on by the North American Soccer Camps, should contact the Recreation Department office immediately. This year's Soccer Camp will be held from Monday, August 5 through Saturday, August 10 at Miliken Field.

Band Concerts

The first Band Concert of the season will be performed by the 30-piece South Shore Concert Band, under the direction of Richard Whitmarsh, Saturday, June 29 at 7:30 p.m. at the Town Common.

This season's concerts are being made available on a grant basis from the American federation of Musicians, the Arts Lottery Council and the Cohasset Recreation Department. The public is cordially invited to attend the free concerts. The first concert on June 29 will coincide with the Arts Festival, also held on the Town Common.

THE NO-COMPROMISE SOLUTION TO BUYING AN AUTOMOBILE.

When you lay out a substantial amount of money for an automobile, you should get what you want. Buying a car shouldn't be an exercise in making sacrifices.

Saab doesn't ask you to give up anything.

Superb handling and performance have made the Saab 900 one of Europe's most respected sports sedans. But that performance is delivered in return for little gas* and less fuss by a reliable two-liter engine. And unlike many other high-performance cars, the Saab is perfectly at home in the workaday world. Four adults can travel comfortably all day in a Saab, or the rear two seats can be folded flat to add extra space for cargo.

We'll be happy to tell you about a lot of other features that you won't have to give up when you buy a Saab.

SAAB
The most intelligent car ever built.

*Saab 900 5-speed. EPA estimated mpg, 36 estimated highway mpg. Use estimated mpg for comparison only. Mileage varies with speed, trip length and weather. Actual highway mileage will probably be less.

Elderly Services Coordinator

The Hanover Board of Selectmen seeks applications for the Part-time position of Elderly Services Coordinator. This position involves much public contact with Senior Citizens. A qualified applicant should have good organizational and communicative skills as well as some clerical and administrative ability.

Duties include preparing grant applications, referring the elderly to a variety of social service agencies, and answering general questions about the availability of programs and eligibility requirements.

This person will coordinate various local elderly programs available through the Council on Aging, other Town agencies, and the privately operated housing complexes. The Elderly Services Coordinator will be under the general supervision of the Council on Aging, and be responsible for supervising a Senior Aide.

This position requires a self-starter as well as someone who can work a flexible schedule. The average work week is 20 hours, and the rate of pay is $4.73 per hour, plus fringe benefits, effective July 1, 1985.

Interested persons should make application at the Selectmen's Office, Town Hall, Hanover, Mass. 02339 by June 21, 1985. The Town of Hanover is an Equal Opportunity Employer. Minorities and Females are encouraged to apply.

Land purchase renews plans for Cohasset Plaza

By Jane Lane

Developer Donald Staszko has purchased a 72,000 square foot lot on Route 3A which he will incorporate into plans to build Cohasset Plaza.

The Cohasset developer, whose plans have been stalled while undergoing review by the Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE), last week purchased the Cohasset Craftsmen property for $270,000. The steel-framed building will be removed from the site, and the land will be used "to provide the amenities" of the plaza, including parking and a greenbelt section, according to Staszko's attorney Charles Humphreys.

With the addition of the land, located to the right of the original parcel, Staszko is confident the plaza will be built.

"We are winding down on the final revisions to the plans," according to Atty. Humphreys," and we will be bringing the plan before the town boards in the very near future."

Engineers have been in the process of revising drainage and parking plans for the plaza, he stated, and with the additional land, they will make definitive changes "that will be far more satisfying to the town boards," Atty. Humphreys said.

The lawyer predicted the review by DEQE will soon be concluded, and the revised plans will be presented to the town.

Anthony Abromowich, owner of Cohasset Craftsmen, Inc., had the property for sale since the beginning of last year. The deal with Staszko went under agreement in February and was settled about 90 days later, a reasonable amount of time, according to Abromowich's attorney, Stuart Van Tine of Hingham.

One of the conditions of the quarter-million dollar sale, he said, was that Abromowich take down the steel-framed Butler-type garage used as the shop's garage.

Staszko has made numerous revisions to his original plans to construct Cohasset Plaza at the corner of Chief Justice Cushing Highway and Sohier Street. Drainage flows have been a large concern of the Conservation Commission and the DEQE, since the runoff from the plaza property would ultimately affect the watershed-Lily Pond area.

Atty. Humphreys said the developer was quite anxious to secure the Cohasset Crafstmen property, the only remaining business-zoned property available on Route 3A. With the additional land, drainage patterns can now be re-routed to "a far superior scheme," according to the attorney.

"It's an important piece of property," Humphreys said this week, "because of the down-gradient of the land. In combination with the original parcel, this land will make it much easier to solve our drainage concerns. By obtaining this land, we will have

A shining day for 'class with class'

For once, the sun was beaming down on the Class of '85. It may have poured on every other senior class occasion, but Sunday was perfect.

This "class class", the one "with personality," made it through 12 years of public education and Sunday was their turn to shine.

The 120 members of the Class of 1985 have graduated from Cohasset High School. At approximately 3:30 p.m., Superintendent Eugene Crowell officially presented the graduating class of 1985 to School Committee Chairman Joseph Nedrow. The diplomas were then handed out to the individual class members.

Prior to the awarding of diplomas, Ingrid Anderson, president of the senior class, remin isced about the past 12 years of public education in Cohasset.

When her classmates were just beginning school at the Joseph Osgood, "we were little fish in a big pond," she stated. Now, as seniors, that comparison was reversed.

Anderson spoke of the many accomplishments of this class, whether it was the state drama festival finals, state math competition, the girls and boys basketball team "or the dominant powder puff team."

She continued, "we are the embodiment of success." Credit must be given in part, according to Anderson, to "our teachers, administrators and parents," who have helped them to learn as much outside the classroom as inside.

Salutorian Gregory Igo delivered an upbeat address to his classmates. Noting that he came "to bury my high school years, and to praise them."

Igo stated, "I hope we will all go off and achieve whatever we want out of life, but what is it that we want out of life? What is the key to success? Some say it is having the key to a Rolls Royce and possessing all the money a person can dream about. Others believe success if finding that special person to spend their life with and to a start a family with. Being happy in your occupation is also a source of success. Winning in sporting events also brings joy to people.

"With today's threat of a possible nuclear war,

Town meeting begins Monday night

The summer edition of town meeting is slated for Monday, June 17 at 7:30 p.m. there are 35 articles scheduled for review, although at least three will probably be withdrawn that night.

The Special Town Meeting features several articles "left over" from April's Annual Town Meeting, including unpaid bills, contract negotiations, repair of Milliken Field, upgrading of the town's computer system, FY 85 budget deficiencies, and various repairs to Town Hall and the Bates Building.

After a discussion with selectmen Monday night, the Personnel Committee will vote Thursday night whether to withdraw an article requesting $25,000 for a reclassification study and evaluation system for the town's non-union employees.

Article 7 requests an appropriation for a consultant to complete a classification study, together with a job performance evaluation system. Department heads would also be trained in the evaluation system.

Selectmen Diane Sullivan and Chairman Frank England complained about the high costs, and suggested alternatives at a lower price. Selectman Cliff Mitman argued that their $25,000 figure was the highest estimate to cover the entire process, and the actual cost could be $14,000 to $20,000.

Selectman Mary Jane McArthur stated Monday night that it was clear the board did not fully comprehend what they wanted from the study, and the article should be withdrawn until more research is completed.

Chairman England and Personnel Committee member Janet Daggert suggested that proposals be developed. Consultants could submit exactly what they would accomplish and the specific price. Once the information is complete, the committee could present it to Town Meeting, perhaps by the fall.

Selectman Sullivan had contacted the Town of Weymouth, which recently completed a similar study at a total cost of $14,000. But that study was without the performance evaluation tool, she noted.

Cohasset's week

Watershed meeting

Bill Baird of Cohasset will speak before the Cohasset Watershed Area Protection Committee at 8 p.m. at the Bates building on Elm Street, Cohasset, across from the Police and Fire Station.

Baird is a registered professional engineer and a graduate of Lafayette College, where he received a degree in engineering. He received a master's degree in Business Administration from Boston College. Baird is president of two companies, Webb Engineering and Leak Detection Systems.

He plans to discuss the problems of testing underground storage tanks and will describe a method he has invented. Baird has been very active in the field of environmental engineering and will cover other topics of interest on this subject.

The meeting will be open to anyone who wishes to attend and should be of interest to people concerned with the control of hazardous wastes.

Electric Co. opposed

The Eastern Edison Co. has notified the planning board of its opposition to the utility route proposed in the new King Street subdivision.

"We expect that the developers recognize we will not allow any construction of buildings or the changing of the grade of the land within our right of way as this could affect the integrity of our supply of power to your citizens," Claims Supervisor George Dupree wrote.

Also of concern to the electric company "is the apparent eradication of an existing way, which, according to our records, is 82.5 feet in width and was laid out in the year 1670," he noted.

Dupree continued, "Your Historical Commission has identified this way as "Hezekiah's Way", an ancient way laid out in 1670, as a division between the Second and Third sections of your town."

According to the company, it "looks as though at least two houses would be situated directly upon the location of the way." This undeveloped ancient way, he stated, gives the electric company a possible access from King Street to the company's land.

"We therefore, voice our objection to what appears to be the eradication of said "way" between our property and King Street and ask that the layout of this way be preserved for the future benefit of all concerned," Dupree stated.

Sewer commission okay

Despite an earlier rejection by the Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE), the sewer commission voted to approve an application to locate the South Shore Art Center in the auto body shop site at 115 Ripley Road.

DEQE had indicated in a letter last month, that approval for moving the art center to the auto body shop would not be allowed because of the increase in pollutant loading and possible sewer flow increase. Because the town is banned from increasing its sewer flow, the DEQE forwarded the letter to the art center, stating its objection to the proposed move.

Sewer Commission Chairman Charles DeSantis notified the DEQE late last month that the Cohasset commission favored the proposed relocation.

DeSantis maintained the art center's use of the property would reduce the pollutant loading "and more importantly removes the potential for the introduction of harmful commercial/industrial wastes from entering our plant," he stated.

DeSantis also noted that the DEQE's warning of opposition to the move " was based on information from a private citizen, and not the Sewer Commission."

According to calculations given to the commission from the art center's engineer, there will be a significant reduction in the sewer flow and the pollutant loading will be far less than is presently experienced from the auto body shop.

DeSantis requested the DEQE act favorably upon the request from the art center.

Beechwood fence

Recreation Director Jack Worley last week asked the Tree and Park Superintendent his opinion regarding the placement of a fence at the Beechwood ballpark.

Worley stated in a letter to Peter Laugelle, "I feel that if we were able to install a fence in front of the swings, the children would be afforded a viable screen from fly balls (during a ball game). I doubt the fence would present any safety problem to ball players and if it is possible, to extend the fence over to the first base foul line, it would give a point of reference for foul balls."

Worley also noted in his letter that the department would like to place three light poles along the street side of new fence to protect it from vandalism. "I doubt that the placement of poles would present any type of safety problems, and in fact, may offer added protection to any children who may be playing inside the play area," he added.

Worley also thanked the Tree and Park Dept. for its continued help and support of the town's recreation programs and equipment.

Shellfish ban

Notice has been received by the town from the Division of Marine Fisheries that shellfishing will be banned another 30 days.

The ban on the harvest of shellfishing for human consumption includes "the waters and flats and all tributaries of Cohasset Harbor, southwest of a line drawn across the breakwater."

The shellfishing ban has been in effect for the past year. No direct source of the Cohasset Harbor pollution has been determined.

A perfect conclusion to the year establishing peace on earth would definitely be a successful venture," he added.

Igo termed Sunday's graduation a success for all its participants, and bestowed his wishes for a successful future to his friends. Quoting "that famous Greek philospher (classmate) John Colocousis, Igo predicted the future will be "a classy trip for a classy class."

Class Valedictorian Staci Stobart described the culminatiing ceremony of senior year "the beginning and the end." Noting that graduation marked the end of Cohasset education, it also was a time to set off on the future. She depicted moments of each high school year, concluding with a wish "to reach for the rainbow and catch the stardust."

Members of the Joseph Osgood National Honor Society were awarded plaques for the academic achievements during the past four years. They included Maureen Costello, Christopher A.J. Crowley, Michael Anton DeSantis, Amy Lee Duncombe, Tracy Beth Fitzpatrick, Michele Alison Griffiths, Gregory Paul Igo, Carla Lucas, Michael Leo Mahoney, James Matthew Martin, John Matthew Rattenbury, Elizabeth Marie Riley, Mason Elliott Sandell, Julia Ann Sachen, Victoria Lynn Spooner, and Staci Ann Stobart.

Principal Richard Streeter described the day as "a major milestone in their still young lives." Saying he could not predict the future of the graduates, Streeter noted that "each class is unique and each student is unique. The administration and teachers all feel extremely fortunate to have known each student, and hope in some way we had some influence on their lives."

Supt. Crowell recited a few impressive credentials from the Class of 1985. Eighty-five percent of the class has been accepted into colleges, and more than $100,000 in scholarships and grants have been awarded individual students.

"With all these things, perhaps one of the more telling characteristics is that this is a group of caring men and women. We will sorely miss their leadership and judgement," he said.

Despite their achievements, Supt. Crowell warned the students they had not yet worked up to their full potential. "Set your sights high with clear, obtainable goals. Keep the pressure on and it will pay off in big dividends," he noted.

Before he presented the diplomas to the eager graduates, Chairman Nedrow said he received a piece of advice from one of the class members. "Daddy, if you have to speak, make it short," Nedrow recalled, quoting his daughter Jill, who was among the graduating students.

On behalf of the school committee, Nedrow held "the responsibility and pleasure of conveying our sincere congratulations. We're very proud of this class of 1985."

As the boys clad in dark blue gowns, and the girls in white, walked to the stage to accept their diplomas, yells rose from various sections of the Music Circus.

Arms raised in jubilant salutes, a kiss to the diploma cover, and wide smiles from everyone were viewed by the hundreds of friends and family sitting around the circular theatre.

Girls, with mortarboards fastened onto the backs of their heads, embraced each other as they returned to their seats. The boys were more restrained, but eager to take that final walk to accept their coveted reward.

A touching scene near the conclusion of the ceremony occurred as William Langmaid was handed his diplomas from his father John, a school committee member. With a quick kiss to his father, William smiled slightly and returned his seat amidst the other proud graduates.

Chiropractic for HEALTH

by Dr. Kevin M. Neill, Chiropractic Physician

SLEEPING BEAUTY

How one sleeps is just as important as what one sleeps on. The key to good sleeping habits involves the knees. By bending the knees, the spine is unlocked into a neutral position which helps relieve muscle and ligament stress. This is why many backache sufferers prefer lying in the fetal position. This involves lying on one's side, with hips and knees bent toward the chest, and the head on the pillow. A second pillow between the knees will support the upper leg. Circulation in the lower leg then will not be blocked. It also prevents the lower back from twisting. If sleeping on one's back is preferred, put a pillow under the knees to eliminate the swayback position that is created when lying flat on one's back with the knees straight.

Awake or asleep, your "position in life" may well affect your state of well-being. Periodic chiropractic exams can serve to deal with existing problems, utilize preventive procedures and provide a learning experience so that you may attain the "position" that will best serve your overall comfort goals. For more information as well as a chiropractic exam, call the COHASSET CHIROPRACTIC OFFICE, 760 Chief Justic Cushing Hwy., Suite 12. Many insurance plans accepted as well as Workers Comp. cases. Tel, 383-1211, 1214. Cohasset school news for the week

The Kindergarten Show

Joke tellers, breakdancers, gymnasts, singers, cheerleaders, and more . . . Christine Collins' kindergarten classes displayed a variety of talents in their wonderful "Kindergarten Show." The hour-long production showcased the creativity, cooperation and dedication that abounds in Mrs. Collins' classroom.

The students chose their own acts, painted the scenery, wrote the tickets and all participated with the poise and enthusiasm of Broadway stars!

The classes performed for everyone at the Osgood School and gave an evening performance for family and friends. A cast party followed this very special show.

Top scorer

For the second straight year, a student at Cohasset High School was the top scorer for the state of Massachusetts in the American Computer Science League, which is a national contest. This year's recipient was Christopher Crowley.

Advanced students

This past school year, members of the Cohasset Mathematics Department studying advanced courses were: Dennis Walsh, Linear Algebra with Computer Applications, Harvard; Kearin Dunn, Data to Graphics in Basic, Harvard; and Charles Davis, Pascal, Boston University.

The following mathematics teachers also studied word processing, underwritten by the Commonwealth Inservice Institute: Elizabeth Beatson, Dorothy Bates, Charles Davis, Paul Hogan, Kearin Dunn and Dennis Walsh.

Japanese Homestay

Come and join the Japanese homestay program this summer in Cohasset, July 19 to Aug. 18. Host a student, find out about Japan first-hand and enjoy the fun of exchange. Students attend classes each day, and family members are welcome to join afternoon activities. For further information telephone Margot Cheel, 383-6845 or Jill Suddath, 383-9768.

Deer Hill upcoming events

Osgood School staff serves tea

The teachers and staff of the Joseph Osgood School held an afternoon tea for the many volunteers who helped in the school this year.

Principal John F. Creamer presented floral arrangements to PSO (Parent School Organization) representatives Kyle Lubitz and Joanne Chittick. Mr. Creamer thanked the group for continuing the communications link between the teachers, the administrative staff, the students and the parents.

PUTTING ON THE SWISS

Allegedly, the Swiss invented modern-day tourism. What is sure, however, is that no country in Europe is more spectacularly endowed in terms of a happy holiday. What the Swiss perfected, certainly, was the concept of super-service as applied to hotels and restaurants. From the most modest country inn to grand luxe hotels in Geneva and Zurich, travelers will be exposed to a level of personalized service that has set a standard throughout the world. After all, Swiss-born Cesar Ritz started his career in a small hotel restaurant in the Valais. He then went on in 1898 to found the prestigious Ritz Hotel in Paris. Ever since, the name Ritz has been synonymous with all that is classy and high style.

Selectmen review warrant issues

Committee member Daggert said she had seen Duxbury's reclassification study, and it was comprehensive and well done. She felt the best way to handle such sensitive personnel issues, is to hire an outside consulting firm. Selectman McArthur agreed that an outside agency would be more objective and less pressured.

"If we do it, let's do it right," Mitman said Monday night. "Let's see what the personnel committee decided Thursday night."

Daggert also noted that the committee "will probably" withdraw a second article dealing with town employees' vacations. She said the proposed bylaw change is "poorly worded" and more work needed to be completed before it is brought before town meeting.

Also scheduled for withdrawal from the warrant is the acceptance of a police union contract. Town officials and the union are not close to a settlement at this time.

There is an article requesting $58,722 to effectuate the agreement between the town and the firefighters' union.

Selectmen and the advisory committee agree on several articles within the warrant, including a $42,000 appropriation to upgrade the town's ailing computer system. According to calculations made by Data National, additional equipment will assist in speeding the data processing time. Various town departments have complained that processing through the computer system is ineffective.

The Water Dept., which is a primary computer user, has said this attempt to resolve the problems has not been successful. During the past few months, the additional computer equipment has been on loan to the town from Data National.

Both selectmen and advisors agree on the need to pay $30,000 in additional legal fees occurred in the town's fight to obtain funding for the waste water management plan.

Both advisors and selectmen have opposed an appropriation of $20,000 for repairs to Milliken Field. The Capital Budget Committee and advisors have stated that repairs can be made piece-by-piece through community contributions.

There are several appropriation requests from the Highway Dept., all of which have been recommended by selectmen and the advisory committee. Grading of the landfill access site for a cost of $20,000 will be needed to locate a state-funded salt shed there.

Highway Surveyor Harold Litchfield has stated that without the June appropriation, the town will lose the state's support for the sale shed. Currently, the salt used on the town roads is stored outside the Highway Dept. barn.

There is also a request to appropriate $10,000 to purchase a four-wheel drive Highway Dept. vehicle, and $8000 to make repairs to the roadway and retaining wall in the area of 121 Jerusalem Road.

Among the other articles to be considered at the Special Town Meeting is $4500 for a 600-foot litter fence at the Cedar Street landfill, a $1522 transfer to cover increased insurance costs for the Water Dept., $5000 to replace deteriorated sills under the Bates Building, $3500 to replace the deteriorated hardware on the Town Hall front doors, and a change in the fence regulations as proposed by the planning board.

Government board reviews plans for engineer

By Karen Cubie

The Town Government Structure Committee discussed the need for a town maintained engineer with Mr. Tom Cook, a representative from the Drainage Advisory Committee at their June 11 meeting.

According to Mr. Cook, the enforcing of a possible drainage bylaw is the duty that the Drainage Committee would assign a Town engineer if one was maintained.

'Our committee has been working for two years on drainage by laws at the request of selectmen,' Mr. Cook said. 'We have been responding to citizen's complaints. Our biggest problem is the enforcement issue. The Building Inspector is not qualified to enforce any kind of drainage by law. We need a site permit in town. As it stands, you can do anything you want to change the topography of your land, and effect the drainage, as long as a building isn't involved, or you are not within 100 ft of wetlands.'

The Committee agreed that there was a need for an enforcement bylaw, however, they weren't sure that a new position would be necessary to uphold it.

'These are extensive and real problems, not aesthetic or imagined abuses?' Committee member Osborne Ingram asked Mr. Cook. 'I just have a feeling that there have been a few excesses and abuses, and as a result, there'll be a sweeping control of every activity in town.'

'I should have brought my file,' replied Mr. Cook. 'We spend most of our time reacting to reported abuses of drainage.'

Committee Chairman John McNabb asked if a bylaw would primarily serve to protect the public interest.

'In the long run it would be in the public interest,' McNabb replied. 'It will effect the quantity of water in the Brook, especially when Main St. floods twenty or thirty years from now. Right now the problems are individual. It's hard to say that something like that is in the public interest, but when you add this one to this one, in twenty years it will be in the public's best interest.'

Cook claimed that the engineering position would require not a specialist, but a jack-of-all-trades. He feels that the job would be a basic one that someone right out of school could handle it.

Committee member Jean Cotton claimed that Mr. John Modzelewski has already been performing the job that a town engineer would do.

'If a drainage bylaw is passed without placing the enforcement responsibilities on the Building Inspector, would it be all right to continue using an engineer like Modzelewski?' Committee member Chartis Langmaid asked Cook.

Cook claimed that it would probably be an adequate solution to the problem.

The Committee finished discussing the problem, and will continue to investigate the town need of an engineer.

Committee Chairman McNabb updated the Committee on his recent action against the Selectmen's closed meeting a few weeks ago.

'The selectmen were already under court order,' he said. 'They could be in the position of being in violation of court order. I talked to the Assistant D.A, and he was not able to tell me when he would get around to it. I understand that he has a heavy schedule, but they are supposed to react promptly to open meeting violations. I will send him another letter to spur him on.'

McNabb stressed that the action against the Selectmen was not a function of the Committee, but something that he took upon himself as a private citizen.

The Committee closed the meeting with a discussion of the Town's desire to combine the positions of Town Accountant and Executive Secretary.

Before the town proposed this change, the Committee had already agreed to support their a proposal to remove the Town Accountant from the Civil Service.

'We had voted on the Civil Service question before the question of the combined position arose,' McNabb claimed. 'We reserve judgement on the combining of the two positions.'

The Committee agreed to invite Mr. Donald Andrew, the temporary Town Accountant/Executive Secretary to their next meeting on June 25 in order to discuss the possible combined position in further detail.

More land added to plaza plans control of the drainage flows, which is a far superior scheme to what we had before."

Another concern of the planning board and the zoning board of appeals was the restricted number of parking spaces, in relation to the square footage of the plaza building. Atty. Humphreys said a portion of this land will be used to satisfy the board's requirements for parking. In addition, it will be utilized as a greenbelt area within the plaza property.

With the purchase of the Cohasset Craftsmen property, Atty. Humphreys said Staszko is confident the plaza plans will proceed successfully.

"Cohasset Plaza is not a dead issue," he stated. "We are hopeful it will be moving forward in the very near future. We expect the DEQE review to be resolved very soon, and we will be presented revised plans to the town after that."

Cohasset Craftsmen, Inc. was located at the site for the past three and a half years. A resident of Hingham, former owner Abromowich said his plans for the future are undecided.

When asked why he decided to sell the business he answered with "no comment."

Selectmen hear harbor complaints

Complaints were issued this week about the way the new harbor bylaw regulations are being administered.

At Monday night's selectmen meeting, two residents had some harsh comments about the new strict enforcement of the bylaws. Both boatowners received certified letters demanding their boats be removed from the harbor moorings by midnight on Saturday because they have failed to pay their mooring fees. According to Ward Grant, who received a letter this week, Harbormaster Harry Ritter has sent 22 letters to commercial and pleasure boat mooring holders in town.

Both Grant and Joseph McCool stated they had paid their 1985 mooring fees. However, they admitted they have been utilizing a mooring assigned a smaller boat.

McCool explained that he bought a 28-foot boat this season, although he has a mooring assigned a 25-foot vessel. He submitted his name on the waiting list for moorings, to obtain a new mooring for the smaller boat. But because he had not reaffirmed his position on that list, as is required in the harbor bylaw, his name has been dropped down the list. That means a wait of several more years before he obtains a mooring for the new boat. In the meantime, McCool said he is in violation of the mooring-size regulation, and has been ordered out of the harbor.

"If it means I have to go out tommorrow and buy a 25-foot boat and sell this one, I'll do it," he noted, adding that the new regulations burden the boatowners with unreasonable financial and legal hardships.

Because the harbormaster has given the 22 boatowners a deadline of Saturday, there is some urgency to resolving the situation, selectmen noted. According to Grant, Harbormaster Ritter said if the boat is not removed, he will be fined $100 per day.

Grant explained he is violating the bylaw by mooring a boat one-foot longer than the boat assigned that mooring. He also argued about the way the bylaw is being enforced. Saying the town was treating him "very unfairly," Grant said that when he bought the larger boat last year, Ritter noted the difference and helped him design and set a new, larger mooring block. At no time did he indicate to Grant he could not use the mooring with the larger boat.

Both men argued about the way the bylaw was being enforced and worried they were being "singled out," and being punished for minor violations.

Selectmen assured them they were not being unfairly punished, and that all violators were to be notified. They did concede, however, that many residents may be unaware of the new harbor bylaw.

McCool said he was not familiar with the bylaw, and suggested that all boatowners receive a copy. Because that had not been done, he was unaware that he had to reaffirm his position on the mooring list this year.

He proposed that boatowners pay $5 per year to reaffirm their mooring list position, and in return, they be sent a copy of the list so they'd know where they were among the mooring waiters.

Selectmen also noted that whether a boat was one foot or ten feet longer, they were still in violation if their boats are at a mooring assigned a smaller boat.

Selectmen were confused why the letters had been written so soon. They voted last week to extend the mooring dues payment and reaffirmation list two weeks to June 20. Selectmen said at that time, the harbormaster would have the authority to prosecute any violator under the criminal court.

Selectman Diane Sullivan questioned the men about the mooring violations. She asked, "would Harry have known just by looking that you had a bigger boat?"

Grant answered affirmatively and added, "he even helped last year to design the block, splice the ropes and set it." He requested that selectmen ensure that the bylaws be uniformly enforced.

"Do you think we should go after someone whose boat is ten feet longer (than the original mooring assignment), but not one foot?" she asked.

The men answered they are not against the present bylaw, they are opposed to way in which it is being enforced. They emphasized that the letter from Ritter stated they are in violation because they lack a permit, which does not apply to them.

Selectmen agreed the two men were not in immediate danger of losing their moorings, since technically the letter does not apply to their circumstances.

Chairman Frank England assured the men he would talk with the harbormaster and get back to them within a couple of days. "We're just trying to treat everyone fairly," he stated.

After the meeting, McCool emphasized that the harbor bylaw is a "good law, one I can live with." His major concern is that "I wanted a bigger mooring, but because I didn't know I had to reaffirm my place on the waiting list, I'm out." McCool said it would be several years before he reaches the top of the prioritized list.

Cheese and butter

Government surplus cheese and butter will be distributed by the Social Service League of Cohasset, at the end of June.

Recipients must show their participation in any of the following: Food stamps, AFDC, Welfare, SSI-Disability, Medicaid, Head Start, Fuel Assistance, WIC, Veterans' Aide, or unemployment, or they may declare that their family size and gross income fall within the current fuel assistance income range i.e. for one person, $7,875; for two, $10,575; for three, $13,275; for four, $15,975.

If you qualify, call the office before June 19, 383-0771 or 383-0821, in order to request the food items and arrange for pick-up.

☐ Attention to all basketball players! There is going to be a camp, especially for girls in grades 6-11, that will be held June 24-28, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Cohasset High School. Any girl that is interested in attending should contact Bill Fallon at 925-2416 or Ed Amaral at 749-1770 for information, remember that registration closes on June 17. As we all know, Bill Fallon had an extremely successful season last year, so any camp/program that he is involved with is sure to be the best. And, the philosophy of the Coastal Basketball Camp certainly states what the camp is all about . . . "The philosophy of the Coastal Basketball Camp is to teach the fundamentals of basketball, both individual and team, while having fun and gaining new friendships. We believe that athletic competition can greatly enhance a youngster's personal growth and self esteem." Be sure to contact Coach Fallon or Mr. Amaral for more information and don't forget that the deadline is June 17.

☐ For those parents that remember painting the map on the parking lot in back of the Osgood School, you will remember that the job was a long and tiring one. Rewarding too, but long! For those that don't know about it, it is painted right on the parking lot, and is about 20' by 10' in size. Well, it seems that one of the parents that was in on the initial painting saw that it was fading a few weeks ago, and decided to ask Principal Jack Creamer about same . . . when she went in to do so, Mr. Creamer was sort of bent over, walking with a tilt. It seems that he had noticed the same problem with the map and decided to take on the project by himself. He started at 5:30 one morning a few weeks ago, and finished it four hours later, on a weekend morning, when most of us were asleep . . . now, I'd call that real dedication!

☐ Congratulations go out to Bill McKenna, who was one of the soccer players chosen to go abroad to play soccer. There will be 90 players representing 17 states that will be going to match their skills against their European counterparts. The trip will last 20 days, and will include England, Holland, West Germany and Belgium. There are six tournament games scheduled, as well as clinics that will be held with European coaches. And what an opportunity to tour Euorpe! Have a wonderful time, Bill.

After the race is over, there's still work to be done. Deer Hill competitors (L to R) Katie Ryan, Kendra Taylor, Allison Reilly and Katie Lord try to remove flag after three-legged race.

☐ Even famous "Around Town" columnists make mistakes . . . seems that when I reported about the Burke family and their reunion, I said that Andrea was an aspiring "sister" and I should have said aspiring singer . . . Andrea has a real talent in the singing department, and it should have been noted! Anyway, it is now, sorry Andrea.

☐ Congratulations to John Pape, who was presented the Eagle Scout Award. John worked long and hard to earn this honor, and is to be commended.

☐ Here's hoping that officer Jack Rhodes is feeling much better and will be back in A-OK condition real soon.

☐ Don't forget the Bloodmobile on June 17, to be held at the Unitarian Parish House. The hours are from 2:30 to 7:30 p.m.

☐ This week marks the end of an era . . . Paragon Park is to be auctioned off, then the dismantling begins. Surely will make a number of kids sad this summer.

☐ Michael Cisneros makes the news again, this time in the math department. He placed fifth in a math competition sponsored by the New England Math League. That's out of 600 students in New England . . . he placed first in Norfolk County! As you remember, Mike is strong in the spelling department too!

☐ Cornelia Grant, of 258 South Main Street, received a Bachelor of Arts degree from Hamilton College in commencement exercises Sunday, May 26.

Cornelia majored in Government and minored in History at Hamilton. Over 400 students were awarded diplomas in the ceremony, which marked the conclusion of the college's academic year.

Cornelia is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Galt Grant.

☐ Brenda M. Birmann, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gerhard Birmann, received a Bachelor of Arts degree in Biology/Psychology from Middlebury College at commencement exercices on Sunday, May 26. The ceremonies marked the end of the Vermont liberal arts college's 185th academic year. She graduated Magna Cum Laude, and was a member of Phi Beta Kappa.

☐ Graduating from Bridgewater State College were: Anne Cifrino of 724 Jerusalem Road, Art; Heather Fairchild of 49 Pleasant St., Biology; and Thomas Goyette, Physical Education, Cum Laude.

☐ Carol A. Bestick of 555 Beechwood St. received a BS in Accountancy from Bentley College at commencement ceremonies May 18.

☐ That seems to be the week from here, please be sure to keep us informed of your news.

☐ Again, congratulations to the Class of 1985 and continued success to one and all.

Bay State action

Area residents will have a chance to see their local track and field athletes in action on Sunday, June 16, when Norwell High School hosts the South Shore and Cape Cod qualifying meet for the Bay State Games.

Coordinator and coach of Norwell's championship girls' track team, Robert Littlefield, said the meet would start in Norwell at 9 a.m. and, he expected, would include some 300 athletes from across the South Shore and Cape.

The Bay State Games will be held July 11 to 14 and are this state's largest summer track and field competition. They provide athletes with a state-wide sports event when all of the college and high school seasons have ended.

The games are open to all high school, college, and experienced track and field athletes. They provide a team environment in a sport that highlights individual performance and they give athletes the opportunity to consult with coaches from across the state.

Anyone interested in entering the games may obtain an entry form from their high school's track coach or they may call 727-3227. Athletes may compete in two track events and one field event or one track event and two field events, in addition to one relay. The regional relay teams will be chosen at the qualifying meets. The top three finishers in each event will advance to the finals in Boston.

Science Center News

Programs for the South Shore Natural Science Center, Jacobs Lane, Norwell, include:

Story in Stone, Wednesday, June 19, 10 a.m. to noon. History and human interest are found in South Shore stone. Join Hingham historian, a teacher and stone sleuth, Phil Swanson, as he leads you through some historic areas of the South Shore. Find out why early grave stones are made of slate, what architectural stone is unique to the South Shore and what stories some of the stones tell.

Fee: $5 members; $6 non-members. Pre-registration requested. For further information, call 659-2559.

Don't forget that on Sunday, June 16, 1 to 4 p.m., registration for summer camp will be held, in the main building of the Science Center.

Space is now available in the program, Curl Sample Basket, scheduled for Saturday, June 15, 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. This basket workshop will be conducted by Diane Stanton. For fee and information, call 659-2559.

The South Shore Natural Science Center is located on Jacobs Lane, just off Route 123, and is open Monday to Saturday, 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., and from 1 to 4 p.m. Sundays and most holidays.

Mirage Mime Theatre

Imagine a theatre which seeks no new ideas but rather contents itself with reflections; so was born with this idea the Mirage Mime, a theatre that explores the imagery of visions, dreams and struggles.

Mirage Mime is a theatre of movement, mask and music performed in the style of Etienne Decroux, father of modern mime. With its nucleus of two men and two women, the Mirage Mime wil perform during the South Shore Art Center's 30th anniversary of its South Shore Arts Festival. The performance, for which tickets are needed, will be at 11:30 a.m. Saturday, June 29 at the Cohasset Town Hall. Tickets are available at the Center, 103 Ripley Road, in Cohasset, at the Norwell Library and the Hingham Square Book Shop.

The theatre part of the Mirage is but one segment of its functions; the Mirage offers its school of corporeal mime, the only school of its kind in New England offering daily classes in the art of corporeal mime. The schools program integrates and emphasizes six elements: physical training, technique, improvisation, research, creation and performance.

The Mirage's performance for the South Shore Arts Festival may include such a piece as "And So On" where two masked baggy-pant characters play out their hopes and fears when a brown bag offers new possibilities to the absurdity of their situation or a piece "Still Life for Clown and Crown" where a clown discovers a crown and proceeds to contemplate the glories and pitfalls of power.

Tickets to the performance are $1 per child and $2 per adult. For further information, contact the South Shore Art Center, 383-9548.

Church social

Food, fellowship and red, and white, helium-filled balloons were the ingredients for a recent picnic social held at United Church of Christ in Norwell for developmentally disabled young people from Hanover, Hingham, Hull, Cohasset, Norwell and Scituate.

Nearly 30 special needs guests and their families attended the picnic, which was the third event hosted this year by the Church Youth Group and the Ministry for the Handicapped.

A variety of indoor and outdoor games including events featuring a huge parachute, were coordinated by Jay Brabazon of Norwell.

Special thanks goes to several local merchants who contributed to the picnic: Joe Maccini of Jacob's Place in Hanover, Gary Robertson of the Corner Meat Shop at Assinippi, Richard McCarthy of McCarthy's Ice Cream in Whitman, Arnold's Bakery in Hingham, McDonald's in Hanover, Angelos and Stop and Shop grocery stores. Very special thanks also go to the members of the High School Youth Group who contributed time, energy and baked goods.

The picnic concluded with the singing of "We Are the World" and the release of balloons on the side yard of the church. It was a rewarding, wonderful afternoon for everyone.

The Law and You

by Richard Price, Attorney-at-Law

ON CREDIT CARDS

If your credit card is lost or stolen, you are responsible by law only for the first $50 that is fraudulantly charged against the account. If you think that your credit card statement is wrong, notify the credit card issuer at once. It must investigate. You need not pay the charge in question, however, until its review is finished. Moreover, although you do not pay the disputed amount while it is under investigation, the credit card company cannot charge interest on it. The company also cannot report to a credit bureau that you are in arrears. Similar rules permit you to withhold payment for defective merchandise or services until the dispute is settled.

The law is a complex matter. Protecting and understanding your rights often requires legal advice. Today many find it prudent to have a legal review before problem situations arise. For answers to your questions, a review of areas important to your lifestyle, and legal points you should think about call the LAW OFFICES OF RICHARD PRICE, 760 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy., Rt. 3A, Cohasset, 383-9882. We want to help you be in the right. I am available by appt.

To receive protection from lost or stolen credit cards, you must "complain" in writing.

A triumphant year

(This is the speech given by Class Valedictorian Staci Stobart at Sunday's Cohasset High School graduation. Ed.)

By Staci Stobart

Today is the graduation day for the Class of '85, the "class with personality." It is a day which we have all anticipated eagerly during our years at Cohasset High School, but the feeling today is bittersweet, for we all know that this day is both a beginning and an end. On one hand, the optimists among us might say that is the beginning of a new, exciting life. On the other, the pessimists might say that it is the end of our carefree youth. The realists probably see that this day is both.

We have spent six years in the hallowed halls of CHS, and we've all experienced the frustrations and successes that can be found there. Seventh grade seemed like one endless dash to class. We could always be spotted; we were the little kids carrying loads of books and looking worriedly at our schedule cards. Once we made the necessary adjustments in eighth grade, life became easier.

Then in ninth grade we entered high school, the point of no return. Suddenly grades would be on that far-off but scary college transcript. Work was more demanding. We were now lowly Freshmen instead of mighty eighth graders. Still, we endured, gave our Julius Caesar speeches, and even enjoyed things like Medieval Day. Tenth grade initiated us into the world of the term paper, with all the note cards and without the verb "to be," which was suddenly off-limits. We became experts in colonial crafts and community organizations. Again we survived, our class intact.

Finally we reached The Big Year, eleventh grade. This was the year that everyone assured us would "make us or break us." We took our PSAT's and prayed. Then we waited and worried about the test that would determine the course of our lives, the SAT. Meanwhile we struggled to keep up our grades while still finding time for all the other activities that rounded out our lives. Our class is deverse and talented; its members have been involved in sports, drama, music and many other areas. Whether it was the Powderpuff Game or a Drama Festival, our class contributed many fine competitors. By the end of junior year we had suffered through the three hour SAT and were glad to leave for the summer. Then we began to think about seriously the future. Looking at colleges, investigating job opportunities, or making other plans took up a great amount of time.

Our senior year has been a triumphant and a tragic one. And it has been a chance for all of us to get to know one another better through senior activities. Our class play, "A Blast from the Past," brought togehter many different classmates who had never known each other before.

Other activities such as Skip Day similarly united us. We produced a yearbook which made us all very proud by closely cooperating and using our creativity. Together, we held our Prom on a boat in Boston Harbor and despite the rain that seems to follow us, we all had a great time. But now June 9 has finally arrived. High school is over.

Today may be a good-bye to an old life, but goodbyes invariably lead to hellos. So today we start our lives as adults, saying goodbye to CHS and hello to future challenges. Now we must try to fulfill the promise we've shown by testing and improving ourselves.

We'll take this big step forward, some of us willingly and others not so willingly, and pack up our bags of memories to start a new kind of life. As with all new undertakings, this change has its attractions as well as its drawbacks. We will gain new independence and responsibilities, which can be exciting and scary. We'll also have more opportunities to help ourselves and, more importantly, to help others. With all our talents I hope we can use the lessons we've learned inside and outside the classroom to improve the world in some way.

Since I've used up all of my time, I'd like to thank our families, who gave us all the things we need and the teachers who pushed us. Henry David Thoreau, who has not been one of my favorite writers since my tenth grade experience with "Walden," once said' "The true harvest of life is intangible. It is a little stardust caught, a segment of the rainbow."

To my classmates I'd just like to say that I hope we all reach for our rainbows and catch our stardust. Good luck to you all and thank you.

McNabb notes court order to A.G.

(This letter was sent by John McNabb, Jr. to Attorney General William Delahunt. Ed.)

Dear Mr. Delahunt:

Please consider this letter as an ADDENDUM to my letter to you dated May 21, which was received by your office May 23. In that letter: 1) I made a complaint that the Cohasset Board of Selectmen violated the Open Meeting Law, MGL c. 39, s. 23B at an executive session on May 4 and on May 6; 2) asked you to review the minutes of the May 4 meeting and to investigate circumstances leading up to a vote of the Board on May 9; 3) requested that you make a ruling whether said meetings were held in compliance with or in violation of MGL c. 39, s 23B; and 4) that you then take appropriate action, including asking Superior Court to order the Selectmen to follow the Open Meeting Law.

Subsequent to sending that letter, I discovered that the Board of Selectmen are already under court order to follow the Open Meeting Law. On September 14, 1984, in the case of William J. Protulis et. al. vs. MaryJane McArthur et. al., Norfolk County Superior Court, Civil, Docket #141358, Justice Walter E. Steele issued the following:

"Order: The Board of Selectmen of the Town of Cohasset is ordered to strictly comply with the provisions of G.L. c. 39, s. 23B in all future meetings."

The Norfolk County Superior Court, Civil, Clerks Office has informed me that said case was concluded on November 6, 1984, and that there is no pending appeal of that order. A copy of this case and of a newspaper article regarding the order is enclosed.

That May 30, 1985 Cohasset Mariner article is the first public notice of the existence of the court order. There is absolutely no mention of the order in any Minutes of the Board of Selectmen since September 14. I checked every issue of the Mariner since September 14, and found no news story about the order. The Selectmen have not at any time made public disclosure of the fact that they were under court order to strictly comply with the Open Meeting Law.

Besides the May 4 and May 6 executive sessions cited in my May 21 letter to your office, there are many other apparent violations of MGL c. 39, s. 23B since the order was issued on September 14. It is my understanding that the Open Meeting Law a) requires that before going into executive session the presiding officer state the reason for going into executive session and that reason must be entered into the minutes of the open meeting preceding the executive session, and b) does not authorize executive sessions for the discussion of "contract negotiations."

While the meetings cited below may merely represent technical violations of the law, they may also represent in some cases serious violations of the Open Meeting Law, depending on what was discussed in the meetings in question. They all appear to be deviations from the order to "strictly" comply with the Open Meeting Law.

The following executive sessions since September 14, 1984 do not appear to have been held in "strict" compliance with MGL c. 39, s. 23B:

September 26: "Motion by Chairman Mitman to go into Executive Session at 8:30 p.m. and not return to open session." (No reason was stated for the executive session.)

November 13: "contract negotiations" was the reason stated for going into executive session

December 13: "contract negotiations" was the reason stated for going into executive session

December 19: "Motion by Selectman McArthur to go into Executive Session at 8:20 p.m. and to return to regular session later." (No reason stated for going into executive session.)

1985

February 19: "pending litigation and contract negotiations" the reason stated for executive session

February 25: "pending litigation and contract negotiations" the reason stated for executive session

March 11: "pending litigation and contract negotiations" the reason stated for executive session

March 25: "pending litigation and contract negotiations" the reason stated for executive session

May 4: "contract negotiations and litigation" the reason stated for executive session

May 6: Executive Session held for "collective bargaining and pending litigation" but I have reason to believe, for reasons stated in May 21 letter that non-executive session matters were discussed.

Also, during the open session on May 6, Chairman Frank England "asked for a five minute recess" which was then followed by two votes regarding the salary of the Acting Town Accountant at the time. It appears to me that a discussion of the Board on that subject took place during that recess out of public view, and that the reason for the "recess" was to evade the requirement of MGL c. 39, s. 23B that such discussion be held in the open. I hereby request that your office make a ruling regarding whether such a "recess" is permissible, or whether it would constitute an executive session held in violation of the Open Meeting Law.

It seems clear to me that the Selectmen have blithely ignored the court order to "strictly comply" with the Open Meeting Law, that they neither made public disclosure of the order nor publicly acknowledged the existence of the order, that they did not make any effort whatsoever to comply with the law nor the order, and that the Board of Selectmen of the Town of Cohasset have in fact shown a pattern of noncompliance with the Open Meeting Law.

I am appalled that the Selectmen would ignore such a court order, and hereby request that the Norfolk County District Attorneys office, pursuant to your enforcement authority under MGL c. 39, s. 23B, take appropriate action to enforce compliance of the law by the Cohasset Selectmen. It may be necessary to bring action in Superior Court for a finding that the Board of Selectmen are in violation of a standing court order.

Please let me know when your office will be able to act on my complaint. Prompt action with respect to the Open Meeting Law is important for effective enforcement of that law.

Thanks for the help

To the Editor:

"The Omega," our sixth grade newspaper, will soon be on the sixth grade newsstand. Many people, students, teachers and advertisers — and others — have helped to make our publication possible.

The "others" include Mrs. Jane Lane, Cohasset Mariner Editor, who gave us an 80-minute seminar a few months ago on how a newspaper works; and you, Mr. Cutler, who are printing "The Omega" for what we know to be a very reasonable price.

We felt it best to thank you for this courtesy in your own publication, as our publication will have a limited circulation.

Health Agent loves his job, hated the commute

By Karen Cubie

Dr. Joseph Godzik, Cohasset's Health Agent, did not take the job for the salary.

"I enjoy my work - the job," he said. "Any Health Agent has to like his work. If he didn't, he'd get it from all sides. You have to get self-satisfaction. There isn't any money in this job."

Although Godzik's degree is in veterinary medicine, public health has been his career.

"When I graduated, the Army said they would draft me," he said. "I decided to go into the Army Public Health Department rather than wait for the draft, and they took me immediately. Veterinary medicine was just a general medical background. When I was in the Army, most of my time was spent in Public Health."

Godzik even holds a Master's degree of Science and Public Health.

Until his retirement in July, 1982, Godzik was the Army's Deputy of Veterinary Activities for Fort Devens.

"The Army is the executive agent for the Department of Defense for all veterinary services," he said. "We supported the Army, Navy, and the Air Force in all of New England and upstate New York. It involved a lot of traveling which was one of the reasons I retired."

Godzik still misses the Army occasionally.

"I miss some of the larger interactions," he said. "Here in town it's different. We interact mostly with other towns and the state. With the Army, we interacted on the Federal level, and with larger agencies."

Like most Army families, the Godzik family managed to see a lot of the world.

"My family loved traveling," he said. "My kids can't understand how anyone could never go anywhere. We lived in Belgium for three years, and I was stationed in France for three years. We got to travel all over Europe."

Godzik even met his wife in France.

"We met when she was teaching for the Army school system there," he said. "I'm glad it happened that way."

The Godzik family has lived in Pepperel, New Hampshire for the past seven years. Last week they finally moved to Scituate. Godzik has been living alone in Cohasset on weekends. He is thankful to end the long commute and separation.

"It was a situation that no one liked," he said. "We're beach people. That's one of the reasons that we moved here. It's a beautiful area."

Dr. Joseph Godzik

As Cohasset's Health Agent, Godzik's duties are varied.

"I deal with anything related to Public Health not in the direct purview of the state," he said. "I'm in charge of anything on the town level. This includes food, sewage, water, housing, environmental health, and communicable diseases.

"I'm also concerned with safety, seat belts, etc.," he continued. "And I'm the Municipal Coordinator of the Right to Know Law."

The aspect of the job Godzik finds most challenging is the problem of communicable diseases.

"I've had a lot of experience (dealing with them)," he said. "But most of them are controlled by the state."

According to a state statute, doctors are required to report all of these diseases to the Town Health Agent.

"The diseases that I'm most likely to hear about are hepatitis, measles, food poisoning, and salmonellosis," he said. "Chicken pox and strep throat are reported all the time, I haven't had any reports of rubella (German measles). The other diseases are fairly exotic and we don't usually hear about them."

As the Health Agent, Godzik also acts as the Animal Inspector.

"However, the duties of the inspector are split," he explained. "The dog officer does quarantine work which is also under the jurisdiction of the animal inspector. I look at horses, cattle, sheep, goats and fowl. I basically do an inventory to see if they're healthy and I enforce stable requirements."

Godzik hasn't encountered many serious problems since he arrived in Cohasset. Sewage, however, seems to be the most pervasive problems.

"Cohasset is built on ledge and clay," he noted. "The water from sewage does not have the tendency to go through those things. We always have problems with septic system. Systems are constantly failing."

Godzik is usually in his office on Elm Street between 8:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesdays. On Thursdays, his office is open between 8:30 a.m. and 8 p.m. On Friday, he is usually in between 8:30 a.m. and 1 p.m.

"People who have questions about things affecting houses should see me," he added. "If people live in a house they don't feel is being adequately maintained by the landlord, they should report it to me."

Between his retirement from the Army in 1982, and the start of his position in Cohasset in 10 months ago, Godzik acted as member of the Board of Health in Pepperel.

"Cohasset has a lot more affluence," he said when asked to compare the two towns. "Pepperel has a wider socio-economic spectrum than Cohasset. Town government is operated pretty much the same way. They do good things, and they mess up some things."

"GOING TO THE DOCTOR GIVES ME THE WILLIES."

Going to the doctor can make a perfectly mature, intelligent adult suddenly feel like a helpless child. That's why it's important to find a doctor you can talk to. Someone who's there when you need them. Somebody smart enough to know what they don't know.

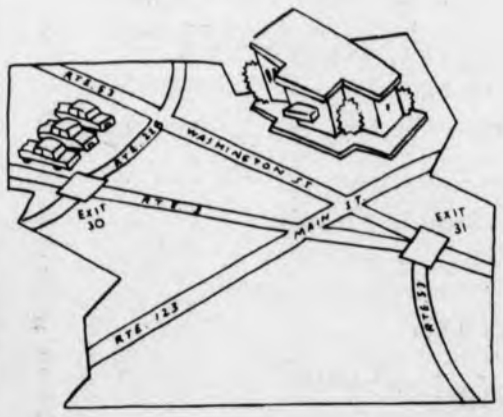
When you're looking at medical plans, it's hard to be smart enough. There are important differences between plans. And some of them are not apparent on the surface.

Some plans exist just to process claims and pay bills. You are only a policyholder. When it comes to finding the right doctors or dealing with emergencies, you're on your own. In today's medical world, that's no place to be.

At MultiGroup, you get more than after the fact coverage. You get a relationship with a doctor and a medical group. We cover almost everything, from the routine stuff many plans don't cover – to complete hospital care.

MultiGroup is a total approach to medical care, instead of a fragmented approach. It should be more expensive, but it isn't.

If you'd like to know more about us, we invite you to begin at the beginning. With a free booklet that explains your options.



It's called Apples & Oranges, or How to Choose a Health Plan. For your copy, call 1-800-543-3300.

SS Art Center news

Children's art for the summer

As the school doors about to close for the summer vacation, parents are beginning to look for creative outlets for their children.

The South Shore Art Center, 103 Ripley Road in Cohasset, offers many opportunities for young artists to explore their artistic ability. Kicking off the summer is a children's art week taught by Serena Brundige June 24 through June 28, 10:30 a.m. to noon.

She will work with her students outdoors doing drawing, painting and mixed media projects. Individual guidance will be given to students. The workshop is geared for students age seven to eleven.

A Teen Landscape Painting course begins July 9 and will meet Tuesday and Thursdays, 4 to 6 p.m. Students will work drawing and painting projects dealing with landscape, composition, color and form. The course is designed for teens, twelve to sixteen.

Susan Rodgerson will teach a Child's Art Workshop for ages seven to eleven beginning July 9 and meeting Tuesday and Thursday, 2 to 3:30 p.m. Students will use a variety of materials in combination with one another. Activities will emphasize individual expression and explore art concepts.

Paint and Draw Outside taught by Lisbeth Koopman-Wyman comes August 6 and is also for ages seven to eleven. This class meets Tuesdays and Thursdays from 2 to 3:30 p.m. Students will learn about design, composition, and color using craypas, tempera and watercolors.

A Child's Clay and Sculpture workshop led by Syma will meet for one week July 15 through July 19 for ages six to twelve. Clay, cardboard, wood, recycled materials and lots of imagination will be used to create three-dimensional art work and to teach youngsters basic design.

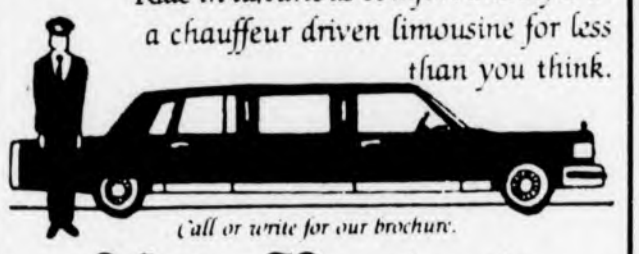
Advanced registration is required for these courses as well as all classes on the summer schedule. The first session of the summer begins July 8 and the second session begins August 5. Call the South Shore Art Center, 383-9548 for a complete class schedule.

Ketcham exhibit

In working with his oils, artist Scott Ketcham attempts to capture on canvas the "spirit of beauty in the world I see."

Ketcham's works will be featured in the South Shore Art Center President's Choice exhibit which will hang during the month of July in the invitational gallery of the Center, 103 Ripley Road in Cohasset. His show will run concurrently with a collection of work done by artists attending Virginia Avery's "St. Maarten's Holiday."

The opening reception Friday, June 28 from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m., comes on the first day of the Center's 30th anniversary of its South Shore Art Festival. Immediately following the opening will be the Ray Smith and the Paramount Jazz Band concert at Cohasset Town Hall. Tickets are needed for this concert and may be purchased through the Center. Smith and his band will lead a jazz parade from the Center to the Town Hall.



Ketcham, a current recipient of a Cohasset Arts Council grant, is a young multi-talented person working on the South Shore. He graduated with a B.A. in painting from Williams College in Williamstown. He has studied privately with William Schultz of Lenox and Clement Micarelli of the South Shore.

His grant from the Cohasset Arts Council was given to him to be applied toward the purchase of materials for his work. He is affiliated with the South Shore Art Center and the Scituate Art Association.

The St. Maarten's painting trip led by artist/teacher Virginia Avery allowed participants the opportunity to work on their art while learning of the beauty and culture of this island. The work in the exhibit reflects the artists' interpretation of their time on the island.

The exhibit will continue through July 31 and is open to the public Monday through Friday, noon to 4 p.m. For further information, contact the South Shore Art Center, 383-9548.

Strawberry Parfait splits the difference

By Melissa Barcomb

The Strawberry Parfait softball team came away with a win and a loss at Sunday's doubleheader played at Beechwood.

After Sunday's record, Parfait now has a record of five wins and seven losses.

Hingham's Ocean Kai II had some strong batters during game one. Hingham led 4-0 at the bottom of the fourth inning.

David Patrolia hit a ground rule double bringing in two runs for Parfait. The fifth inning began with a score of 4-3, Hingham.

Ocean Kai came in with another run bringing the score to 5-3, despite the impressive, strong outfield plays by Paul Lemieux, Danny Cahil, and Kevin Dooley.

Although Mark Schwinn and Paul Lemieux caught the first two outs, Ocean Kai II managed to get in one more run.

With a score of 6-3, in the seventh inning, Hingham had a ground rule double and brought in another run bringing the score to 9-3.

In the bottom of the seventh inning, Magee came in with a run for the Parfait and game one ended with a loss of 9-4.

Parfait had some strong hitting in game two.

Kevin Dooley's double and David Patrolia's hit brought in two runs.

By the bottom of the third inning, the Parfait provided four more runs.

Paul Lemieux caught two of the three outs for the Parfait defense for the fifth inning with a 6-0 lead.

Frank Kelly hit a single and came home off of Kevin Dooley's single in the top of the seventh inning to extend the lead.

In the bottom of the seventh inning, Parfait displayed some great defensive action.

John Usher caught the first out, Hans Bauer made a nice catch, and Mark Schwinn got the third out.

Game number two ended with a score of 7-0, Strawberry Parfait.

Now grant for Library

The Paul Pratt Memorial Library has received a gift of $25 from the South Shore Chapter of the National Organization of Women. The educational grant was awarded for the purchase of additional non-sexist materials for the children's department.

Titles purchased are "She's Nobody's Baby: a History of American Women in the 20th Century" by Susan Dworkin and "Women Who Changed Things" by Linda Peavy.

These and other books on the subject of changing roles for boys and girls are available in the children's room.

Gardeners meeting

The next meeting of the "Amateur Gardeners of Cohasset" will be June 18 and will be a trip and luncheon at Strawberry Banks, Portsmouth, New Hampshire.

Members will meet in the parking lot of Cohasset Town Hall at 9 a.m. for transportation.

30th anniversary

The 30th anniversary of the South Shore Arts Festival will take on a different dimension this year—a raffle of four works of art by South Shore artists.

The works will be raffled off at the end of the festival which occurs June 28-30 on the Cohasset Common and in Town Hall. Pieces included in the raffle are "Still Life Study," a watercolor by Judith Campbell Reed; a limited edition print of Canada Geese, "Rites of Spring," by Roy Thompson; "Festival '84", a light sunny watercolor of last year's festival by Judeth Van Hamm Weirs; and "Petworth House," an oil and pastel painted in England of Turner's estate by Tom Lucas.

The works will be on display, as well as raffle tickets being sold, on the Cohasset common during the festival, at the Champagne Preview at Yankee Co. Inc.'s corporate headquarters at the OAKS, at the jazz concert Friday, June 28 at 8 p.m. and at other special events. Tickets may also be purchased in advance at the South Shore Art Center, 103 Ripley Road, in Cohasset. Ticket price is $1 or 6 for $5.

Oaks host auction

There was something for everyone at the first annual Big Sister Association auction on May 19 at the Oaks Estate in Cohasset. Formerly the Jessie B. Cox Estate the Oaks is now the corporate headquarters for the Yankee companies.

Rainy skies cleared by early afternoon when guests began arriving and in a few hours over $11,000 was raised to benefit the 34 year-old agency. The Big Sister Association matches girls aged seven to 15 with selected women volunteers who serve as positive role models. The Big Sister agency of Greater Boston is the oldest and largest Big Sister agency in the country.

The highest bid for the day went for a cocktail cruise for 10 couples aboard a 66-foot motor yacht. Valued at $1,300 the cruise sold for $2,100! Other popular items which provoked vigorous bidding included a run with Joan Benoit, a flight with Channel 5's Chet Curtis in his private plane, an NBA basketball autographed by the Celtics, and 10 pounds of Godiva chocolates (valued at $200).

A few Big and Little Sisters were on hand to carry the goods through the crowd of potential buyers. Auction etiquette did not come easily to eight year-old Little Sister Mercy Watson who cried when her $2 bid to see the Red Sox was outbidded 10 times over. In the end she was all smiles when Big Sister Board Director Bill Markey gave Mercy tickets to watch the Sox play.

The function was co-chaired by Big Sister Board members Betsey Montle, Priscilla Swift and Jack Agnew, who served as auctioneer. Paul Montle is president of the Yankee Companies and provided the Oaks Estate to house the fundraising event.

Youth choir concert

Thirty high school students will be in concert Sunday, June 23 at 7:30 p.m. in the Cohasset Town Hall.

The students are from the Far Hills Baptist Church in Dayton, Ohio. The concert will include an adaption of the religious folk music, "The Witness," by Jimmy Owens.

Swim team tryouts

Join the Cohasset Swim Team! Try-outs will be held Friday, June 21 after school and Saturday, June 22 from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m. for new members.

Registration for last year's members will be held at these same times. Payment of $40 should be made at this time and pool membership is required.

Boosters meeting

The June meeting of the Cohasset Boosters Club will be held at Ruth Nedrow's house, 21 Fair Oaks Lane, June 16 at 2:30 p.m.

The Boosters support all sports in the high school. All are welcome. For information, call 383-9292.

Second Congregational Church

Church committee - will meet on June 16 at 8 a.m. Please note this changed time.

Friday, June 21 - Pot Luck Supper and Entertainment for everyone. Talent Show (please let us know soon what you're doing) plus a dimension of the choir you've never suspected!

Village Fair - There are only 21 Boutique Table workshops left before the Village Fair! This year our church is working with First Parish Church on the Boutique Table. Our workshops are on Monday evenings at 7:30 p.m. in Bates Hall. If you can't make it to workshops, and you would like to do your fair share for the fair, you could contribute one of the following items: a bag of 100 percent polyester fibre polyfil, wood for ornaments, one yard heavy white felt, dowels, new golf tees, tiny ornaments, or quilt batting. We always need donations of fabric -calico or small prints and wool plaids, trims, ribbon, etc. Join us for fun and fellowship Monday evenings, Carol Sandblom, 383-1812.

Bloodmobile - Monday, June 17 from 2:30 to 7:30 p.m. at the Unitarian Parish House. Please call Vi Tuthill, 383-1627 and plan to share the gift of life.

First Parish Church

Summer Sunday services - To provide opportunities for quiet meditation, renewal of spirit and the sharing of fellowship - the Meeting House will be open every Sunday this summer from July 7 through September 1 from 9 - 10 a.m. for Informal Service.

Sally and Dick Wheeler are coordinating these nine Sunday morning gatherings. They are looking for additional volunteers who will be willing to lead or assist in these services. There are still a few open dates to be filled. Please call the Wheelers at 383-0968 for additional information and your availability.

To all committee chairpersons - Annual Meeting reports should be submitted to the church office immediately!

New address - Martha Blackmur, Oak Hill Nursing Home, 76 North Street, Middleboro, Mass. 02346.

Music - A couple of years ago, the choir was asked to sing a large section of Mendelssohn's "Elijah" and many people were disappointed because they missed it.

We've been asked to repeat this service on June 29. We invite our neighbors and friends to join and sign with us. Special rehearsals are June 12 and 19 at 8 p.m. in the Meeting House.

St. Anthony's Church

Baptisms - Meaghan Ingman Friel, and Joseph A. Richardson.

Banns of Marriage - Daryl David - David Graybus; Beth Ann Donahue - David Seraikas; Tracy Campion - Robert Tatulli; Diane Zampine - Dennis Burke; Andrew Trask - Susan English.

Foyer of Charity Fair - Saturday, June 15 from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. at 74 Hollett Street in Scituate. Events include: White Elephant table, plants, arts and crafts, Father's Day cakes, and baked goods, children's games, and activities.

Cenacle Retreat Center - Scripture Study and Prayer offers you a wonderful opportunity to meet God through the Bible, to relax and enjoy the breeze of the Spirit. For more information on this retreat (July 16 - 20) and others coming up, contact Sr. Susan Arcaro at 254-3150.

Summer service at Lutheran Church

The Lutheran Church of the Cross on Rte. 139 announces an additional summer service.

Beginning June 13 there will be a 7:30 p.m. Thursday evening service. This is offered as an alternative to the 9:15 a.m. Sunday service. Although designed especially for folks who will be out of town on weekends, it is open to everyone. Visitors are most welcome.

The format for the services will be less formal, with music provided by piano or guitar. Holy Communion will be celebrated at each service.

Obituaries

Elizabeth Osgood Tower

Elizabeth Osgood (Collier) Tower died in Cohasset on May 26 after a long illness. She was born in Cohasset in 1888, was graduated from Cohasset High School and Radcliffe College, class of 1910, and she had studied at the Harvard Graduate School of Education. Her specialty was teaching students with reading problems which she did in Boston and at her home in Cohasset.

She had been chairman of the U.S.O. in Cohasset during World War II, had served on the Cohasset School Committee, had been a founding member of the Cohasset Discussion Club, had been chairman of the 50th reunion of her college class, and active in alumni activities of Radcliffe College.

She was the widow of the late Gilbert S. Tower. She leaves a son, Osgood Tower, and a daughter, Frances Maroni, both of Fairfax County, Virginia, ten grandchildren and eleven great-grandchildren. She also leaves her brother, Edmund Collier of Duxbury.

There will be a memorial service at the First Parish Meeting House in Cohasset at 5 p.m., Tuesday, June 25.

John Harvey Walsh

John Harvey Walsh, 25, of Boca Raton, Fla., formerly of Cohasset, died suddenly June 1.

Funeral services were held June 5 at St. Lucy's Church, Highland Beach, Fla. Arrangements were completed by the Babione Funeral Home, Boca Raton, Fla.

Walsh leaves his parents, Thomas Harvey and Virginia (Gavin) Walsh of Boca Raton, Fla.; three brothers, Peter Walsh of Delray Beach, Fla., Michael Walsh of Norwood, and Richard Walsh of Belmont; and four sisters, Patricia Kriegel of Foxboro, Karen Walsh and Catherine Lightbourne, both of Quincy, and Mary Walsh-Dillon of Belmont.

Mary McElwain Collins

Memorial services for Mary McElwain Collins will be held Tuesday, June 18 at 4:30 p.m. in St. Stephen's Episcopal Church in Cohasset.

Mrs. Collins died March 30 in Ft. Lauderdale, Florida.

Contributions may be made in her name to the New England Deaconess Hospital Bloodbank.

Special needs church class

This past winter, a special needs church class was initiated at the United Church of Christ, Norwell.

Centering around a modified curriculum, and using a one to one pupil-teacher ratio, the class focus was on developing a loving relationship with God and others. The special needs children from Hanover, Hingham, Cohasset, Hull, Norwell and Scituate, also participated in worship and music with the other children in the church school. This includes all the regular youth activities and most recently, the annual Children's Service.

Everyone, children, parents, teachers and high school youth aides have found this to be a richly rewarding and enjoyable experience. Next fall, United Church of Christ welcomes other special needs children in this area to be a part of this class. For further information, call the church office at 659-2887.

Capital improvement loan for SS Vo-tech

By Karen Cubie

The South Shore Vocational Technical School Committee held a special meeting on Wednesday, June 5, to authorize a loan plan for school renovations.

The committee was unable to vote on the proposed budget, however, because a quorum was not present.

The school committee plans to use the loan to finance a number of much needed repairs on the roof, the school's septic system, and the parking lot, among other things.

"We have a tired system," Asst. Supt. Warren Anderson said in reference to the school's worn out septic system, "and we have more students than ever before. When we didn't have the money, we didn't clean it up. It will have to be removed, and the electrical phase will have to be better.

"We have found skylights with double cracks," he continued. "We've been pumping air up and then out, and we have little or no insulation in the roof."

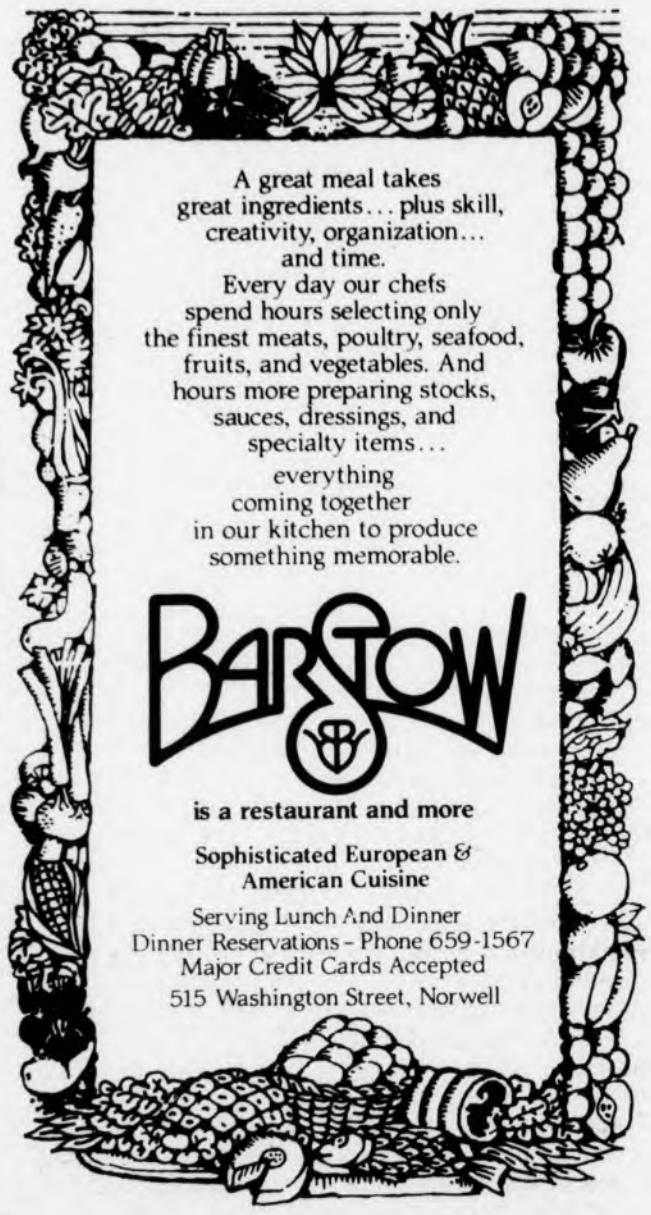
The committee plans to authorize a temporary, $700,000.00 loan all at one time in order to free them to deal efficiently with contractors.

However, rather than borrowing the money all at once, they will probably borrow the money in installments as they need it.

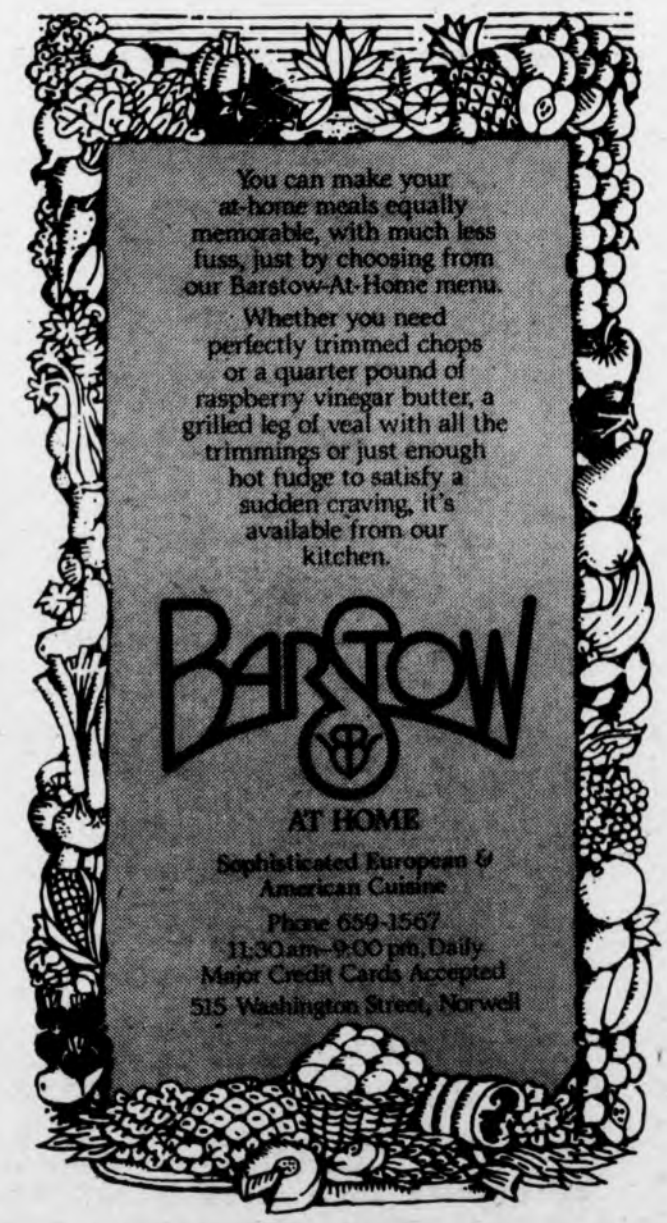
The committee will eventually take out another, permanent loan in order to pay off the total cost of construction.

"This loan is like the contract loan you take out in order to build a house," Mr. Richard O'Meara, Vice-President of State Street Bank, said. "You borrow money to build the house, and then, later, you pay a mortgage."

Because the school has decided to place all the repairs together under one project, it is eligible to receive a state grant. This grant would provide a 65 percent annual reimbursement of the estimated costs.



"If the renovations are not attended to, maintenance would probably cost about $70,000. a year," O'Meara said. "If the committee does this they will have significant savings."



After the committee authorizes the loan, the State Board of Education and the State Emergency Finance Board will then have 30 days to express any disapproval with the plan through town meetings. If any town rejects the plan, then the committee will have to abandon this method of finance.

"It's to their advantage to accept it," said School Supt. Dr. Clifford Easton. "I can't see them turning it down."

The proposed authorization has been placed on the agenda for a June 12 meeting when a vote will be taken.

Nostalgia: Memories of our graduations

By Dorothy Squier

When I opened my eyes that snowy morning, my father was whispering and shaking Mama.

"Mame, it's bitter cold and the snow is getting deep. You'd better keep the children home from school today. Mame, do you hear me?"

"Yes, George, I'll see to it. I'll get right up."

He kissed her goodbye and left the house.

The next minute she was laughing and poking us and issuing orders. "Up now! Up you get. This is a school day. A little snow won't hurt you."

When all six of us were bathed and dressed in our long drawers, shirts, Ferris waists, petticoats and school dresses, we were lined up at the kitchen sink. Into each mouth went a spoonful of Scott's Emulsion (a milky mix of cod liver oil) while each little hand held half an orange to suck on quick as a chaser. Small wonder that we seemed immune to colds.

Next came bowls of porridge laced with cream and brown sugar, then steaming cups of hot liquid made by steeping heaps of cocoa shells in boiling water. It was the poor man's hot chocolate.

To my annoyance I was then clad in an extra pair of long black stockings worn over my oxfords, then rubbers over them. And the SHE tied a green veil of heavy chiffon over my cap and face. I was on my way to first grade.

Guided by my sister Esther I groped my way to the school that held the first three primary grades and this is where we learned to read — the dawn of a lifetime of enormous pleasure. The whole family was addicted. Papa brought home the Boston Post every night and we devoured the "funnies." There was "Calamity Jane," a strip I soon became adept at drawing; and another called "The Van Loons in Society." One evening Mama asked me to read it aloud and I said, "The Van Loons in Soshitty." My sisters all screamed and Papa looked puzzled, but I defended my pronunciation with "Well, social is pronounced soshul, isn't it?"

Sounds logical. A wonderful language, isn't it? On Sundays we read the Boston Globe with those treasured pages of the "Katzenjammer Kids" and "Billy the Boy Artist." Papa read the news and Mama cut our recipes from Confidential Chat for her scrapbook.

After the third grade I transferred to the grammar school, where I "caught up" with my sister Esther by skipping a grade. We walked home from school together until we reached the library, when my feet pulled me in the direction of the brownstone side entrance to the Children's Room. With a quick message over my shoulder, "Tell Mama I'm in the library," I'd spend the afternoon with my favorite characters, Dorothy Dainty and Elsie Dinsmore. I even had a favorite seat over the hot air register, except in the winter you'd have to remember to take off your rubbers.

We soaked up our lessons like little sponges, admired and respected our teachers and regarded with awe our tall, gentle principal, Mr. McGregor. He looked a lot like Papa.

Elizabeth McKay

By 1915, when we were graduated, we knew arithmetic, fractions and percentages, how to parse a sentence, when to use the broad "a," how to spell. . .shuddered at a double negative and only rarely split an infinitive. In fact, we were a prissy little bunch of purists.

In the eighth grade we acted from memory Act I, Scene 1 of Julius Caesar. I had the part of Marullus Flavius and can still recite: "You blocks, you stones, you worse than senseless things! O, you hard hearts, you cruel men of Rome. Knew you not Pompey?"

I loved it. It was theater.

And we had music. Every week, Mr. Whoriskey, who was Music Director of all the schools in our city, taught us to sight read music, to draw the staff, clef and notes, to take our pitch from his tuning-fork and to harmonize. I sang soprano, Esther sang alto and we practiced at home. Mama had a lovely voice and a good ear and she'd grimace if we were even a shade off key. I still remember all the lyrics of those lovely songs.

Our Art Director was Mr. Peter Roos, a round little Dutch man with an impressive Van Dyke. He brought in autumn leaves and branches of wild berries for us to sketch. It was like playtime, and all the while we were being readied for Latin School.

When my oldest sister, Liz, graduated, the exercises were held in the prestigious Sanders Theatre in Memorial Hall at Harvard. The mayor's daughter was one of her classmates. The elegance of the occasion warranted a trip to Boston from Middleboro by Aunt Stina and Uncle Wallace, who arrived with a dozen long-stemmed American Beauties for Elizabeth Florence McKay, the sweet girl graduate. Mama made her dress all by hand, with tiny pin tucks and lace insertions.

In marked contrast our graduation (Esther's and mine) was held in the Armory. It was wartime, 1914, and a union graduation was planned with over a thousand graduates. A chorus of 500 young voices sang "Forget-me-not" by Giese and for years later Esther and I would break into song with it while doing the dishes.

The finale was memorable. . .a great American flag suspended from the roof of the Armory was unfurled to shower us with stars and confetti.

We had acquired a solid foundation, learned how to study, and were eager to face the years of schooling ahead — just too young for that War and too old for the next.

Special arts raffle

The 30th anniversary of the South Shore Arts Festival will take on a different dimension this year—a raffle of four works of art by South Shore artists.

The works will be raffled off at the end of the festival which occurs June 28-30 on the Cohasset Common and in Town Hall. Pieces included in the raffle are "Still Life Study," a watercolor by Judith Campbell Reed; a limited edition print of Canada Geese, "Rites of Spring," by Roy Thompson; "Festival '84", a light sunny watercolor of last year's festival by Judeth Van Hamm Weirs; and "Petworth House," an oil and pastel painted in England of Turner's estate by Tom Lucas.

The works will be on display, as well as raffle tickets being sold, on the Cohasset common during the festival, at the Champagne Preview at Yankee Co. Inc.'s corporate headquarters at the OAKS, at the jazz concert Friday, June 28 at 8 p.m. and at other special events. Tickets may also be purchased in advance at the South Shore Art Center, 103 Ripley Road, in Cohasset. Ticket price is $1 or 6 for $5.

Studds protests U.S. policy for Nicaraqua

By Judith Denzer Cooper

In 1927 Will Rogers said, "Where is Nicaragua? And what the hell are we doing there?" This quote was used by Congressman Gerry Studds to describe what may be the feelings of the average United States citizen in 1985.

Studds spoke as part of a forum at Hingham Town Hall on June 9. He was one of three speakers who protested the present United States Policy in Central America. The issues raised involve a proposed $34 million aid package that is presently before Congress and future U.S. policy for Nicaragua in general.

The public forum was sponsored by the South Shore coalition Against Intervention in Central America, the Catholic Connection, and the South Shore Citizens for Human Rights.

In addition to Studds, the other speakers were Sister Jean Gallo, a Catholic nun who described her work as the field of human rights and Clark Taylor, a professor at the University of Massachusetts and a Protestant minister.

Moderator Elizabeth Sherman introduced the speaker to a supportive audience of approximately 200 people. Only one person spoke up to disagree with Studds, Gallo or Taylor during the 30-minute question period that was part of the forum.

A long history

Studds pointed out that U.S. problems with Nicaragua go back many years. He said that one reason House Speaker Tip O'Neil is also against the present policy in Nicaragua is that O'Neil has classmates from Boston College who were Marines during the last unsuccessful attempt by the U.S. to solve the problem by sending troops to Nicaragua.

Studds, Gallo and Taylor pointed out that it was Sandino who held the U.S. Marines to a stand still in 1934 and became the hero of Nicaragua and the historical namesake of the present Sandinista Government. The existing Nicaraguan Government was described as a group made up of diverse elements from the clergy, the middle class and the revolutionaries who formed an unlikely coalition to overthrow the Somosa Government which had ruled Nicaragua for many years.

Gallo said Somosa was so bad everyone finally agreed he must be removed. As an example, Gallo said, when money and supplies were sent to Nicaragua after the 1972 earthquake, Somosa kept the money for himself and sold the donated supplies to whoever could afford them.

Taylor said that if Nicaragua was left alone it would be a healthy society by the year 2000. He added that the present Sandinista Government is bringing education, health care and food to its people.

Taylor said that the Contras (the group supported by the U.S.) are former Somosa national guard officers and there is no possibility of the two groups ever conducting negotiatins or working together in the same government.

No spokesman for the Reagan position

The forum was not advertised as a debate and, therefore, no one spoke for the President's side of the issue. All three speakers said they felt the President's position of support for the Contras was improper and probably illegal. They added that the U.S. Senate had voted for humanitarian aid to the Contras and the House would be discussing a similar proposal the week of June 10.

Studds said that the Senate proposal approves only humanitarian aid but then goes on to designate the CIA as the agency to administer the aid. Studds said, "I have heard the CIA called many thing but never a humanitarian agency."

Will U.S. forces invade?

Studds' major concern seemed to be that he sees President Reagan as determined to send U.S. soldiers to Nicaragua. When the Senate defeated (60-30) an amendment to the Nicaraguan aid package that said the President must at least notify Congress if he decides to send armed forces to Nicaragua, Studds said he became very alarmed.

Studds said the President has already declared that the Government of Nicaragua poses an unusual threat to the national security of the United States. Studds said, "I see the introduction of U.S. armed forces as a very real possibility at this point ... this would be a tragic decision for the United States and for the World."

Studds added that he feels Reagan's move toward intervention would be based on a "good guys vs. the bad guys" or "us or them" mentality. He feels Reagan is making an ideological rather than a rational decision and finds this a frightening way for the U.S. Government to operate.

Civil disobedience

Gallo encouraged the audience to participate in an act of civil disabedience to demonstrate its objection to present policy which opposes the Sandinistas and supports the Contras. Gallo said there will be a legal protest in Boston and several other cities on Wednesday, June 12 at 3:30 p.m. Those who wish to take part in further protests could sit-in at the John F. Kennedy building in Boston after its normal closing time on Wednesday.

Several members of the audience asked how they could support the position taken by the three speakers. Answers ranged from protest demonstrations to writing government officials to spreading the word to friends and neighbors. It was clear that all three speakers feel there is a real possibility of U.S. forces being sent to Nicaragua.

When one member of the audience asked how the President could legally send forces, Studds relied, "We'll see a trumped up event...a border incident in Honduras or Costa Rica...and then we will go in to 'protect' the people of Costa Rica or Honduras from the Nicaraguans.

Gallo concluded by saying, "The big scare in this country is that the Sandinistas are Communists. True, some of them take their thinking from Marx but also many are priests and many take their inspiration from Sandino who was murdered by Somosa.

Impressive showing for Kung Fu students

For the second time in two months, students of the Wah Lum Kung Fu Academy of Cohasset, operated by SIFU John Loupos, made an impressive tournament showing, garnering top honors in every division in which they competed at the Third Annual NEAK Youth Tournament held in Weymouth June 1.

Sponsored by Bob Blaisdell of the New England Academy of Karate, this competition was attended by nearly 100 students from a number of Massachusetts martial arts academies.

Jamie Young of Scituate and Chris Watters of Cohasset topped the day, each earning three trophies. Young swept first place trophies in all three of his divisions: Advanced Kata (Form), Advanced Weapons, and Advanced Sparring.

Watters took first place honors in Intermediate Kata and Intermediate Sparring, and Second Place in Advanced Weapons.

Led by Watters, the Wah Lum students dominated the Intermediate Kata division, with Eric McCracken of Hingham winning second place and Joseph Farhat of Scituate placing third.

In the Beginning Kata division, Jamie Hoffman and Peter Sheppard, both of Cohasset, won second and third place respectively. Jonathan DeLima, also of Cohasset, placed second in the Intermediate Weapons division.

Also competing, and earning Certificates of Achievement, were Alex Hay, Dan Jacobs and Paul Lembo of Scituate, and Frank McGinnis and Brendan Silva of Hull.

Classes in all aspects of the Wah Lum Kung Fu system and Tai Ch'i are held at the academy, located at Jonathan Livingston Square, Route 3A. For information, contact SIFU Loupos at 383-6822.

WHAT ITEMS ARE IMPORTANT ABOUT A HEADACHE?
Headache is probably one of the commonest symptoms that brings people to see their doctor. Certainly, an occasional headache may be due simply to tension or stress. Headaches that recur day after day, however, may be caused by other problems.
At the BEHAVIORAL MEDICINE INSTITUTE, we feel that all headaches need to be treated with respect. The first issue with any significant headache is to be certain that there is not an underlying medical problem that causes it. Once that matter is dealt with, there are many features that need to be taken into account to try to tailor the appropriate relief to the individual.
The classification of a headache may include what part of the head hurts, how long the headaches last, how old is the individual, and what role the patient's dietary habits might play in the headaches. What time of the day does it occur: all of these factors must be taken into account.
Probably more important, a thorough neurological examination, basic laboratory tests, and an evaluation of the person's personal habits, and personality make up, all must be taken into account. M.D.'s, psychologists, and technologists all may play roles.
At the Behavioral Medicine Institute we fit relief to discomfort, and we do it for the individual. If you have trouble with headache, call us at the Behavioral Medicine Institute.

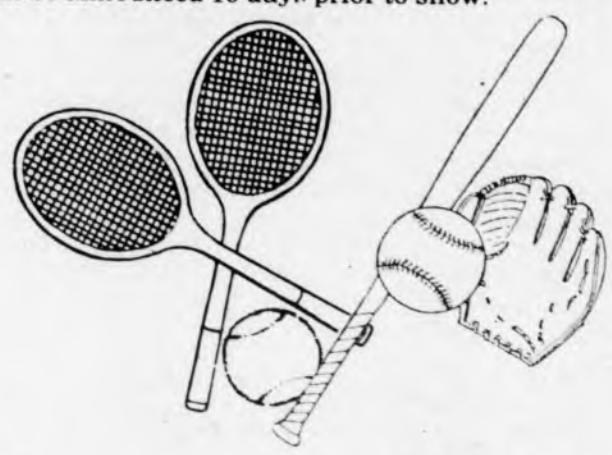
Basic Playground Program Format

6 to 12-year olds, Full Days

Monday, Wednesday, and Friday, Swim Time at Cohasset Swim Center, 11 a.m. to noon. Tuesday, Special Activity Days/Field Trip Days (as indicated on info sheet). Thursday, Music Circus Days for those who wish.



4 and 5-year-olds, Half Days

The 4 and 5-year-olds program will meet Monday through Friday, as does the 6 to 12-year-old program. However, the 4 and 5 program will meet from 9 a.m. to noon only. All 4 and 5-year-olds must be picked up at noon, promptly. While this program will operate independently of the older program, there will be certain special events and activities that both programs will participate in. Children may bring a snack each morning.

Tuesday, July 9 - Fun Carnival, Osgood School, 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. No regular playground program today. Young children should be accompanied by a parent or an older sibling - Tickets: 30¢ each. Open to all ages. Rain: event will be cancelled and rainy day program will be in effect. Children will need $3 to $4 to try all events.

Tuesday, July 16 - Balloon Flying Contest, Milliken Field, 9 a.m. All children both programs as well as any other resident, should report to the Milliken Field area, (top of Norfolk Road behind CHS) at 9 a.m. No regular program at Osgood. 4 and 5-year-olds should be picked-up at the usual time at Milliken (12 p.m.) All 6 to 12-year-olds will be walked back to Osgood at noon, to continue with regular activities until the usual 3 p.m. time. 6 to 12-year-olds should bring lunch.

Tuesday, July 23 - Special Program, Town Hall Auditorium, $1.50 per person. Both 6 to 12 and 4 and 5 program will be walked over to Town Hall at 10:15 a.m. for special program. Each child should bring $1.50 that morning. 6 to 12-year-olds will be walked back to Osgood, to complete playground day. 4 and 5-year-olds should bring snacks as usual, and 6 to 12-year-olds should bring lunch as usual. Parents are welcome to attend special show, further details will be announced 10 days prior to show.

Friday, July 26 - Beginners Tennis Tournament. Ages 14 and under. Sign-up through tennis lessons at Milliken courts. Beginners only!

Tuesday, July 30 - Field Trip, 6 to 12-year-olds group. Place and cost to be announced when confirmed. There will be a pre-registration required for the trip.

Tuesday, Aug. 6 - Field Trip, 4 and 5-year-olds; Color War for 6 to 12-year-olds. Field trip details, place, fee, etc. Will be announced as soon as confirmed. Pre-registrations for the 4 and 5-year-old field trip will be necessary.

Tuesday, Aug. 13 - Zoo Mobile Visit, Osgood School, 10 a.m. Regular program day, zoo mobile will be open to all residents from 10 to 11:30 a.m. There is no charge for the MDC program.

Friday, Aug. 16 - Final Day Cookout, Barnes Little League Field. Both programs will meet at Barnes Field at 10 a.m. Cookout, games, swimming, (for 6 to 12) group and special activities will be on tap until 3 p.m. A fee of 50¢ will be collected from each child during the week, to help offset cost of food. Parents may donate baked goods.

Saturday, September 7 - Soccer League Registrations, Town Hall, 9 to 10:30 a.m. only. $6 per child, 50 percent discount for second and subsequent children from the same family. For boys and girls, K-9. (K-3 Clinic)

General Information

Rainy Days: On mornings when it is raining before 9 a.m. the 4 and 5-year-olds Playground and Youth Tennis programs will not be held.

The 6 to 12-year-olds program will meet at Deer Hill gym if it is raining before 9 a.m. Children should not bring lunch that day and must be picked up at noon, regardless of weather conditions at that time.

If it should rain after 9 a.m., children will go into Osgood School (both programs). Programs will end at noon if still raining. If it has stopped raining at noon, 6 to 12 program will continue with p.m. schedule, 4 and 5-year-olds should be picked up at noon, as usual.

If it should rain before your tennis lesson, but after 9 a.m., your lesson is cancelled. (Rain before 9 a.m., all classes are cancelled.)

Swim Lessons: Children will be walked to and from their swim lessons at the Swim Center, at their appropriate class times during the day. Please inform your child's counselor of the swim lesson times in writing.

Drop off, Pick-up: Staff members will indicate drop-off and pick-up areas at the school. Please adhere to specified drop-off pick-up areas for safety purposes. We try to keep the flow of traffic in the turn-around at Osgood moving. Please help us. Parents must pick children up at proper times - tardiness can not be tolerated.

Clothing: Children should come dressed appropriately as weather dictates; there should be no bare feet and sneakers are advised: On swim days, Monday, Wednesday and Friday, children should wear bathing suits under outer clothing. Hats and caps are advised as protection from the sun.

Youth Tennis Schedule: Tennis classes will meet on a Monday/Wednesday or a Tuesday/Thursday schedule. If your class is on Monday at 10 a.m. it will meet the same time on Wednesday. Likewise, Tuesday/Thursday schedule. Fridays will be special instruction, clinic, and tournament days.

Lunches/Snacks/Drinks: Must all be non-perishable as we will not be able to refrigerate drinks, lunches or snacks.

Other Programs

During the summer months various other recreation programs, events, and special activities will be conducted either as on-going programs or one time events.

A few of the programs include Youth Concert Band, Golf Lessons, Dog Obedience Training

Cohasset Worship . . .

St. Stephen's Church

New ministry - On June 23 at 4 p.m., we will join in a celebration of new ministry. This is not my new ministry, but our new ministry. Ministry is not a function of ordination, but of baptism. By virtue of baptism, God has given each of us the gift for building up of our community, the Body of Christ.

The Rt. Rev. John B. Coburn, Bishop of Massachusetts will celebrate E. Clifford Cutler's institution as Rector in a service of New Ministry on Sunday, June 23. The Rev. Ronald L. Reed, Staff Officer for Stewardship of the Executive Council of the National Episcopal Church will be the guest speaker.

All are invited to attend this celebration of new ministry for St. Stephen's. The Town of Cohasset will be represented by its Counsel, Richard A. Henderson, Esq. An ecumenical gathering of clergy from the Town and Episcopal clergy from around the Diocese of Massachusetts will lend their support to this new beginning. A carillon recital will precede the service. Worship will conclude with a reception in the church courtyard.

Summer hours - beginning on Sunday, June 16, there will be one worship service on Sundays throughout the summer at 9 a.m. Our regular schedule of two worship services at 8 and 10 a.m. will resume September 15.

Baby boy born - Ministry isn't the only thing new around the Cutler house. On Monday, June 3, Amy gave birth to a baby boy, six pounds, 12 ounces and 19 1/2 inches. His name is Seth Lewis Cutler.

In the family - We remember fondly two of our church family who departed recently : Martha Rencurrel in April, and Miriam Beale on May 9.

Reaching out to Quincy - The Quincy Crisis Center's little white van has been plying the streets of Quincy and surrounding areas for several years now, providing emergency meals, offering crisis counseling, and helping people to find solutions to their problems. St. Stephen's is one of the many groups and individuals who do their part to make the Quincy Crisis Center successful.

As a non-profit agency, the annual budget - now well over $225,000, with the new mobile unit - is raised strictly through private contributions. Many of the Center's donors, like St. Stephen's, choose to make regular monthly contribution to help the Center meet its operating expenses.

If you would like to help please contact Angus and Betty May or call the Quincy Crisis Center hotline, 471-7075.

Bloodmobile - Monday, June 17, 2:30 to 7:30 p.m., Unitarian Parish House. Your gift of life will be much appreciated.

Summer carillon series - The summer series of carillon recitals will be given this year from June 30 through September 15 at the usual afternoon hour of 4-5 p.m. The schedule of weekly guests carillonneurs will be mailed to members of St. Stephen's within the next week. The programs will provide again an opportunity to hear a fine instrument played by many fine artists.

Backyard Bible class

Backyard Bible clubs with Bible stories, games, crafts, and refreshments is sponsored by the Cohasset Baptist Church for grades kindergarten through grade six.

The classes will be held June 24-28 at 10 a.m. to noon. Registration is now in progress. Call 545-3948.

Cohasset summer recreation schedule

Course, and Tennis Lessons. Special events will include balloon flying contest, movie, various trips, fun carnival, zoo mobile, tennis tournaments, etc.

Please watch local news media and cable T.V. for current program information and registration. Also, you may call the Recreation Office at 383-6791 daily, Monday through Wednesday, from 7:30 a.m. to 4 p.m.; Thursdays, from 7:30 a.m. to 8 p.m. and Fridays, from 7:30 a.m. to noon.

Special Tours/Trips

Due to an increased ability to utilize our revolving account fund for certain types of programs and activities, the Recreation Department will from time to time offer tours and trips on group rate costs. Also, each winter we will schedule about five ski trips to various resorts at group rates. Registration notices will be in local news media.

Basketball Clinic

High school Coach Eddie Minelli will give a special Recreation Dept. Clinic for students in Grades 5 through 8 on Thursday evenings, July 18 and 25, at the high school gym at 6:30 p.m. Please call the Recreation Office to register.

Band Concerts

The Brockton Federation of Musicians, on a matching grant basis with the Cohasset Recreation Department and the American Federation of Musicians, will be performing in Cohasset again this summer. The 30-piece band consists of musicians from the South Shore area and is under the direction of Mr. Richard Whitmarsh of East Bridgewater. Additional funding for this year's concerts has been secured through a grant from the Arts Lottery Council.

1. Saturday, June 29, 7:30 p.m. - Town Common.
2. Tuesday, July 23, 7:30 p.m.- Town Common.
3. Thursday, Aug. 15, 7 p.m. - Town Common, special Recreation Department Youth Band concert under the direction of Mr. Steve Shirosky.

Concerts are free of charge and are provided for the entertainment of the residents of Cohasset and guests. Please bring blankets or folding chairs to sit on. Also, from time to time, insect repellant is a good item to have on hand.

Music Circus

The Music Circus registrations will be open to children in both programs. We will be attending the performances on Thursday mornings at a group rate cost. Registrations must be made two weeks prior to the show date as indicated below. Payments must be made at the Recreation Department office. No late registrations can be accepted. Payments must be made between 9 a.m. and noon, or between 6 and 7:30 p.m. in the evening on the dates indicated:

Aladdin, July 11, $3.20, date of payment, Thursday, June 27; Snow White, July 18, $3.20, date of payment, Wednesday, July 3 (no evening registration); Hansel and Gretel, July 25, $3.20, date of payment, Thursday, July 11; Little Red Riding Hood, Aug. 1, $3.20, date of payment, Thursday, July 18; and Cinderella, Aug. 8, $3.20, date of payment, Thursday, July 25.

Music Circus is optional - regular playground program will continue for those who do not wish to attend.

Staff members will chaperone those children attending.

Concert schedules are subject to change due to weather factors. Please check local news media weekly, or call the Recreation Office for program changes.

Cub Scouts and Boy Scouts, led by Scoutmaster Jeff Forsdick, marched in the annual Memorial Day Parade in Cohasset May 27. Here they are at attention at the Cohasset Central Cemetery, a stopping point along the parade route.

St. Paul's class of 1985

St. Paul's Parochial School in Hingham last Friday graduated 20 girls and 12 boys from the eighth grade during ceremonies in St. Paul's Church in Hingham Square.

Most of the female graduates will attend Notre Dame Academy in Hingham next fall. This year's class has also sent five boys to Boston College High School, two to Xaverian Brothers High School and four boys and three girls to Archbishop Williams High School.

Rev. John Hanlon, pastor of St. Paul's Church, told the graduates that their graduation would be bittersweet. He said it would be sad in that he would miss their smiling faces but that he would rejoice in seeing them reach another goal. "On the one hand, you are no longer children; on the other, you are not yet adults. I don't want to rush you," he said, "but I hope and expect that as you leave St. Paul's, you will put away the things of a child and think in a more mature way." He asked that they be morally astute and maintain their Christian values. "No one can force you to drink liquor, use drugs or debase the beauty of your sexuality," Father Hanlon said.

Class representatives took part in the Mass, and included: Contemporary Reading, Colleen Knight; Responsorial Psalm, Patrick Comerford; Second Reading, Colleen Nevin; Prayers of the Faithful, Kara Casey, Heather Gartland, Shelley Griffiths, John Holland, Linnea Lundin, Catherine Malone; Presentation of Gifts, Tanya Camilleri, Michael Magner, Thomas Muldoon, Sarah Murphy. An original composition was written and read by Nicole Byrns as the Class of 1985's thank you. Also, during the ceremony, members of the class sang "We Are The World."

Graduates of this year's eighth grade included: Robert Abbadessa and Michelle Babin, Cohasset; Sean Enright, Norwell; Julie Purvis and Catherine Robinson, Hull; Marie Cimetti and Daniel Coleman, Scituate; and Hingham residents, Daniel Cushing, Patrick Comerford, John Holland, Greg Kuchar, Michael Magner, Christopher McCarthy, Thomas Muldoon, Thomas Ryan, Kevin Weldon, Laura Bonetsky, Nicole Byrns, Tanya Camilleri, Kara Casey, Diane Doucette, Heather Gartland, Shelley Griffiths, Karen Heaney, Colleen Knight, Mary Jayne Lee, Linnea Lundin, Catherine Malone, Kerry McGovern, Sarah Murphy, Colleen Nevin and Suzanne Piekarski.

Diplomas and awards were presented by Sister Marie St. Barbara, S.N.D., principal of the school, and by Rev. Hanlon, Rev. Denis O'Driscoll, Rev. Richard Curran and Rev. Thomas McDermott, S.J.

Special awards presented at graduation included: One Year Perfect Attendance, Michelle Jeannine Balbin; Excellent in Athletics, John Patrick Holland; Excellence in Spelling, Julie Ann Purvis; Excellence in Creative Writing, Sean Dwyer Enright; Excellence in Religion, Catherine Joan Malone; Two Years Perfect Attendance, School Alternate for Patriot Ledger Spelling Bee, Excellence in Spelling, Thomas Edward Muldoon.

Three Years Perfect Attendance, Excellence in Spanish, Art and Athletics, Laura Lynn Bonetzky; Excellence in Creative Writing, English Grammar, Science, Social Studies and Religion, Nicole Lee Byrns; Father Geoghan Award, Savings Bond from P.T.O. for Exemplifying the Ideals of Father Geoghan, Sarah Anne Murphy; Father Geoghan Award, Savings Bond from P.T.O. for Exemplifying the Ideals of Father Geoghan, Excellence in Social Studies, Patrick Joseph Comerford; One Year Perfect Attendance, Hingham Catholic Women's Scholarship, Heather Elizabeth Gartland; Father McGann Scholarship, $100 from P.T.O. for development of academic, social and spiritual values, Kevin Michael Weldon.

Four Years Perfect Attendance, Outstanding Achievement in Math, School Representative at Patriot Ledger Spelling Bee, Partial Scholarship to Notre Dame Academy, General Excellence Scholarship of $50 from St. Paul's P.T.O., Colleen Mary Knight; Outstanding Achievement in Reading, Science, Math, Full Scholarship to Notre Dame Academy, General Excellence Scholarship of $100 from St. Paul's P.T.O., Colleen Maura Nevin; Outstanding Achievement in Reading, Scholarship to Boston College High and Xaverian Brothers High School, General Excellence Scholarship of $100 from St. Paul's P.T.O., Daniel Francis Cushing.

NOW CHECKING
1. FREE — No monthly service charge or transaction fees.
2. All balances of $10.00 or more earn interest.
3. Checks are numbered and fully personalized with your name and address.
4. Cancelled checks are returned to you with your monthly statement.

24-HOUR BANKING
We give you a choice of two bank cards:
Our ABC card gives you 24-hour access to your NOW or Statement Savings Account anytime, day or night, at any Cash Network Machine.
Our VISA Banking Card gives you everything the ABC card does and more.
- Use your VISA Card in place of a check at thousands of merchants world wide.
- Overdraft Protection — protects your valuable credit rating.

Both cards allow you to make deposits, withdrawals, and transfers between accounts, or check your account balance at any VISA/ABC Banking Center located throughout Massachusetts.

STATEMENT SAVINGS ACCOUNT
1. No passbook is issued, instead you receive a monthly statement listing your transactions and interest earned.
2. 5.5% interest is paid monthly provided a minimum balance of $10.00 is maintained.
3. No monthly maintenance fee.
4. Deposits and withdrawals can be made at any time.

DIRECT DEPOSIT
1. Provides protection against lost or stolen checks.
2. Avoid extra trips to the bank and waiting at home for your checks to arrive.
3. No lost interest — your checks will be automatically deposited to your account.
4. FREE — No charge for this convenient, time saving service.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS
THE TRIAL COURT
THE PROBATE AND FAMILY COURT
Norfolk Division
Docket No. 85P1379E1

Estate of RICHARD N. LINCOLN late of COHASSET in the County of NORFOLK

NOTICE

A petition has been presented in the above-captioned matter praying that the last will of said decedent be proved and allowed and that DOROTHY J. LINCOLN of COHASSET in the County of NORFOLK be appointed executrix named in the will without surety on the bond.

If you desire to object to the allowance of said petition, you or your attorney should file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham on or before 10:00 in the forenoon on June 26, 1985.

In addition you should file a written statement of objections to the petition, giving the specific grounds therefore, within thirty (30) days after the return day (or such other time as the Court, on motion with notice to the petitioner, may allow) in accordance with Probate Rule 2A.

Witness, Robert M. Ford, Esquire, First Justice of said Court at Dedham, the twenty-ninth day of May in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and eighty five.

NOTICE OF FIDUCIARY'S ACCOUNT

To all persons interested in the estate of Ada Forbush Faxon late of Cohasset, in said County, deceased.

You are hereby notified pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. Rule 72 that the forty-second to forty-eighth and final account(s) of Bank of New England, N.A. as Trustees (the fiduciary) of the will of said deceased for the benefit of William Faxon and others have been presented to said Court for allowance.

If you desire to preserve your right to file an objection to said account(s), you or your attorney must file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham on or before the twenty-sixth day of June, 1985, the return day of this citation. You may upon written request by registered or certified mail to the fiduciary, or to the attorney for the fiduciary, obtain without cost a copy of said account(s). If you desire to object to any item of said account(s), you must, in addition to filing a written appearance as aforesaid, file within thirty days after said return day or within such other time as the Court upon motion may order a written statement of each such item together with the grounds of each objection thereto, a copy to be served upon the fiduciary pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. Rule 5.

WITNESS, Robert M. Ford, Esquire, First Justice of said Court, this thirtieth day of May 1985.

TOWN OF COHASSET ZONING BOARD OF APPEALS PUBLIC HEARING NOTICE

Pursuant to the provisions of the Cohasset Zoning Bylaws and the General Laws, Chapter 40A, a public hearing will be held at the Cohasset Town Hall on Thursday, June 27, 1985 at 8:00 P.M. to hear and act upon an amendment to the application for Special Permit under 4.2 granted by the Zoning Board of Appeals to the applicant, Norman Kaufman, Esq., 25 Braintree Hill Park, Braintree (formerly 460 Trotten Pond Road, Waltham), Trustee of Country Associates Trust, who wishes to relocate the driveway approved in his previous application for 39 Beechwood Street, according to the plans and application on file in the office of the Town Clerk (File 84-06-28A).

6/13, 6/20/85

LEGAL NOTICE

The Board of Selectmen of the Town of Cohasset at their regularly scheduled meeting on Monday, June 3, 1985, voted to extend the deadline under Article IX, Section 2(a) (ii) of the Town By-Laws from June 1 to June 20, 1985 for the payment of mooring fees for the ensuing fiscal year.

The Board of Selectmen also voted to extend the time for reaffirmation of positions on the mooring waiting list from June 1 to June 20, 1985.

Anyone not paying their mooring fees by the extended deadline will have their mooring tackle removed from Cohasset harbor and anyone not reaffirming their position on the mooring waiting list by the extended deadline will be removed from the waiting list.

It was also voted to strictly enforce the June 1 deadline in ensuing years and not to grant further extensions.

Neighbors oppose project

Hearing held on second story construction

Although an extensive amount of work has already occurred at the site, the Zoning Board of Appeal listened last week to arguments opposed to and in favor of continuing construction work at 51 Jerusalem Road.

The developers of the project, Andrea Merrill and Julie Gailinas, represented by Attorney Walter Sullivan, argued for the issuance of a special permit to construct a second story on a one-level ranch at the site.

Several neighbors, represented by Attorney John Roy, brought the issue before the zoning board in appeal of a building permit issued in April for the construction project. Saying the permit was issued by the building inspector without regard for state building codes, Atty. Roy asked that the permit be withdrawn, regardless of the fact that home has been "gutted" and construction is well underway.

The two requests were combined into one hearing during the zoning board's meeting last week. Board members will make their decisions at their next meeting, June 27.

Opponents of the Jerusalem Road project vastly outnumbered proponents in attendance. Only the two developers were recorded by the board in favor of the project.

"Our appeal is based on the building inspector's issuance of a permit. At the bare minimum, this entire project should have been required to come before this board for a special permit. It is very regretable," Atty. Roy stated, "that this has gotten as far as it has."

The lawyer also noted that four days after his clients, Mr. and Mrs. Donald O'Neil, Mr. and Mrs. John Guiggio, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Prisble, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Colburn, and Mr. and Mrs. Bernard O'Brien, filed the appeal, the developers, Distinctive Homes Trust, filed for a special permit. After that, Atty. Roy requested that the building inspector halt all construction until a decision is finalized.

The issue, according to the opposition, is that a second story, including an additional bedroom, is being constructed at 51 Jerusalem Road, in a non conforming lot without special permit approval from the zoning board. There is not the required amount of frontage or sideyard on this lot, according to the lawyer, and any new construction requires the zoning board review and permission.

According to calculations completed by the opponents' engineer, the lot is also within 100 feet of the floodplain, which constitutes additional review.

Zoning Board Chairman Myrna Putziger quickly noted floodplain determinations are not the responsibility of that board.

Atty. Sullivan argued that the building permit and health agent's building permits were issued in good faith. Noting that "nothing is gained by using subterfuge," Atty. Sullivan said the opponents may have more to gain by stopping construction than restoring their ocean views. He noted that at least one of the opponents had been bidding on the property when it was for sale.

He also noted that the planned construction has been designed with the assistance of engineers and architects, and that all plans submitted have been approved by the building inspector.

The building, he added, is within the town's setback and height requirements. The renovated structure will be "more in keeping" with the neighborhood, and will be more visible from Joy Place than Jerusalem Road. The number of bedrooms has not been changed, he stated, and there will be no adverse impact on the wetlands or current septic system.

This is the second story construction at 51 Jerusalem Road. All work has stopped until the 2BA makes its decision. (Bill Quigley photo)

Co-counsel for the opponents, Randee Cassel, noted in her arguments, that the developers knew of strong opposition to the project, before the building permit was issued. On April 17, Atty. Roy notified the developer and the building inspector of his clients' "serious concerns" regarding the issuance of a building permit. Despite the letter, Atty. Cassel stated, the permit was issued two days later.

When drawings of the project were displayed, Atty. Roy questioned whether a small "mechanical" storage room on the ground level could be officially interpreted as an additional living space. If so, he said, the septic system would not be able to handle the increased use, and the plans would be dramatically altered.

Atty. Sullivan assured the zoning board that the room, which is within the existing structure, can be used for equipment storage only.

The architectural renderings show a contemporary home with an arched roof line on either side. There will be sunlights, and a deck in the location where it currently exists.

There were some questions about the height of the building which concern the grading on which the home rests. Board Chairman Putziger also questioned the the project in terms of "number of stories" and asked the developers if this was a three- or two-tier home, according to bylaw definition.

Although Building Inspector Edward Poskus assured the board the development was within the height restriction, member Barbara Power noted "that doesn't alleviate our concern with the number of stories."

The Board of Health and the Conservation Commission have approved plans for the construction. The Planning Board, in a letter dated June 6, noted its concern with setback compliance, height limitations and the proximity to wetlands.

In his closing arguments to the board, Atty. Roy stated his opposition to major reconstruction allowed without a hearing and public input. "This alteration is far and in excess of the legal limits of what one can do to an existing structure. This is not a run-of-the-mill alteration to an existing structure. Every square inch has been gutted. It is clearly new construction."

He asked that the board reverse the issuance of the building permit, and that the structure be restored to its original height.

Several neighbors, including Bernard O'Brien, expressed their concern with the increased parking and hazardous conditions caused by the increased use of the home.

Atty. Sullivan argued that the restrictive deed found in the property title, "never applied to the lot" and the board should not consider it in its deliberations. He also noted that the assumption of an additional bedroom "is a red herring."

He said the construction proceeded with the full review and approval of proper town agencies.

The board took the case under advisement until its June 27 meeting.

NEARLY NATIVE — by DARRELL BERGER

An undelivered commencement address

By Darrell Berger

Many is the day I get up in the morning and thank God I'm not in school anymore. And I liked school. But being finished is better.

For those of you going on to college, one of the best things about it is that bells don't ring every forty-eight minutes or so. Actually having to think can be enjoyable, too.

The worse part is that you're still too young to really appreciate the important stuff, and by the time you are you'll be both too busy and too lazy to go back to it.

By really important stuff I mean treasures that you already think you know, like Robert Frost poems and plane geometry. Especially plane geometry. Pythagoras was so venerated in his time they made a religion out of right triangles. Now we teach his magic to kids as if it were no more important than the exports of Brazil.

For those of you entering the armed forces, or who will be using them to pay for your education, remember that the happy young people on the television ads only tell one side. They don't convey the true ambience of say, basic training at Fort Benning in August. And they sort of gloss over the possibility that you might be killed or have to kill other people.

They are like the ads for beer, which never show those good ole boys the next morning, when their brains feel like three-year-old oatmeal. Nor do they ever show them ploughing their pickups drunkenly into a guard rail. Get the whole story.

For those of you who don't know what you're doing, don't feel too bad. Most of us don't know either, most of the time. Just don't spend your whole life waiting for someone to tell you what to do.

Don't pay too much attention to computers. Especially don't go "into them" because you think they are the coming thing. Whatever the coming thing is, your guidance counselors don't know what it is.

If they did, they wouldn't be guidance counselors, they'd have offices on top of the Pru and be flying to Zurich Thursday. Your parents don't know either, but at least listen, they might have a decent idea or two.

Also, just as you always knew, money is really important. Nobody in America thinks you're worth a damn without it. But that doesn't mean you have to let it rule your life. It matters more how you deal with it than how much you have.

If you've always lived around here, try to leave as soon as possible. The South Shore is a great place to live, but you'll never know it unless you leave. Check out several places, then choose what feels right, even if it's some place your parents feel is a godforsaken wilderness like California or Somerville.

Don't have kids until you grow up, if you can help it.

Try to find out what is happening in the world and do something intelligent about it. Governments tend to lie and politicians tend to be pretty ordinary at best, so if you want to keep things half-way livable, do more than cash a paycheck and watch television.

Getting old, as far as I can tell, isn't so bad, except for twenty-three. Twenty-three is awful. I think it's because that's when you're tired of being a kid and don't know how to be anything else. Just try to relax and in a year you'll be twenty-four and things will be fine again. Consider yourself warned. Twenty-three is like thirteen only worse.

One thing you can be relieved about, besides not having to take the SAT's again and having those awful bells ringing. You'll probaby never feel worse in your whole life than you've already felt.

By the time you've gotten this far, you've most likely already been let down, disappointed, hoodwinked and hurt about as badly as you ever will be. You've probably already felt about as lonely and low as you're ever going to feel.

You'll feel terrible again, of course, but usually it's never quite as acute as what you felt at sixteen or seventeen. It's seldom quite as delicious or dramatic again, either, but you can't have everything.

Congratulations. Live long and love well. Do something to make your obituary worth reading.

(Darrell Berger is minister of the First Parish Unitarian Church in Scituate.)

MUSINGS — By JOHN H. CUTLER

☐Don't learn the tricks of the trade—learn the trade.

☐Henny Youngman told of the time he was ejected from an antique shop. "All I did," he said, "was walk in and ask, 'What's new?'" By the way, if you've had your car for 25 years, it is officially an antique and qualifies for special license plates.

☐When an inflamatory senator had completed a 2-hour tirade on an irrigation bill, a colleague rose and drowned his argument with these words: "Mr. President, we have just been treated to a Niagara of words and a drought of reason. . . ."

☐A man who keeps boasting about his ancestors apparently belongs to a family that is better dead than alive. This reminds me of an anonymous saying: Ancestral pride: going forward while backing up.

☐A good florist is a person who can sell a man flowers that go with a weak alibi.

☐Don't brag about being average. It simply means that you're as close to the bottom as you are to the top. That reminds me of someone once asking how I felt knowing that 50% of all physicians graduated in the bottom half of their class.

☐A genius may be a person who can do almost anything except make a living.

☐A fifth-rate something is as bad as a first-rate nothing.

☐I read this somewhere: We put up with being surpassed more easily than with being equal.

☐Only Gertrude Stein could make such a statement: "In the U.S. there is more space where nobody is than where anybody is. That is what makes America what it is."

☐Only a dolt would believe that "Man does not live by bread alone" applies to males only. And who can argue that "mankind" excludes women?

☐Ogden Nash speaking: "If you don't want to work, you have to work to earn enough money so that you don't have to work."

FROM THE KITCHEN

by JOAN PINKHAM

With plenty of hoopla, the ads begin as soon as Mother's Day signs come down. Now, handsome, Adonis type males remind us that the shirt they're modelling, or after-shave lotion which makes them so irresistible can send Dad into raptures on his Day. Not so. He'd never admit it, but he would be totally crushed should we forget the 16th, Father's Day, though it doesn't take much to please him. Fast becoming a tradition is the family gathering around the grill with a little softball, a little beer and lots of Dad's favorite foods. A long with the hamburgs and frankfurters, Margaret Ward's recipe could help to make the meal rather special. She suggests cooking these patties in hot oil for three or four minutes, but for a cookout, why not grill them right over the charcoal, watching carefully as you cook these.

EGGPLANT PATTIES

2 medium eggplants, pared and cubed
1 1/4 c. Ritz cracker crumbs
2 eggs, slightly beaten
2T each snipped parsley and chopped onion
1 clove garlic, minced
1/2 tsp. salt, 1/8 tsp. pepper

In covered saucepan cook eggplant in boiling water until tender. Drain well and mash. Stir in remaining ingredients and shape into patties 3" in diameter. Grill until golden brown.

They're calling it "Barstow at Assinippi — A Restaurant and More" and their grand opening was just that, with Jan and Len Davenport of Hanover hosting a series of buffet parties the other week. Parked outside the adjoining patio was a double-decker bus from Boston filled with press, radio and television personalities, photographers and reporters, all being wined and dined in the restaurant, completely transformed from the former Sergent's. Architects, local craftsmen and furnishings imported from Italy combine with original paintings on the white walls and oriental rugs underfoot to create an atmosphere that reflects its fine cuisine. Marie Burke, the hostess, gave me a copy of the menu which spotlights "The Grill" featuring a Grill Roast of the Day and their pizza, a specialty prepared to order on the Grille. Peeking through into the kitchen, the busy staff can be seen preparing ingredients for a great meal from the "Barstow-At-Home" menu. In a service unique to this area. you can purchase a fully-cooked Filet Mignon with Tarragon Butter, or choose a fresh uncooked Filet Mignon with the Tarragon Butter, complete with simple home preparation instructions. Other foods that spark your fancy may be purchased from the menu for serving at home, as well as freshly made pastries and cookies by Lisa Trojano of Norwell. Here is their

GRILLED LOBSTER BARSTOW

2 each 1 to 1 1/4 pd. lobster
4 oz. lightly salted butter
12 (approx.) basil leaves
2 oz. cognac
Juice of 1/2 lemon
Salt and pepper to taste
1/3 c. olive or mild oil blended with 1 pressed garlic clove

Directions (Serves two):
Let butter soften to room temp. Boil lobsters for 5 min; then remove and chill 'til cool, then split down middle and remove stomach. Crack claws and remove meat (when grilled claw meat cooks faster than tail meat). Baste lobsters with garlic oil mixture. On a very hot grill, grill lobster (meat side down), for 2 min. Turn over and grill 2 min. In food processor or by hand mince basil leaves and add to softened butter, cognac and lemon juice and blend. Season with salt and pepper to taste. Baste lobster meat with oil and garlic mix and place in 375 oven with 2T of Basil Cognac Butter on each. Heat until butter melts. Serve with remaining melted Basil Cognac Butter (May be purchased at the Restaurant.)

PATCHES by Lois Martin

Baked beans-a New England heritage

By Lois Martin

We deal here with baked beans.

I shall step on toes. I shall show no mercy for doctored B & Ms. I'll take issue with the heavily sugared, or ketchuped or baconed beans.

The responsibility, as I see it, is to uphold a heritage for famed New England Baked Beans.

And Boston has very little to do with it. In fact in the syntax of baked beans, that city has more clout with cod. Cod is the issue of the sea. Beans are sustenance, a fact of life, a mainstay in your diet.

In short, beans are serious.

With summer approaching, so will countless tourists, family friends and nouveau New Englanders.

You have a duty here. You do not let people come to town, not around here, and serve them a buffet without including the beans for which this region is known.

The trouble is this. Inasmuch as we are known for baked beans, we are known equally well for individualism. That translates into a reality: no two pots of beans within these six states will be the same. Each of us is left stalwartly upholding her own bean pot as being the most representative of baked beans in New England. And we're not kidding. If you think there's a quarrel over a proper chowder, try a calm bean debate.

I have struggled with two different bean recipes, coming from the paternal and maternal branches of my family tree. They are, of course, from scratch.

There is inherent snob value in scratch beans. People who doctor them are required to say so, explain, when complimented on them. There are some would say a simple "Thank you," is due. Not so. You go 'round taking credit for a pot of beans you only played with, you're out of line.

There is pride in scratch goods, all the more so in your own baked beans. Beans meant more than buffet for your predecessors. They were a staple good. When you had naught, you had beans. They were certain for Saturday supper and often showed up again Sunday morning with the leftover biscuits split and toasted.

Their import in New England is boundless. Your upholding of them needs to be relentless.

And of monumental significance is the goal of baking one's beans. It is not necessarily to have them eaten with relish (or without for that matter).

The goal is to fill the house all day long with the promising, homecooked essence of baking beans. It delivers the impression that New England lives. It's a mainstay and so is anyone who bakes them.

I acquiesce to mention that some people, even those with experienced bib aprons, soak their beans overnight, That's nominal procedure. But then they lace the beans with molasses, up to half a cup or more.

I am of the school of diminished use of molasses. I touch up the beans with up to two, three tablespoons. That gives color and flavor without oversugaring them. Besides I don't want beans to be dark brown.

Then my school of beans taught the addition of dry mustard, salt and pepper, water to be assimilated by said beans and salt pork on top.

No onion, you notice, nor bacon, but lean salt pork where available.

There you have it, baked bean dogma.

I say if you can't form an unanswerable opinion on how beans should be baked, you still haven't made up your mind on the Roosevelt years, the Bay of Pigs or the famine in Ethiopia.

Take your stand. You don't live here without obligation. Someone lands on your doorstoop this month from Ohio, you get that bean pot out and set your beans to soak.

There's another bone of contention, what kind of beans. Yellow eyes are fine but I did those for a lot of years. Kidney ones have more limited appeal and do best in a casserole about which I'll tell you sometime.

Navy beans are serviceable, small enough to cook faster, usually acceptable and familiar.

No matter what your choice, beautiful people don't come here just for lobster or simply because you're a lot of fun. They're here for a sampling of your heritage. It's a moment in the sun for you and your beans.

Whether they like them or not is their option. That's why we make sure they're part of a buffet.

Other choices are wisely included whenever we honor tradition.

Beacon Hill Roll Call

PRIT (H 1068)

House 132-11, rejected a bill allowing members of local retirement systems to decide if their system will participate in the Pension Reserves Investment Trust (PRIT).

PRIT is the system established by the state to allow local systems to pool their resources which would then be managed by the Pension Reserve Investment Management Board (PRIM). Currently, a three member board in each local system decides whether to enter PRIT and that board's decision must be ratified by the local governing body.

Supporters said the individual members should have the power to decide and claimed the three member boards are controlled by narrow groups of local officials who refuse to join PRIT because it will result in their losing control over millions of dollars.

Opponents said the boards have the expertise to make decisions and noted some board members are elected by the system's entire membership. They noted the bill also removes the safeguard provision requiring local governing bodies to ratify the decision to join.

Reps. Robert Ambler, Suzanne Bump, Robert Cerasoli, Frank Hynes, Charles Mann and Mary Jeanette Murray voted "nay." Rep. William Flynn did not vote.

SALES REPS (H 1312)

House 80-67, gave initial approval to a bill establishing requirements for contracts between manufacturers and independent sales representatives who solicit wholesale orders for the manufacturer's goods.

Required contract provisions include 60 day written notice of a change in territory or account or termination of the contract; payment of commissions within three days of termination; and specifying the period of the contract and reasonable grounds for dismissal; and establishing a reasonable quota.

Supporters, noting the bill will protect hardworking traveling salesmen and women, said many businesses currently use unfair and unethical practices including allowing a sales rep to build up accounts in a a territory and then taking away the territory in order to give it to a favored friend or relative.

Opponents said the state should not interfere in this business matter between two private concerns. they noted sales reps can currently request a contract, but claimed it sets a bad precident to require one.

Reps. Cerasoli, Hynes, Mann and Murray voted "Nay." Reps. Bump and Flynn voted "yea" and Rep. Robert Ambler did not vote."

THE SENATE

"Beacon Hill Roll Call" records local senators' votes on two roll calls from the week of June 3-7.

FOSTER KIDS

Senate 28-6, approved resolutions stating it should be the policy of the Department of Social Services to place children in need of foster care exclusively in the care of persons whose sexual orientation presents no threat to the well-being of the child.

Supporters said the resolutions will clearly state the sense of the Senate that it is immoral and irresponsible to place foster children with gays. Opponents said the resolutions are anti-gay and unfair, and said gays can make good foster parents and should not arbitrarily eliminated. (A "yea" vote is for the resolutions. A "nay" vote is against them.).

Voting "yea" was Sen. Bill Golden, Anna Buckley, Paul Harold and Ned Kirby.

VIETNAM VETS (S 992)

Senate 19-15, gave initial approval to a bill allowing Vietnam veterans convicted of certain violent crimes to be eligible for parole after they serve one-third, rather than two-thirds, of their sentence.

Supporters, noting the bill only allows these veterans to be considered for earlier parole, said this will give special consideration to veterans who have been psychologically affected by their Vietnam experiences.

Opponents, claiming the bill sets a bad precedent, said it was unfair and unwise to single out one group for preferential treatment.

Sens. Bill Golden and Paul Harold voted "yea." Sens. Buckley and Kirby voted "nay."

Real Estate

Notice to Hingham Real Estate Offices:
Re: Jonathan Livingston Square

Several weeks ago I got a phone call from a Hingham Real Estate office looking for space at Jonathan Livingston Square (130 King Street) Route 3A in Cohasset.

I promised the Broker to call if space became available.

Well...store front space (600-800 sq. feet depending on layout) will soon be available at Jonathan Livingston Square. The monthly rent will be approximately $800-$1000 per month.

If you are that broker, or if you or a customer have interest in the space please call our broker Chris Ford in Cohasset at 383-1887.

THE NO-COMPROMISE SOLUTION TO BUYING AN AUTOMOBILE.

When you lay out a substantial amount of money for an automobile, you should get what you want. Buying a car shouldn't be an exercise in making sacrifices.

Saab doesn't ask you to give up anything.

Superb handling and performance have made the Saab 900 one of Europe's most respected sports sedans. But that performance is delivered in return for little gas* and less fuss by a reliable two-liter engine. And unlike many other high-performance cars, the Saab is perfectly at home in the workaday world. Four adults can travel comfortably all day in a Saab, or the rear two seats can be folded flat to add extra space for cargo.

We'll be happy to tell you about a lot of other features that you won't have to give up when you buy a Saab.

SAAB
The most intelligent car ever built.

*Saab 900 5 speed. EPA estimated mpg. 36 estimated highway mpg. Use estimated mpg for comparison only. Mileage varies with speed, trip length and weather. Actual highway mileage will probably be less.

Politicus — by David A. Mittell, Jr.

A citizen/journalist looks at the 'press shield' proposal

When all the right people are as one in the certainty that what they momentarily believe is so right that only yahoos, ding bats, and hicks out of Taunton believe otherwise, and when the media as one concurs, it is time for you and I to gander intellectually on over to Taunton and try to find out how the natives there got to be so smart.

Such an instance obtains in the cry of the media, abetted by all alleged thinking people, for the passage of a "press shield law" in Massachusetts, one that would protect journalists from revealing their sources of information. The state purpose of this proposal is to allow the press to act freely in its constitutionally protected role of probing the inner workings of government and private institutions. The impetus for the proposal comes from the celebrated case of Susan Wornick of Channel 5, who nearly went to jail last week for refusing to tell a judge the name of a man who had told her of witnessing several Revere policemen robbing a store in that city.

To my way of thinking (thinking both as a citizen and as a professional journalist) everything is wrong about the proposed press shield, and nothing is right.

First of all, a celebrity (Wornick) married to a greater celebrity (Bob Lobel, the Channel 4 entertainer/sports reporter) is not the right person or the right case to write law around. A press shield law, even if it be a good idea, ought to be considered and deliberated upon, it should not be rushed through the legislature in response to a pickle a single television personality got herself into.

Secondly, the very behavior of the media in this instance does not speak well to their need for greater power or privilege. Look at it this way: We of the press are at our best when we examine both sides of a question. When we tell you: ". . . on the one hand the accused murderer had a bloody axe in her closet, but on the other hand the victim was machine-gunned to death. . . " we enlighten you and help you make your own informed judgment.

However, in the case of the argument for the need for a press shield law, there has been virtually no "on the other hand." The media have simply been pushing a proposal that they regard as in their interest, and have forsaken their professional responsibility of examining the negative side of the question. The media's behavior is thus hardly a sanguine prediction of our behavior should our privilege increase under a press shield law.

But the real reason I oppose a press shield law goes deeper than that. The press is often called the "fourth estate," and those who advocate increasing its privileges forget that the term "estate" comes from medieval France in which there were three official "estates" or privileged castes. In America we threw out that sort of thing in 1776. In America there may be classes, but there are no privileged castes. We are all citizens before the law, and when the law commands us—as to testify in a criminal case—we are all equally obligated to comply or face the wrath of the law.

Thus, if I, Dave Mittell, alleged journalist, know something about a murder, I am no different from any other citizen who might learn something about a murder. But the proposed press shield would allow me the privilege of deciding whether I would or would not testify in a criminal case, of giving me greater say-so in the matter than a judge in a court of law.

Thus, I think, the rather revealing relevance of the term "fourth estate." A lot of journalists would like to think of themselves as above the law, as a privileged caste passing judgment on the events of the day. I can't think of a single good reason for making this rather arrogant attitude a legal fact. Journalists are and ought to be citizens just like everyone else. We enjoy the blessings of citizenship, and we ought to be answerable to the responsibilities that go with citizenship and if we chose to disobey a court order in a criminal case, we belong in jail with pick-pockets, tax cheats, and others who regard themselves as too fine for the law.

A final point. I have a hard time seeing the press shield law as truly in the interest of the free press. The press today is free because it is unregulated. But come to pass a press shield law we will have to be regulated—otherwise the shield could apply to anybody.

Today any damn fool can become a journalist, I'm living proof of it. And how did Dave Mittell become a journalist? Simple. He ran for the legislature, got rather profoundly defeated, and having failed in politics undertook to write about politics . . . and the rest is history. The point is that if I can claim the legal privilege of protecting a source in a criminal case, then anybody can. I have taken no examinations, I am not licensed to be sane, witty, honest, or even of average intelligence. I am a journalist only because I say I am and because David Cutler, who also has passed no test proving him to be of average intelligence, is kind enough to carry my column.

But if society wants to put me and my publisher above a judge, then it had better know something about us. Better register us, regulate us, examine us, and test us. Otherwise anybody could claim journalistic exemption from citizenship. Therefore (in this citizen/journalist's view) with a press shield law would come definition, with definition would come regulation, and with regulation would come a far greater threat to the free press than the rather modest demand that reporters with knowledge of criminal cases do our duty as citizens.

ANGLER'S CORNER — by George Doucette

Fly Rods and Bluefish - A Perfect Mix

Martha's Vineyard, offshore shoals, and beautiful sandy beaches offer unlimited saltwater fishing. The months of June and July bring bluefish,striped bass, fluke, and the ever popular bonita and little tunney (false albacore) to these local waters.

One of my favorite types of fishing is with a fly rod for these species. By using a 9' to 10' fly rod and saltwater reel with a lot of backing behind the fly line, you can turn fishing for 3 to 6 pound bluefish into some of the best fishing memories you will ever have. This type of sport fishing is only 20 minutes from Cape Cod's mainland and offers a challenge to the angler that is rare to this area. The fish are already there along miles of sandy beaches less than a mile from the shore, in some cases, in very shallow water along the beach. The bonus to this type of fishing is striped bass, bonita and the other above-mentioned species, can be taken by this method. Many types of flies and small lures will attract these fish and have them competing for your offering. The time is now and you won't ever find a more sporting or rewarding type of fishing for a small investment.

Caribbean in October

Single Living Newsmagazine is sponsoring a Caribbean trip in October. The details are sketchy at this point but we'd like to hear from those of you who might be planning a fall vacation, and would like more information.

We can't tell you the exact place and date at this moment, but we can tell you we'll have fun! The zany S.L. staff will be going. There'll be laughs for sure! We plan to limit the ratio of men to women to something approaching equal. It's not a good idea to come with high hopes of meeting your dream person. You'll most likely be disappointed. On the other hand, if you come knowing you'll be with a bunch of other nice single people from the Boston area, that you'll enjoy a 1st class vacation that you deserve, your chances of having a terrific time are 100%.

Please send me more information regarding Single Living *Caribbean in October trip.

Town wins case against Litchfield Express Co.

A District Court judge ruled that the town should recover its property used for the past 16 years as a parking lot by Litchfield Express, Inc.

Lot 25, located at the end of Bayberry Lane, has been the center of controversy and court action for many years. It wasn't until 1984, however, that the town cited the company owner, Barron Salvador, with violations of the town bylaws. The Board of Selectmen then determined the Salvadors were trespassing on town-owned property and ordered the trucks removed from the site.

Since the company moved to Bayberry Lane in 1969, at least four trucks have been stored on the lot. According to the Salvadors, the Board of Selectmen at that time agreed to allow them to use the unbuildable lot for vehicle parking. In 1974, that approval was reiterated by another Board of Selectmen.

But on February 15, 1984, the former building inspector cited the Salvadors for violating town bylaws, using residential property for commercial purposes. Selectmen then voted to revoke any privileges to the town-owned property and ordered all trucks removed within 90 days.

Counter suits have been filed in this case, in an effort to negate the selectmen's 1984 order.

But on May 24, Judge J. Greco of the East Norfolk County District Court in Quincy ordered the town to recover its land on Bayberry Lane.

The decision followed a three-hour trial May 7 in the Quincy court between the town, represented by Attorney Richard Henderson, and Litchfield Express, Inc.

An appeal was filed by the Salvadors' Attorney Joseph D'Agostino June 7, and a trial date has yet to be scheduled for Dedham Superior Court. While the decision is being appealed, the Salvadors will keep their trucks parked on the property.

A counterclaim filed by the Salvadors in the District Court trial was dismissed by Judge Greco. The Salvadors had requested damages for injuries caused by selectmen's decision to revoke permission to use Lot 25.

Maren Cameron, 5, thinks summer is just about the best time of the year. Perfect for flying her kite along Sandy Beach. (Rose Cundari)

Business done in one meeting

The town's first test of the 100-voter quorum was successful at Monday's Special Town Meeting.

About 250 residents attended the single session of town meeting. Business was fast-paced, with a minimum of dialogue. The thirty warrant articles were completed by 11 p.m. that night.

The single article to create any semblence of controversy was article 14, a request to fund architectural fees to design renovations to Milliken Field. Although the article passed unanimously, it was a difficult fight, prolonged by an attempt to reconsider the favorable vote.

Kennth Ekberg, a leading proponent of the renovation project, urged voters to support the $20,000 expenditure. As he explained Monday, the entire project, which would revitalize the football, baseball, soccer, field hockey and tracks fields, would ultimately cost the town $300,000 - $400,000 through a single bond issue.

Included in the renovation plans is the construction of a small utility building, concession stand and restroom, lighting for varsity playing fields, and an all-weather track field.

Ekberg noted that the citizens' committee formed to look at repair alternatives, have reviewed all sources of completing the repairs, including the Army Corps of Engineers and the Army Reserve. No other alternative could complete the project in a timely fashion, he said.

Noting that the advisory committee , capital outlay committee and selectmen favored the project at a later construction date, Ekberg said the citizens' group thought the work was appropriate now.

Advisory Committee member Richard Horn explained that board's opposition to the article, stating it was a "battle of the tax rate." He suggested that the worthy project be completed piecemeal, with contributions solicited from private sources. That suggestion was based on an earlier recommendation of the capital outlay committee.

Charles DeSantis of Forest Street enumerated the number of local residents who have played upon the playing fields behind the high school. Currently, he noted, seventy percent of the entire student body utilizes those facilities, in addition to numerous recreation programs.

Ekberg estimated it will cost each household $17 per year for the 20 years of the life of the bond. That's based on the average real estate assessment of $134,000.

Although one resident questioned the advisibility of adding lights in the residential area, another voter said lighted fields would bring in more revenue from parents unable to attend afterschool games.

When Town Moderator William Weeks was unable to decipher the voice vote, he asked for a hand count. The final deliberations concluded with 126 in favor and 122 against the proposal.

A burst of loud applause followed the announcement, along with a steady exit of voters who had attended the meeting specifically for that article.

A few minutes later, Max Maire of North Main

Police want to meet selectmen

The Cohasset Police Association has brought their contract plight before the public. At this week's Special Town Meeting, members of the union handed out copies of their request to negotiate a contract personally with the Board of Selectmen.

Members of the police association said that night they have been attempting to negotiate a contract with the town for the past 20 months. As of July 1, they will have worked without a contract for one year. Prior to this negotiation period, the most they have worked without a contract is two months.

Association members have stated their desire to sit down directly with selectmen, not with the personnel board and their attorney. This is the first time a labor attorney has been involved in contract negotiations for the town.

The police union and the town have met in three fact-finding sessions, and have met once with a state mediator. Union members said selectmen rejected the mediator's recommendations.

In their open letter to the town meeting voters, the association members stated, "the town has absolutely refused to consider our plight. They have chosen instead to retain the services of an attorney to act for the Town in negotiations. Already they have spent $30,025.43 to date for those services, with no resolution to the problem. This money could be better spent to reach an agreement with the Town's Police."

They continued in the letter, "What are they afraid of? Don't we elect them?

"What we are asking is that the town provide us with a fair salary increase and allow us to retain benefits that we have negotiated for over the years. The salary of Cohasset Police Officers are currently $3000 below most of the surrounding towns. Even if we were to receive the raise offered we would still be $2000 below the same Towns."

The association is appealing to the residents to "ask our fine ELECTED selectmen why they are not willing to meet directly with the Police. We would welcome such a meeting!"

The officers stated they would continue working hard to protect the town and requested residents "contact the Board of Selectmen on our behalf."

Cohasset's week

Water sample tests

The state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) notified the town last week that the sodium content average of the town's water supply is slightly below the maximum allowable level.

Analysis of the drinking water in Cohasset collected on a quarterly basis from the water supply during 1984 indicates a sodium average of 14. If the average level is 15 mg/1, the supply shall be sampled on a quarterly rather than annual basis.

Notice of the sodium level must be sent at least annually to residents by inclusion with a water bill or other form of direct mail.

DEQE notes that if sodium within a water supply exceeds 20 mg/1 , the consumers must be notified.

More filling violations

Zoning Officer Edward Poskus has informed more residents and businesses that they have been filling wetlands without proper authority.

In a letter to Ron Rawson, producer of the South Shore Music Circus, Poskus said that June 11 he observed filling taking place in the parking lot at the Music Circus on Sohier Street.

"A large portion of this parking lot is in the floodplain and watershed protection district," Poskus wrote.

The zoning officer ordered the fill removed until the Music Circus acquires permission from the Conservation Commission and a special permit from the Zoning Board of Appeals.

Poskus added that the fill must be removed within five days of receipt of letter.

The zoning officer also informed Mr. and Mrs. Walter Ross of 159 South Main Street that he observed several loads of fill brought in on that property. Noting that the land is located within the floodplain and wetland protection district, Poskus ordered the fill removed within five days of his notification.

Harbor violation rules

Town Counsel Richard Henderson outlined for Harbormaster Harry Ritter the procedures to be followed in the prosecution of violators of the harbor regulations and bylaws.

According to Atty. Henderson, a certified copy of all harbor regulations and bylaws will be obtained from the Town Clerk, and Officer Brian Noonan will file these with the clerk of the District Court of East Norfolk.

When a violation occurs, the Harbormaster will send a letter to the violators in two forms marked-Exhibit A or B. If the boat is not removed from the harbor within three days, Ritter will prepare and submit a violation report to Officer Noonan using a form marked Exhibit C.

No later than the day following receipt of the written report filed by the harbormaster, Officer Noonan will appear in the Quincy District Court and will fill out a complaint form requesting a hearing on the issuance of a complaint.

Response to letter

Special Counsel for the Cohasset Sewer Commission has taken exception with the Department of Environmental Quality Engineering's (DEQE) determination that Cohasset has not fully completed its funding grant application.

Atty. Jeffrey Bates noted May 31 that "Cohasset has in fact filed a complete Step 3 application with your office." That application is the subject of a currently-pending grant appeal before EPA Region 1, he added.

"Accordingly, it is Cohasset's position that it is not appropriate to place Cohasset's project on the extended portion of the FY85 Project Priority List and that its project should remain on the fundable portion of the list," Atty. Bates wrote.

DEQE Director Thomas McMahon notified the town May 14 that it was the intention of the Division of Water Pollution Control to place Cohasset's project on the extended portion of the FY-85 EPA Project Priority List because of an incomplete application filed by the town.

Beechwood lines

The Beachwood Section of Cohasset is receiving new telephone facilities.

"Scattered residential growth plus the Wheelwright Farm development has increased demand for telephone service in the area," said New England Telephone Public Relations Manager Jacqueline Jung.

"So technicians are installing nearly three miles of aerial cable along Beechwood Street to modernize the cable facilities in the area and provide additional cable capacity to meet the present and future calling needs of telephone customers served by the Cohasset (383) exchange."

Work on this project is expected to be completed by year's end.

This is one of many such projects New England Telephone is undertaking this year.

Covenant signed

The planning board last week signed a covenant with the developer of Wheelwright Park, outlining the responsibilities of the developer in that project.

Chairman Christine Bassett noted the covenant with the previous owners expired May 28, and therefore no guarantee was attached to the new project.

The covenant was reviewed and approved by Town Counsel Richard Henderson. Chairman Bassett asked the developer if the covenant "spells out the cluster's responsibility for the maintenance of the roadway so there are no questions?" Developer John Rodolph assured her it was contained in the covenant and that Henderson had checked for that stipulation.

Included in the covenant was surety to protect the town if the project is not finished. A bank will hold the surety for the developer, to assure completion of the project without liability by the town.

Order supported

At their meeting two weeks ago, the Board of Selectmen voted unanimously to ratify the action taken by Selectman Frank England in obtaining a restraining order May 24.

The court-ordered restraining order was issued against Parker Avenue resident William Figueiredo. He had attempted to construct a barricade at the end of the street, prohibiting boaters from launching their boats and turning their cars around at the end of the dead-end street. Selectmen contend he erected the barricade on town-owned property.

On Memorial Day weekend, Chairman England instructed Atty. Mark DiGiacomo to obtain a restraining order against Figueiredo's barricade.

Monday road closing

Highway Surveyor Harold Litchfield is warning residents of the probable road closing on Jerusalem Road, Monday, June 24 at approximately 6 a.m.

Litchfield said the road will be detoured at the intersection of Jerusalem and Nichols Road, and at the intersection of Jerusalem Road and Atlantic Avenue.

According to Litchfield, the Highway Dept. will be replacing a culvert at approximately 255 Jerusalem Road.

It is important to note, he warned, that work will be completed if weather permits. The construction is expected to take at least an entire workday.

Street asked the moderator if those departed voters were actually registered voters, and requested that the vote be reconsidered at some time.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle lambasted Maire, saying he should apologize to the tellers and counters at the meeting who have ensured that all voters are registered prior to the start of the session.

Selectman Cliff Mitman warned the audience it was important not to set a precedent of reconsideration unless new information was to be introduced "rather than playing the game as to how many people left the meeting."

Advisory member Horn noted that with the quorum reduction to 100 voters, it will be easier for "special interest" people to attend the meeting and leave once the issue is decided.

Several of the voters who minutes before exited from the meeting, gathered inside the high school auditorium again to vote on the reconsideration. The motion was defeated and the previous approval of article 14 remained in effect.

Another article which was voted and later reconsidered was a request to erect a 10-foot high litter fence at the landfill. The fence, as explained by Board of Health Chairman Barbara Kern, would be used to catch flying debris at the landfill before it settles on private property at Cedar Ledge Village.

Although selectmen urged voters to support the $4500 expense, saying "the town should not be accused of littering someone's property," the meeting rejected the request. Landfill Supervisor Joseph Laugelle had previously attempted to sway the voters, relating how he had to travel through the water hole at Cedar Ledge in a boat, picking up trash from the area. He requested the fence appropriation, noting he did not wish to repeat the experience "because I can't even swim," he explained.

By a voice vote, the article was defeated.

One article later Robert Sturdy of Jerusalem Road asked for reconsideration. He implored the voters to "think about the legal responsibility to maintaining litter within town property." If the town denied this appropriation, he stated, "the town will be sued by the private property owners and we will have increased legal expenditures."

The advisory committee reiterated its opposition to the fence, saying "what happens to the litter that blows over 10 feet? And how will we take the litter from the fence?" member James Lagrotteria asked.

On a voice vote, the motion to reconsider the article was defeated.

When that was questioned by seven voters, a hand count determined that a majority of 77 voters did not want to reconsider the article.

The final article of the warrant was passed within a few minutes. That article simply requested that voters accept the scholarship fund provided by the Margaret Mary Hardy Trust Agreement.

School committee member Richard Conley noted that Hardy bequeathed $219,000 to the Cohasset High School graduating classes. This year, 14 scholarships in her memory were awarded.

"She did things for our town and never asked for thanks. As a thank-you to Maggie, I think we can be a little more friendly toward ourselves," Conley told the voters.

Voters quickly voted to accept the scholarship gift.

Weddings and Engagements

Mr. & Mrs. Paul A. Plante

Davis/Plante

Abigail M. Davis, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Roger W. Davis of Springfield, Vermont, and Paul A. Plante, son of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick A. Plante of Cohasset, Mass., were married recently at St. Mary's Catholic Church in Springfield, Vermont.

Maid of honor was the bride's sister, Emily W. Davis of Edinburgh, Scotland. Bridesmaids included the bride's sisters, Louise Davis of Garland, Maine, Elizabeth Groves of Philadelphia, PA, Michele Neirenberg of Long Island, NY, and sisters of the groom, Anna M. Plante, Jacqueline M. Plante, and Jennifer M. Plante, all of Cohasset, Mass.

The best man was the groom's brother, Patrick A. Plante, Jr. of Cohasset. Ushers included Fred M. Dellorfano, III, Anthony Dellorfano, Douglas Dillon, Philip Drago, and Matthew Brown, all of Cohasset, and J. Alan Groves of Philadelphia. Ringbearer was J. Alasdair Groves, nephew of the bride.

Paul Plante is a 1980 graduate of Cohasset High School. Both Mr. and Mrs. Plante are 1984 graduates of Tufts University. Mrs. Plante is employed as an executive assistant with Destination Management, Inc. in Woburn. Mr. Plante is an engineer with Raytheon Co. in Andover.

Following a wedding trip to Aruba, the couple will live in Lawrence, Mass.

Chapman/Brown

Mr. and Mrs. Peter A. Chapman of Cohasset announce the engagement of their daughter, Linda J. Chapman, to Andrew P. Brown, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas P. Brown of Beverly. An August 17 wedding is planned.

A graduate of Bowdoin College, Miss Chapman is employed by William Filene's Sons & Co. as a senior programmer/analyst. Mr. Brown, a graduate of Bowdoin College, is completing his third year at Case Western Reserve Law School in Cleveland, Ohio. He has accepted a position with the Boston law firm of Burns & Levinson and will begin employment in September.

Conway awarded CRB

Jack Conway, chairman of the board of the 32-office real estate company bearing his name, has been awarded the Certified Real Estate Brokerage Manager (CRB) designation by the Realtors National Marketing Institute, an affiliate of the National Association of Realtors.

The award was announced at the recent Marketing Institute meetings in Washington, D.C., which were held in conjunction with the Realtors Legislative Meetings of the National Association of Realtors.

The CRB designation recognizes individuals who have achieved the highest level of knowledge in real estate brokerage management and marketing. The 3,959 individuals who have earned the designation have completed an intensive series of real estate marketing and management courses, met stringent experience requirements, and demonstrated the application of brokerage management concepts in their everyday practice.

A Cohasset resident, Conway began his real estate business in the town of Scituate 26 years ago. He is also president of the Northern Mortgage Company which is based in Norwell, the Hanover-based Jack Conway Insurance Agency, a director and past president of RELO/Inter-City Relocation Service, Inc. in Chicago and an Eastern Utility Associates trustee. He has served as president of the Plymouth County Development Council for three terms; he is a trustee at Quincy Jr. College; he has served as director and past president of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce, and as a director of the Plymouth Area Chamber of Comerce. He belongs to the Greater Brockton and Hanover Chamber of Commerce organizations, the Brockton-based Coalition for the Homeless, and he was recently elected a trustee of Plimoth Plantation.

Jack Conway

Other associates of the Jack Conway Company with CRB designations include Muriel Desmond, Cohasset office manager.

Broker of month

Claire Shields of the Cohasset office of Gallery 360 was named Broker of the Month in the firm's 11 South Shore offices. She produced the most sales, listings and referrals during April.

A consistent multi-million dollar broker throughout her career, Shields was the 1984 Cohasset office broker of the year and was the number two broker in the Gallery 360 interoffice sales contest.

She holds the GRI and CRS (Certified Residential Specialist) designations. An active member of the Plymouth County Board of Realtors, she has served as the past chairman of the Make America Better Committee, and has served on the Hospitality and Program Committee, the By-Laws Committee and the Legislative Action Committee (RPAC).

Shields is a Scituate resident.

Chiropractic for HEALTH

by Dr. Kevin M. Neill, Chiropractic Physician

FIRE OR ICE

When an injury that causes back pain occurs, do not, as most people do, reach for a heating pad. Trauma is actually best treated with ice. It helps to reduce inflammation and eliminate pain. It also prevents the occurrence of much of the swelling. The introduction of heat can make inflammation, pain and swelling much worse, especially right after the injury. Apply ice to the sore area for fifteen minutes every four to six hours. This effectively anesthetizes the muscle spasm that accompanies back injuries such as muscle strain. Heat may later be the answer in the days following a back injury. Consult a chiropractor if the pain persists.

The spine is truly a marvelous network of intricate and sensitive nerves. It serves as the communication network of the body. Any disturbance to such a vital area results in malfunction through interruption of commands from the brain to all parts of the body. Chiropractic serves to address such points of difficulty thus allowing healing commands to proceed along the pathways and thus provide for the natural healing process to take place. For answers to your needs and the comfort you desire, call the COHASSET CHIROPRACTIC OFFICE, 760 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy., Suite 12, today. Tel. 383-1211, 1214. Daily by appt.

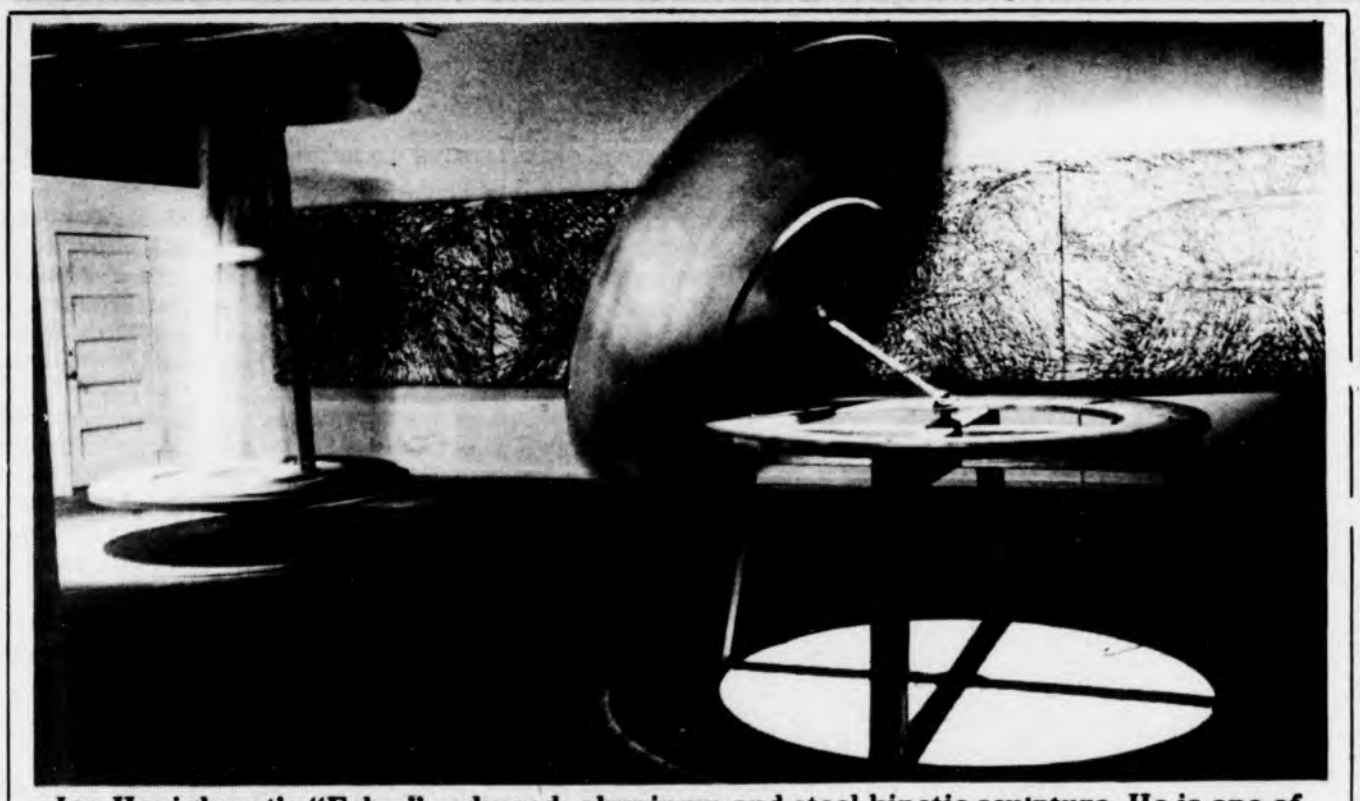
The Law and You



by Richard Price, Attorney-at-Law

INTENTIONAL INJURIES

In most states, a personal-injury suit on grounds of assault can be brought against anyone who deliberately attempts to injure you. If someone takes a swing at you and misses, that person has assaulted you just as if the blow had connected. Should an assault result in the death of the victim, the surviving family can bring suit. That the person who committed the assault is arrested and charged with a criminal offense does not affect your right to bring a civil suit against that person. Criminal and civil cases are tried separately. Ordinarily, it is in your interest to delay the civil case until the criminal case has ended. If the defendant is found guilty, the verdict can be introduced as evidence against him at the civil trial.

The system of justice, in order to protect everyone, is understandably complex. To maximize the protection of your rights it is prudent to understand the workings of the law as it applies to your situation. For answers to your legal questions as well as an analysis and approach to your legal needs consult an attorney. LAW OFFICES OF RICHARD PRICE, 760 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy., Rt. 3A, Cohasset, 383-9882. I am available daily by appt.

HINT:
If found not guilty in a criminal court, the defendant in an assault case cannot use the verdict in his favor at the civil trial.

Jay Havighurst's "Echo," redwood, aluminum and steel kinetic sculpture. He is one of five artists whose work has been accepted for the invitational exhibit of the South Shore Arts Festival, June 28-30. Exhibit will be in the Congregational Church on the Cohasset Common.

Abstract art exhibit

Five different artists each expressing their ideas in the abstract will exhibit their work together in the 30th anniversary of the South Shore Arts Festival.

Selected for the invitational exhibit of the festival are two painters — Irene Valincius and Michael O'Connell, and three sculptors — Suzanna Schell, Jay Havighurst and Lenore Tenenblatt. Their works will be on exhibit in the Cohasset Congregational Church during the South Shore Art Center's festival, June 28 through June 30.

Barbara Gurnis and Ron Goodwin, whose responsibility has been to put together the invitational show, went looking for work that was non-representational and "so evolved these artists whose work though different in nature go together for the invitational exhibit," Gurnis explained.

Except for Havighurst, all the other artists work out of the Fort Point Channel Arts Community of Boston. Havighurst, an environmental artist and kinetic sculptor, works out of Brighton. His works incorporate sound and movement and has been involved with dance with his sculptures at the Mobius Theatre.

This invitational exhibit demonstrates the ability of five different artists to bring together their work into one cohesive show. For a complete listing of events during the festival, contact the South Shore Art Center, 103 Ripley Road in Cohasset, 383-9548.

Coast Guard fund help

The House of Representatives recently gave the U.S. Coast Guard an important helping hand when it approved an amendment proposed by Congressman Gerry E. Studds (D-MA) to make an additional $15 million available to the service during the remainder of this fiscal year and in 1986.

Rep. Studds, who is Chairman of the House Subcommittee on Coast Guard and Navigation, was able to gain broad support for the amendment by pointing out that the funds requested would not come from the general treasury, but instead from a special fund financed by recreational boaters, and intended by federal law to be used to help pay the operating expenses of the Coast Guard.

The fund, which was established in its present form by legislation Studds sponsored last year, consists of money derived from that part of the federal tax on gasoline that is attributable to the purchase of motorboat fuel. Studds' amendment was needed to make $15 million of the amount derived from this tax available for expenditure by the Coast Guard.

Studds said he is hopeful his amendment will find similar success when it is considered by the Senate in the weeks ahead.

☐If you want to hear about a family full of graduates, here you go — The Clark Young family had three grads this spring! Clark ("Skip") Young, III, earned his bachelor of science in business Administration from Salem State College, and graduated from there on May 18. Sister Susan Young received her associate's degree in Science from Massasoit on June 7. And, on June 9, brother David graduated from CHS. Pictures were taken of all three in their gowns together, and there was a huge party for the graduates that was held last Saturday. Congratulations to the Young family, you too, Mom and Dad!

☐Had a nice chat with Mrs. Vivian McCormick last week. She and her son, Donald, just returned from Loring Air Force Base where Donald's twin brother Duncan and wife Carrie (formerly Calderwood) are stationed. The occasion was their daughter Cindy, who was graduated from Limestone High School. This was an extra special occasion, as Carrie, Duncan and Donald were all graduates on the same date, 20 years to the day apart! Cindy and her sister, Heather, plan to vacation in Cohasset this summer, spending time with their Aunt Helen and Uncle Bill Luscombe and their great-grandmother Mrs. Sargent Power of Beach Street. It should be a grand vacation for Cindy, who after "lazing around" for a while, is planning on attending University of Maine in the fall.

☐Marie Price is better, thank you! And who wouldn't be, with all of the special attention she receives? Went by the other day to see her being serenaded by the third graders, led by Rose Collins, standing on her front lawn. They had been to the library so they were "in the neighborhood and thinking of Mrs. Price." That isn't the only visit that Marie received either! Jodi and Loni Colwill, Brian and Elizabeth Thomas, and Bob Meehan all were brought by their Moms into the Philips House at Mass. General. There they were treated to a special ride, in Mrs. Price's hospital bed! Marie has received so many cards, letters and gifts during her illness. She loves this living in a small town! Everyone is so supportive, losing a gall bladder isn't all bad after all! Last time I talked to her, she was planning a party for the 40 kindergarten children, to be held at her house, complete with ice cream and the works. Now I call that a nice story.

☐Two new members of the Class of 2002 were born at the beginning of this month — a son was born to Clifford and Amy Cutler on June 3, and a son was also born to Kenneth and Colleen Roth on June 2.

☐Good luck to all of the students taking their final exams this week. Another year under your belts!

☐Scott Ketcham will exhibit his work next month, at the South Shore Art Center. The opening reception will be Friday, June 28, and is an exciting time for Scott, to be sure.

☐Don't forget swim team tryouts this Friday and Saturday. It is a lot of fun (as well as hard work), and the team is always very competitive.

☐Ann Cifrino, Heather Fairchild and Thomas Goyette were all part of this year's graduating class from Bridgewater State, receiving bachelor's degrees. And, Pamela Johnson, Peter Kleir and Lauren Murphy all recently graduated from Providence College.

☐Charles Weeks of 130 Border St. received a Bachelor of Arts degree cum laude from Harvard University.

You've built equity in your home . . .

The equity in your home (the difference between the amount you owe on your first mortgage and what your home is really worth) is an asset often overlooked.

You worked for your home...now let your home work for you. Our loan officers will be pleased to talk with you about taking advantage of this ideal money source.

A loan on this equity can pay the tuition for your children's education, buy or build a recreational home, allow you to take advantage of investment opportunities, and even help you assume an existing mortgage on a new home. We can assist with any worthwhile financial need.

You have built equity in your home — why not use it???

Storage tanks explained

By Karen Cubie

Jeff Bettinger, chairman of the Watershed Protection Area Committee, announced his resignation at the June 13 meeting which was held in order to hear a presentation by William Baird of a new type of leak detection system.

Bettinger is moving to Bintutu, Malaysia for six months in order to start a fertilizer complex.

Baird, the president of WEB Engineering and Leak Detection Systems, presented the new leak detection system which he has been involved with inventing.

Leak detection systems are designed to discover how much oil is leaking from underground storage tanks. If a tank is leaking, water supplies near it may be endangered.

Baird claims that most companies with large storing units don't care about what they consider minimal leaks.

"No one seems to care," he said. "They care about 'Is there enough in the tank?'

"The homeowner also has no idea if his use of fuel is equal to that put into the ground," he claimed. "If you run out of oil before the oil man makes his delivery, and if it happens consistently, you know that you have a leak. But sometimes the dealer decides you're consuming more, maybe he thinks that you've turned your heat up, and so he makes his trips more frequently."

According to Baird, most leak detection systems are too inaccurate to determine whether or not a tank has a leak.

"If a tank is leaking .049 gallons an hour, it's considered a 'tight tank,' " Baird said. ".05 gallons means that roughly 400 gallons a year can leak and still be considered a tight tank."

Baird claims that this degree of leakage does not concern firefighters.

"They can deal with it," he said. "But, today, from an environmental point of view, it's an unlivable standard. It can destroy billions of gallons of drinking water. If your well is within 100 yards of a tank, then it may be in jeopardy."

Baird's system is called the Tank Auditor System.

"This system works on buoyancy," he said. "We suspend material compatible with the liquid, and we can tell whether the liquid level is going up or down. Our accuracy is .000687 inches. We decided to do away with temperature compensation tests (the method of testing most other systems use), and use the dimensions of the tank itself. We also don't worry about the expanding and contracting of the liquid."

Baird stated that his system was recently listed as one of the top three systems by environmental protections agencies.

"Right now we nestle under the .05 gallon standard," he said. "I know that if I see a .05 gallon loss, the tank is leaking. We tell our clients that they should be concerned when we see half that rate of leakage.

"Corrosion is an accelerating process," he continued. "We can duplicate the identical test each time, and we can see the leakage clearly creeping up. We can call a halt to it."

Baird claimed that his system can discover a leak as small as five or six droplets.

"But that's meaningless in a 6,000 gallon tank," he said. "Droplets mean nothing. We look for trends and significant numbers. It only takes us one minute to determine a significant leak."

Baird claimed that his system could tell whether the leak was in the pipe leading to the tank, or in the tank itself.

"This isn't important to the environmental protection agency," he said. "But the piping is above the tank, and the top of the tank usually doen't see the product."

"So far we've had 100 percent success," he said. "If I recommend that a tank be pulled, it usually is. If I say that a tank is leaking, I'm usually right.

"The scary part is, how many of the rest of the tanks are leaking also? That's the unknown for everyone."

Editor injured in accident

A Duxbury woman, who is also editor of the Hingham Mariner, was in critical but stable condition at South Shore Hospital early this week after a single car accident in Hingham June 12.

Judy Gilman, 36, had delivered the week's Hingham Mariner to the press in Duxbury before heading to the Hingham office to meet her daughter, Kathy.

Witnesses speculated Gilman fell asleep or blacked out, causing her car to glide across the intersection of Prospect Street and into a tree about 6:30. There were no skid marks.

She was alone in the car, wearing a seatbelt. She sustained serious injuries to her head, face and leg. Hingham safety officials used the Jaws of Life to remove her from the car, which had been traveling, they estimated, about 30 miles per hour.

Judy Gilman has been editor of the Hingham Mariner since May, 1983. But before that time, she was editor of the Hingham Mirror, until that publication went out of business. Over the years she has, in fact, covered meetings and reported for many South Shore towns, including Marshfield.

Judy Gilman and her husband John have one daughter, Kathy, a student at Woodward School in Quincy.

Editorials

Thanks for caring

When unwelcome word came last Wednesday evening that Editor Judy Gilman had been in an accident, her colleagues at the Mariner exhibited responses typical of any "family" in such circumstances.

We willingly presumed in the first moments of learning of the accident, that it would be superficial, causing perhaps some physical injury, certainly annoyance, inconvenience, damage to the car. Some call that denial.

Because in fact the truth demanded a great deal from us, from her real family, from the town whose news she gathers, from anyone who cares about Judy Gilman.

The single car accident at 6:30 last Wednesday evening sent her car, cruising slowly at about 30 miles an hour, into an immovable object, a tree. The concensus is that she blacked out or dozed off. There were no skid marks. There was a seat belt in use.

The speed, the belt, those should have offered her the protection we presumed.

That was not the case. In fact, the attractive, 36-year old experienced reporter, writer and editor, sustained multiple damages. Those included a broken leg, jaw, nose, and what have been life-threatening head injuries.

There was a time, 24 to 48 hours, when she was listed at the South Shore Hospital in poor condition. That has been upgraded to critical and stable.

Now we are encouraged. In fit condition, Judy appears well-prepared to work her way through even an arduous recovery. And it will be that. Her injuries are such as to require time, healing, caring support.

There are people who, on hearing of an emergency, buy flowers or start cooking, or make phone calls.

Our in-house response at the Mariner is similar, but here we start writing, while praying.

Called to arms for "Judy's paper" are a number of familiar and new writers and workers. The rest of the staff is prepared to jump in, covering "her town" at a moment's notice. It is what we can do for a friend and fellow worker.

And unashamedly here we put it on record, we want Judy Gilman well, happy, healthy and back in her office where she belongs.

We are "keeping house" for her until that is possible.

We recognize and will utilize the inherent kindness and concern this hometown offers its sparky, red-headed editor. We welcome your support. We're in the office, 749-5393 or 383-6731 or out working. Bring us your news. We are keeping the Hingham Mariner in shape until Judy Gilman can do that again. And to the many who have expressed concern and caring, thank you on behalf of Judy, her husband and daughter, and the Mariner.

SS Softball League under way

By Heather Hanlon

The South Shore Men's Softball League is underway in June! The league has three divisions with five teams in each.

Within the first division is Jamie's Pub with a great record of three wins and only one loss.

The Bell Buoy creeps close behind with two wins and one loss. Reynold's Package Store has a two and two record.

Walker Labs presses on with a one and two record and the Merrimen have a 0-3 record, having played some of the toughest teams so far.

In the second division, Farrell's Carpentry begins the season with two wins and no losses. The Buckeyes and the K of C each boast a season of two wins and only one loss so far.

In the second division Farrell's Carpentry begins the season withe two wins and no losses. The Buckeyes and the K of C each boast a season of two wins and only one loss so far. Balance Transport has a one and two record to date while Word Worksloft fight hard with a zero and four record.

In the third division, the D.F.U. has started off a great season with a three and zero record. The men from Riddle's have won two and lost one so far.

Kelleher's Landscaping is playing well with a two and two record while the Alligators have achieved a one and one record to date. Joyce Construction is working hard with a 0-4 record.

Need explained for fourth class

To the Editor:

It has recently been brought to our attention by Deer Hill faculty that the present fifth grade continues to have a need for smaller class groupings.

The teachers have stated that the best alternative for our fifth grade children would be four classes in the sixth grade. Currently, three are budgeted.

While it is late in the school year, the seriousness of this situation has prompted us to ask for a discussion of the matter before the school committee. This will take place at 9:15 p.m. on Monday, June 24. Our specific request to the committee is the funding for a fourth full-time teacher for next year's sixth grade.

Last year, as you may recall, parents lobbied for a fourth full-time teacher for this year. The school committee voted to fund a half-time teacher. Although the half-time teacher has helped the situation, the underlying academic and social problems of this class are still very much with them.

Many of us had hoped that our fifth graders would have been in four classes in fourth grade (enrollment 79) as the preceding and following classes of similar size were. While we are grateful for the half-time teacher this year, it would have been better if they'd had four full-time teachers (enrollment 81) as the preceding class of similar size had, and the following class of similar size will have. While we have tried to keep this issue focused on our fifth graders, it is impossible not to notice that they have been treated inequitably.

The teachers will make every effort to be at this meeting to express their concerns about our children's educational future. We appreciate their involvement and urge you to join them at this meeting.

We all need to be at the June 24 school committee meeting! A large number of parents in attendance would be the best way to show the extent of our concern and desire for a righting of this ongoing situation.

If you absolutely cannot attend, please call one of us, or write us a letter expressing your thoughts.

For Mr. Deakin's class — Jill Craft, 383-6832; Mr. Levine's class — Judy Bronstein, 383-0908, and Mrs. Magoun's class — Karin Bartow, 383-0572.

Please be there on June 24, 9:15 p.m.

More senior walkers

To theEditor,

I was quite flattered to be on the front page of the Cohasset Mariner June 6th. Millions of people (well, quite a few) stopped me to say what a nice article it was.

I think I have seen more senior citizens walking since the paper came out, or maybe I just hope that's true.

Thank you for your sensitive writing.

Sincerely,
Ann Leonard

Lower quorum a test of "special interests"

By Jane Lane

Commentary

Whether it was the warrant articles, the new Town Meeting signs, or the reduced quorum, the special summer edition of town meeting was successful.

In three hours, about 250 residents debated and voted on 30 warrant articles. Never in recent memory has town meeting been as smooth and efficient.

New signs announcing the meeting were posted throughout town by Highway Surveyor Harold Litchfield and his crew. The large signs were constructed by industrial arts students at the high school.

The warrant articles, many of them left over from the annual meeting in April, did not contain many surprises or thrills. About the only controversy generated Monday night was the $20,000 appropriation for renovations to Milliken Field.

This project was generated by a group of citizens who feel that Cohasset youths deserve better than the poor playing fields behind the high school. One resident noted that the soccer, baseball, football, and track fields will be used by recreational as well as school-sponsored teams. And after all, an education does not totally depend on classroom teaching alone.

The common bond among these parents was their deep concern for the present and future children of our town. If they do not have our unanimous support, they do deserve our admiration. It's not often that we have the time and drive to take up a cause and see it through to a successful conclusion.

We hope only the best, that the playing fields of Cohasset evolve into the best and that they are well-maintained.

Tree and Park Supt. Peter Laugelle, who for years fought the great battle to preserve what remained of Milliken Field, has supported this project from the start. We are sure his department will do their best to care for the fields.

And we hope, as we do each year, we did not financially over extend ourselves. As one advisory committee member noted, there are some big expenditures ahead for next year, including a probable request for a new fire truck. Despite their objections, and those of the capital outlay committee, we decided to dig a bit deeper and pull out the extra $300,000 - $400,000 it will take to renovate these areas.

Remember that when budget times comes around next year, and the free cash supply is not plentiful enough to purchase some other necessary supply for another town department.

Lastly, we hate to spread the proverbial rain cloud over the playing fields, but . . . we couldn't help but notice the near-rush to storm from town meeting as soon as the Milliken article was voted.

It was embarassingly apparent that these folks came for one article alone, and didn't care to look at the others.

While we commend them for caring enough to fight for a noble cause, we chastise them for limiting their enthusiasm. There were many more articles of importance to be discussed, and they needed your input.

We realize not everyone involved in the Milliken Field article ran toward the nearest exit once vote was counted, but many did. To those who presevered, we say thanks. To those who attempted an early escape, we say shame on you!

Murray's memos

By Mary Jeanette Murray

Report from the State House

State Representative Mary Jeanette Murray (R) 3rd Plymouth District is a co-sponsor of legislation to deal with adult drug dealers on school property.

The bill was filed by Representative James G. Collins (D) of Amherst who attempted to introduce this in the Education Bill. Rep. Murray voted with that amendment while she obtained an amendment to have all substance abuse allowed to be taught in the schools.

In the fall of 1984, the Massachusetts Department of Public Health, Division of Drug Rehabilitation conducted a survey of drug and alcohol use among secondary school students in Massachusetts. The results presented in this report are based on responses from 5,078 ninth through twelfth grade students in 67 schools across the Commonwealth.

Drug and alcohol use is widespread in the ninth through twelfth grades. Ninety percent of the respondents reported using alcohol in their lifetime, often in combination with other drugs. Sixty percent of those surveyed had used one or more illicit drugs in their lifetime and 31 percent had used one or more illicit drugs in the month prior to the survey. The illicit drug use indicated that marijuana is the drug of choice: marijuana had been used by 51 percent of the respondents, amphetamines by 24 percent, inhalants by 19 percent, and cocaine by 17 percent. Although the substance use is widespread, it is important to review this data with the recognition that 10 percent of the respondents had never used alcohol or illicit drugs and 40 percent had never used illicit drugs. It should also be noted that these findings very likely present a moderate picture of adolescent drug and alcohol use since young people who have been expelled from or dropped out of school were not included in the survey.

Substance use increases by grade level: 70 percent of twelfth graders reported illicit drug use in their lifetime and 41 percent reported illicit drug use in the past month. This applies similarly to males and females. The age of first drug use is low, with 28 percent of the respondents reporting use of illicit drugs at age twelve or younger. Rep. Murray said, "The Massachusetts high school senior lifetime prevalence rate is higher than the national average for alcohol, marijuana, cocaine, tranquilizers and inhalants." Respondents generally felt that drugs were easily available to them: 83 percent of the sample felt it would be easy to obtain marijuana and 46 percent felt it would be easy to obtain cocaine. Rep. Murray said, "Students reported being high on alcohol and/or drugs while in school over the past year, nine percent reported being high on alcohol and 21 percent reported being high on marijuana."

The bill calls for mandatory sentences ranging from two years for the sale of marijuana to 10 years for the sale of heroin.

Rep. Collins thanked Rep. Murray for co-sponsoring the bill which is an effort to stem the flow of illegal drugs to school children.

Murray, who represents Cohasset, Hingham and Hull, formed the first Drug Committee along with her husband, Phil, in the town of Cohasset seventeen years ago!

"I have sponsored and co-sponsored many bills dealing with the drug problem. It is an insidious problem and our youth must be protected against it," concluded Rep. Murray.

Hagerty's won't move gate

The owners of Cohasset Colonials have refused a request by selectmen to move the gate on their property at Parker Avenue on weekends to increase the area for residents launching their boats.

Company President John Hagerty enumerated the reasons for their decision not to comply with the request, including the lack of security in the area. Saying "moving the gate would allow a greater number of cars to park literally next to our buildings," Hagerty said the proposed gate location would increase the risk of fire.

He also noted moving the gate would "limit an already unconforming situation," at the existing parking lot. Hagerty stated the company needs the space for employee parking, and moving the gate would restrict access to the lot for delivery trucks.

Hagerty mentioned that the company for years has allowed cars to turn around on their property which has caused the lot to deteriorate. "We plan to ask the Conservation Commission to allow us to fill in the ruts at our expense so Cohasset citizens can continue to use our land during the week," he wrote to selectmen.

Cohasset school news

Suhrbier receives gift

The Executive Board of the Cohasset PSO (Parent School Organization) presented exiting President Robin Suhrbier a thank-you gift of a mirror painted with a scene of Cohasset Common, in appreciation of the fine job she did heading up the PSO for school year 1984-85, at their Board Meeting, June 13 at the home of Mary Beth Lean.

PSO urges attendance

The PSO urges all parents to attend the School Committee meeting, June 24 at 8 p.m., Room 107 at Cohasset High School.

The topics to be covered at this very important meeting include: scholarship application and requirements, attendance policy and change of high school day.

Thanks for award

"Receiving the first annual PSO Golden Apple Award at Class Night last night was and continues to be a very dramatic occasion in my life, so multi-faceted as to make a thank you challenging, but very necessary.

Mr. Streeter asked me to attend, but I had no idea what was forthcoming. Had I been more prepared or less dazzled, I would have spoken words of gratitude to you and to the students from the stage. But,as I told the seniors this morning at graduation rehearsal, last night's Class Night was the first I have attended in 25 years at Cohasset High, and I presumed the event was to be an informal one for fun and games. I was shocked to arrive and find instead a formal atmosphere and hoped I would not be singled out in my informal attire and unprepared head.

I also told the seniors this morning that my first reaction upon reclaiming my seat in the auditorium was, "How could I repay them for this honor? By at least attending their graduation, which I would have been proud to do." But I must unavoidably be in Connecticut Sunday, so I explained and said to the seniors I would be thinking of them Sunday and that we must believe in spiritual things.

In addition I reminded this senior class that they have had the reputation of being a most thoughtful and decent group. Their gesture — which is the PSO's — embodies this reputation. Today has been a most generous day, with colleagues as well as students happy to share the initiation of the PSO Golden Apple Award. On behalf of the special interaction between people known as learning, I thank you profoundly for this recognition and for the steady encouragement and support the PSO provides. We need it."

Third graders meet governor

Wednesday, June 12, third graders from the Joseph Osgood School went on a field trip to the Massachusetts State House, where they were greeted by the Governor himself. The children had their picture taken by the governor's official photographer on the great hall staircase. Lara Martin wanted to take her own picture of Governor Dukakis, but when her camera failed to work, the Governor gave her a hug instead. He told the children that they were lucky to live by the ocean. "Enjoy your summer," he said.

State Representative, Mary Jeanette Murray, took the third graders into the House of Representatives, where each child sat in a representative's seat. They were given a guide to the State House called, "What's Under the Golden Dome?" and also a certificate signed by the Speaker of the House.

Unfortunately, a picnic and ride on the swan boats, which was to follow the State House visit, was rained out.

C.H.S. artist honored

Cohasset High School student Kathi McGuire's artwork will be on display in the office of Senator William Golden. Her black and white photograph of Cohasset Harbor was chosen for the State House exhibit.

A reception honoring the art students was held on Wednesday, June 19 in Boston.

Osgood appreciation day

Teachers and staff members of the Joseph Osgood School enjoyed a "Year-end relaxation party" at the home of Joanne Chittick. The party, hosted by PSO representatives Kyle Lubitz and Joanne Chittick, afforded PSO board members a chance to show their appreciation to the Osgood teachers and to say "thank you" for a most successful school year.

CCC typing course

The Cohasset Community Center is in the process of organizing a Typing Course at Cohasset High School during the summer; Tuesday and Thursday evenings from 7 to 8:30 p.m.

Anyone interested in registering for this class should call the center at 383-0088 Monday and Wednesday, June 24 and 26 between 9 a.m. and noon to register.

The Community Center is in the process of putting together the program for the fall. An instructor is needed to start a ballet program. Anyone interested in teaching ballet or other courses should contact the Center or our Program Chairman, Madaline Onley at 383-1492.

Counseling lecture

The Coastal Community Counseling Center and the Center for Memory Impairment and Neurological Disorder present a free public informational lecture on "Helping a Failing Elderly Person Cope with Memory or Behavior Problems."

A lecture and discussion will follow at 7 to 8 p.m.

The lecture will take place at Braintree Police Station, 282 Union Street, Braintree.

The lecture is open to the public.

Vo-tech forms SADD group

By Karen Cubie

The South Shore Regional School District Committee approved a proposal to establish a Students Against Drunk Driving Chapter in the South Shore Vocational Technical Schools at a dinner meeting in the Abington Campus Restaurant June 12.

Ed Quigley, the Teacher Aid and Audio Visual Coordinator, and Pam Titus, a Guidance Counselor and Special Education teacher, presented the proposal to the committee along with a group of students.

They suggested that the program be implemented into the sophomore curriculum as part of the health class.

The program would be mandatory for all students. Students who are currently juniors and seniors could be exposed to the program through their study hall periods.

When asked by a committee member what a student would be told if he did not want to be in the program, School Supt. Dr. Clifford Easton replied, "If we pass this proposal, we will so highly endorse it, that we think students have to be there."

Both Ed Quigley and Pam Titus agreed to work as volunteer advisors in order to avoid paying a faculty advisor.

FINANCIAL PLAN ENDORSED

A financial plan to fund capital improvement projects was approved by the committee.

Secretary Treasurer Robert Kelley proposed that the committee approve a plan to borrow up to $700,000 on a temporary financing plan to pay for much needed campus repairs.

The committee had originally built $70,000 into the budget to finance these repairs over the next seven years. However, according to Kelley, if the committee were to borrow all of the money at once, and complete the repairs immediately, they could apply to the State Financial Assistance Bureau and receive 65 percent of their investment back.

Payments on the loan would not be required until July of next year. The committee would also save on inflation costs.

The communities involved in the school district have 30 days after this authorization to hold special town meetings to express their disapproval of this plan. If any town does object, the committee will have to find some other way to finance the project.

Parking lot, roof and septic system repairs are the three main areas that need improvement. They will be adapted to anticipate the larger, growing student budy.

The advisory committee to the school committee presented their reports on the condition of the various departments after a dinner served by the Culinary Arts students. The overall comments on the departments were positive. However, many of the department chairmen stressed the need for more updated equipment.

"The (Automotive) Department is doing a fairly good job, but it isn't meeting the needs of the industry today," Automotive Chairman William A. Lannin told the School Committee. "Money is the big problem. You've got to get some equipment in there to take care of the problem. I would say what you've got isn't going to fix the car. You've got to have something to work on it with once you've got it up there. You can do tune-ups, but you don't have the equipment to cure it if the tune-up doesn't work."

Auto Body Chairman Bruce King stressed the same need.

"The product of student turned out here would be low tech in my shop," he said. "The way the industry is going, we're not on a low tech scale. We're a high tech industry."

Although a lack of technology was stressed, the quality of the instructors was praised.

Machine Packaging Chairman Harry Keegan felt that the quality of student produced by that department was superb.

"The packaging group literally bailed me out this year," he said. "Students repaired my equipment. In order to do that repair they had to know their business. In my opinion, this department puts its money where its mouth is."

Meeting takes accountant from Civil Service

Among the articles considered at Monday night's town meeting was a proposal to remove the position of town accountant from Civil Service.

Selectmen, in their first test in the process of appointing a combined executive secretary/town accountant, were successful. Voters unanimously favored taking the position from the ranks of the state's Civil Service roster.

Don Andrews, 34, has been serving as executive secretary/acting town accountant for the past three weeks. Once the state legislature approves the elimination from Civil Service, Andrew will become permanent town accountant. The town must then approve at a special town meeting, the proposal to combine the two town positions into one.

Selectmen Chairman Frank England told town meeting Monday night that most towns do not employ its town accountant under the ranks of Civil Service. He explained that no Civil Service exam has been held for three years, and there are no plans to have one in the near future. England also noted that someone who passes that exam may have no expertise in municipal accounting.

The better choice, he said, is to employ someone like Andrew who has passed the state Department of Revenue and Accountants' Association exam. Andrew was recently notified he scored in the top ten percent, although fifty-five percent failed the test.

The advisory committee supported the proposal, along with the town government structure committee. Lloyd Prescott of Old Pasture Road said although he was pleased with the choice of Andrew, he opposed taking the position from Civil Service, because of the problems encountered in the police and fire departments as a result of a similar action.

Selectman Cliff Mitman noted that selectmen preferred meeting, interviewing and selecting a proper candidate the way in which they proceeded with Andrew. As far as the fire department is concerned, "because the chief is not under Civil Service, we are able to act rather than being stuck with someone who is probably wrong for the job," he added.

The proposal to petition the legislature was passed unanimously.

Town meeting was in a most generous mood Monday night, approving just about all requests for expenditures.

Town Hall employees will now work in the comfort of air conditioning this summer, thanks to the appropriation of $9697. A new internal communication system between many town departments will be implemented for $2300. Voters were told that currently a call from one department to Town Hall may cost fifty cents. This new system will eliminate all toll calls between departments.

Voters also approved $20,000 to prepare the site for a state-funded salt shed. The 40-foot by 80-foot shed will be located between the access and exit of the landfill. But, as Highway Surveyor Harold Litchfield explained, the site must be fully graded by drilling, blasting, and paving and installation of electricity and lights. The request was approved without discussion.

And despite some late news from Water Commission Chairman Peter Pratt, voters approved a $34,322 appropriation for a water hydrant in the Newtonville section of town. Pratt explained that the seven affected homes, which will each pay $490 per year for the next ten years, will ask for a tax abatement from the Board of Assessors.

"We want to give these neighbors fire protection security, but we don't want the town to pay," he said. "This appropriation will not affect your water rate."

Pratt explained that this area is without proper fire protection, although all new subdivisions are now required to construct water hydrants at their expense. But, he added, it's up to the Water Dept. to devise a fair policy to deal with older sections of town which do not have adequate protection.

Town Counsel Richard Henderson explained that without approval from all affected homeowners, there will be no borrowing or assessments for the hydrant.

Voters approved $5000 to replace a rotten sill and lally column under the Bates Building, but defeated an earlier request to complete $4959 worth of surface renovations to the Elm Street office building.

Daniel Cotton of of King Street said more extensive repairs should be made to the decaying structure, such as moving walls to ensure more adequate and efficient meeting areas.

Health Board Chairman Barbar Kern said that proposal had been voiced before, but support was never given to the idea. Although board members liked the proposal, they felt this was a less exopensive alternative.

The article was defeated by voice vote.

Other articles approved at town meeting included payment of $15,561 in unpaid fiscal year 1984 bills; $10,203 in legal fees incurred in the health board's fight against Cohasset Heights landfill; $42,000 to purchase additional equipment for the town's computer system; $28,194 to cover the agreement reached between the town and the police union, to pay the current fiscal year's obligation, and an additional $58,722 to cover this coming year's payment. The police contract has not been settled despite 20 months of negotiation.

Voters also approved $10,000 for a new Highway Dept. transportation vehicle and $8000 to reconstruct a retaining wall at 121 Jerusalem Road. A new harbor bylaw was approved without dissension, along with an appropriation of $3500 to purchase new locks for the Town Hall doors; $2000 for watershed district reproducible mylar maps; and $5363 for the purchase of window shades and tables for the Town Hall auditorium, and a desk and equipment for the selectmen's office.

Two personnel committee articles, to fund a non union employees classification study, and a rewording of the employees' vacation schedule, were postponed for further study.

Social Service elects officers

The Social Service League of Cohasset held its annual meeting recently at St. Stephen's Church, which generously donated office space to the League.

Reports by staff were given by Carolyn Housman, L.I.C.S.W., Mary Anne Hansen, R.N., Karin Bartow, director of Senior Center Project, volunteer chairmen, Helen Hooper of the Family Service Committee, and Andrea Merrill, manager of the Cohasset Consignment Shop. They all reviewed the activities of their groups.

The following officers were elected for the coming year: Virginia Riley, president; Ann Hublitz, vice president; Jane Porter, secretary; Virginia Thomson, treasurer; and Joan Bell, assistant treasurer. New members on the Board of Directors include: Mary Ahearn, Maura Ditmar, Lee Drew, Kathy Morgan and Annellen Walsh. Continuing Board members are: Terry Caughey, Judy Collins, Denise Desmond, Bobbie Fowle, Pam Henry, Mary Hartwell, Helen Hooper, Andy Merrill, Donna O'Connor, Sally O'Neill (chairman of the Nursing Committee), and Susan Schumaker. Linda Wakeman will serve on the Nursing Committee as a community member.

Libby Pompeo recently assumed the responsibilities as chairman of the Meals-On-Wheels program and Ray Remick will continue to coordinate the drivers of the Senior Shuttle Bus. Lucy Marsac organizes the government surplus food distribution for the League. The staff and chairmen expressed their deep appreciation to the more than 150 volunteers who generously give their time to make the programs and projects of the League work.

The League has made an effort to reach out to more Cohasset residents in the past year and has planned several programs for the fall to appeal to a wider age group. The League office continues to be open daily to assist all those in Cohasset with social service or medical needs.

Church dedicates elevator

Cohasset's Second Congregational Church will celebrate completion of an extensive program for providing easier access to the building with the dedication of an elevator to its second-floor Sanctuary at an 11 a.m. ceremony Sunday, June 30, following the morning worship service.

As a feature of the event, an effort will be made to encourage attendance by a number of church members who have not been able to attend services recently because of the difficulty of access. Transportation and assistance will be offered these members to bring them to church on that day.

"Come one, come all," reads an invitation to the congregation and friends of the church, "especially those of you who worked so hard and gave so generously of your time as well as money, to make this a reality. We particularly want to include members of the congregation who have not been able to come to the Sanctuary recently because of the difficulty of access. Now you can ride up in splendor!"

The elevator, a principal element of the easier access project, will be dedicated to the memory of the late Norman and Evelyn Megathlin, long-time active members and officers of the church. Gifts in their memory were a major source of the funding of the elevator.

Planned over a number of years but deferred because of the excessive cost of building alterations necessary for the installation of a commercial elevator, the project moved forward in recent months when a private, key-operated elevator was approved for such limited use. This made possible the installation of the equipment within a small available space within the building.

Other elements in the church's "easy access" program for elderly or handicapped worshippers include a concrete ramp with pipe railings, and special restroom facilities. In connection with the ramp, attractive new landscaping and planting of shrubs has been created at the front and side of the church.

While many church members were involved in planning and funding of the project over a long period of time, the group bringing it to a successful completion was headed by Richard J. Silvia. In addition to gifts and pledges, funds were raised through auctions, rummage sales, suppers and the raffle of a quilt.

Among those who worked on various aspects of the program during the past several years are Mrs. Howard Bates, Lot Bates, Rev. John Benbow, Clark Chatterton, Mrs. James Grinnell, Mrs. E. Lawrence Parker, Mrs. William Parmenter, Mrs. Russell Sandblom, Mrs. Richard Silvia, Mrs. Henry Simonds, Jr., Mrs. Lloyd Trott, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Wheelwright, and Mr. and Mrs. Robert I. Wilson.

Directing the installation of the elevator, which required considerable preparatory and construction work inside the church were the church's trustees, now headed by Wayne Sawchuk. Present and former trustees involved include Hubert Vanderlugt, Owen Fryling, Robert James, Joseph Nedrow, Russell Sandblom, Philip Schockman, Chris Ford and Philip VonIderstein.

Second Congregational

Special Event — The elevator, which has been in use for a few weeks, will be formally dedicated on June 30 at 11 a.m.

Church School — Thank you and congratulations to everyone who helped make Children's Sunday a very special day. To all who participated, I would like to share the congregation's compliments, and say that each of you should feel very proud of a job well done. Be sure to rejoin your class in September to share in lots of new and exciting things. Marsha Silva

Adults — Thanks to all who have volunteered to teach with us next year. There are still some openings—won't you consider joining the team? We are very flexible. Tell us your needs! If everyone shares the responsibility, it will be fun and rewarding for all. Call Marsha, 383-0500.

Village Fair Boutique Table — will meet Monday, June 24.

New Eyes for the Needy — Your eyeglasses, old jewelry, etc. are still needed. Neighbors and friends may also be glad to be rid of Aunt Nellie's bifocals—especially when they learn how people with vision problems will be helped. The "glasses basket" will be on the piano in Bates Hall for two more Sundays.

Obituary

Carleton Day

A memorial service was held Tuesday, June 18 at the Second Congregational Church for Carleton Day who died June 14 in Brewster.

A longtime resident of Lexington and Cohasset, Mr. Day, 61, moved to Dennis when he retired in 1983. He died at the Brewster Manor Nursing Home in Brewster.

A broker for Merrill, Lynch of Boston in 1950, he was employed from 1967 to 1973 at the Walston firm in Boston. Mr. Day and his wife, Marylou (Stover) Day, opened the Classics Boutique in Cohasset in 1973 and retired in 1983.

He leaves his wife; two daughters, Sally Day of Marshfield and Susan Dickson of Cohasset; a brother, James Day of Dennis; and a sister, Nancy Stewart of El Paso, Texas.

A graduate of Belmont High School in 1942, he was also a graduate of the New York School of Finance in 1949, and attended the Phil Salpzman School of Music in Boston in 1947.

Burial was private.

Donations may be made in Mr. Day's memory to the Norfolk County/Newton Lung Association, 25 Spring Street, Walpole, Mass. 02081.

Funeral arrangements were completed by the Sparrell Funeral Home, Summer Street.

Planners review Lily Pond housing

Once again, a proposal to construct 11 house lots off King Street, known as Lily Pond Estates, came before the planning board for review.

A similar plan had come before the board in the fall, but was denied because of insufficient drainage information.

The site plan presented to the board and several abutting residents last week included an engineer's drawing of the proposed 11 lots. In order to achieve a satisfactory drainage plan, each lot was extended in the rear, winding around each other to a narrow stretch of land in the northern portion of the property. The scheme, according to Atty. James Marcus who represented developers Edward Britt and Aaron Rosenberg, is for each lot to have suitable, perkable land for septic systems. That land is located in a common area to the north of the property.

About 20 residents attended the meeting, and voiced their concern about the probable increase in King Street traffic, the problem of maintaining a safe water supply, and the closing of a previously accessible public path.

Many residents, including Robert James of Ripley Road who grew up on King Street, said he walked the path every year. That dirt path was once used as an access into privately-owned wood lots.

The Eastern Edison Co. also objected to the proposed route for the property's utilities, saying it will cross an old town road called Hezekiah's Way. That ancient way, a company spokesman wrote, was laid out in 1670 to divide the second and third sections of Cohasset.

Atty. Marcus replied that the developers were aware of Hezekiah's Way and the wood lot access route. He explained the rights of way had been eliminated because of their limited use in recent years. "They will be wiped out by adverse possession because they have not been used for 20 years," the attorney stated.

James responded, "haven't I just told you I've been in and out of there for the past 40 years?" Marcus asked, "to cut wood?" When James answered affirmatively, Marcus noted, "you will have an opportunity to testify to that in court."

Resident Pauline Doggett asked if salt would be used on the roadway leading through the property. Noting that salt would eventually empty into the drainage culvert at the end of the subdivision, she asked the planning board members if that would affect the town's water supply in nearby Lily Pond.

Engineer John Modzelewski, who reviewed the site plan for the board, said salt can not be used by the town on King Street, and would not be allowed in the subdivision. Atty. Marcus said that would be a guaranteed by the developers.

Modzelewski noted that although the town is required not to use salt in that area, often sand is contaminated by a certain level of salt. That is an important issue for the board to consider, he added, noting that chloride "is the most difficult thing to get rid of" from the water supply.

Several neighbors, including Lee Cisneros, emphasized their concern about the increased traffic coming from the subdivision onto King Street, and the lack of visibility because of the incline of King Street near the subdivision.

Modzelewski noted that the site distance from the subdivision road is acceptable and offers a reasonable amount of visibility.

In his review of the developer's plan, he noted in particiular the need to study the drainage patterns designed for the subdivision. He specifically requested that the board require additional data on how the road's water runoff will affect Lily Pond.

Board members agreed that a tour of the property is necessary before they continue their review. They agreed to meet this month with interested neighbors and the developers to walk the land.

Previously last fall, the Board of Health denied the developers permission to construct septic systems in the watershed area. But Atty. Marcus proved that the plans had been filed prior to the establishment of the temporary moratorium, and the permits were reinstated.

Under the town meeting-approved watershed moratorium, no construction is allowed before 1987 while a comprehensive engineering study is being completed and adopted. But during the interim, the developer is allowed to subdivide the property and complete the site plans.

The town boards are hoping that once the engineering study is finalized, the town will adopt a permanent building moratorium in the established watershed protection district.

Wheelwright okayed

Last week, the planning board approved a plan to build 35 housing units in the 25-acre development known as Wheelwright Park.

The plan, devised by John Rodolph, has been modified from an original 42 units to the 35 units, including seven duplexes. Rodolph made the changes and added the duplexes to decrease the average costs of the units.

Two months ago, some planning board members argued that the costs of the condominiums had risen significantly from the plans proposed by the original owners, a trust which included partner Wayne Sawchuck. Rodolph explained at that time, the property purchase price of $1.1 million and the increased building materials costs, precipitated the rise in price.

The modified plan brought before the board last week, included seven duplexes. That reduces the number of buildings and the total area of impervious surface to be constructed in Wheelright Park, although there will still be a total of 42 units.

Although planning board member John O'Toole asked for an explaination why costs had increased significantly over the original prices, the other members did not respond to his request.

Member Daniel Cotton stated to the developer, "I like this (plan) much better. You've got my approval, but I'm sorry if we've pushed you so that all the units have to look alike." He noted that the plan, which is located off Beechwood Street, looks like 35 houses were "cut from a cookie cutter and twisted and turned" in order to fit into the development.

Chairman Christine Bassett assured Rodolph that the next time the board works with him, "I hope we can start from scratch with you."

Developer Rodolph explained that when board members complained about the project's costs six weeks ago, "panic set in and we decided we wanted something the board could accept easily. I believe we can sell the duplexes. That's the ultimate test of this project."

The 35 units will be grey with white trim clapboard Colonial-type homes and wood shingled roofs. One engineer estimated the selling prices of the two-bedroom units would start "in the high $180,000's or low $190,000's to about $230,000.

Each units contains an attached one-car garage, and the duplexes are separated by a two-car garage. There will be no common house walls dividing the duplex housing units, Rodolph explained.

Busy summer schedule planned for Sea Cadets

In conjunction with the International Year for Youth and the 75th Anniversary of the Canadian Navy, an International Sailing Regatta will be held in Canada from July 19 to August 8.

Participants include cadets from Canada, United States, Great Britain, Australia, Sweden, Holland Belguim and West Germany.

The Scituate area F.B. Battle Division was honored to have five of their cadets chosen from among 77,000 sea cadets to be part of the six-man team representing the United States.

They are SR Bill Lean and SR George Jackson of Cohasset, SR Michael Cheverie of Marshfield and SA Scott Lavoie and SA Bryan Lavoie of Scituate.

In August Battle Division will host as many as 500 sea cadets from all over the United States to take part in an Operational Readiness Inspection (ORI).

This will be a three day event in conjunction with Scituate Heritage Days involving a parade, maritime skills competition and a visit from the Naval hot-air balloon.

This summer will find these young people involved in some unusual adventures. Seaman Apprentice Paul Critchfield will participate in SEAL Training in Coronado, California; SA Scott Lavoie will serve two weeks aboard the USCG cutter Raritan out of New York; SA Matt Fitzpatrick will learn small boat handling and search and rescue procedures during his two week training at the Scituate Coast Guard Station; and SA Tony Harrington will find out what life is like under the surface of the ocean at Submarine school in Groton, Conn.

For twenty-one cadets it's going to be reveille at 6 a.m., hospital corners, chow in the mess hall and two weeks of rigorous physical training at boot camp in Davisville, Rhode Island.

The U.S. Naval Sea Cadet Corps is a program for young people between eleven and eighteen years old who are interested in ships and the sea and who like to learn new things and have fun doing it.

The objectives of the corps are to develop an interest and skill in basic seamanship and its naval adaptations and to teach patriotism, courage and self-reliance.

Sea cadets attend two weeks of summer boot camp at Navy and Coast Guard recruit training centers throughout the country.

After completing recruit training, cadets are eligible to participate in two weeks advanced training aboard Navy and Coast Guard vessels and to attend advanced orientation courses such as Airman's school, Submarine orientation and Underwater demolition—SEAL Team training. These courses are designed to prepare cadets for leadership either within the Sea Cadet organization or in other fields. Although sea cadet units are organized along military lines, the youngsters have absolutely no commitment regarding future military service.

Here is the F.B. Battle Division, Scituate area Sea Cadets, and interested parents. (Courtesy of the Sea Cadets)

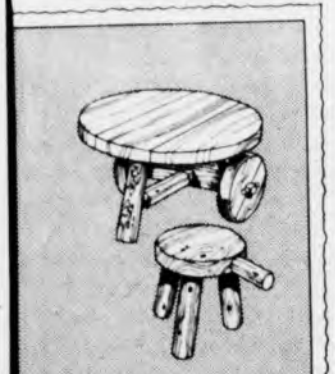
LCDR H. Robert Feijoo founded the Scituate division three years ago. In December 1984 the group was officially commissioned as the Frederick B. Battle Division of Scituate. As of spring 1985, Battle Division included thirty-two cadets, boys and girls, from surrounding towns and six officers.

There has been no shortage of exciting trips and activities for the kids. Last fall, twenty cadets participated in a three day training weekend aboard the USS Joseph P. Kennedy in Fall River.

During Memorial Day weekend the division was invited to attend the Fifth Annual Mid-Atlantic Pass In Review and Memorial Day services at the Washington Naval Yard, Washington, D.C.

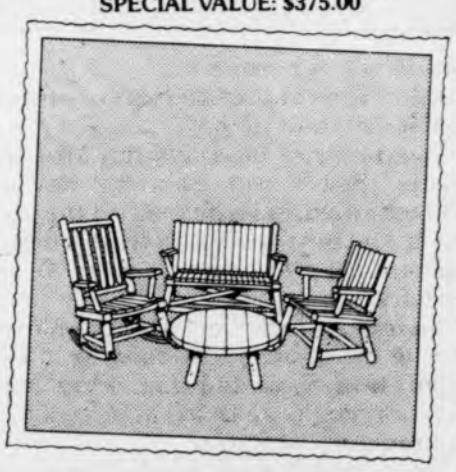
They marched with over 600 cadets from the mid-atlantic states and were inspected by Admiral Metcalf, USN.

While in Washington, they visisted the Viet Nam Memorial, the Lincoln and Washington monuments, and the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

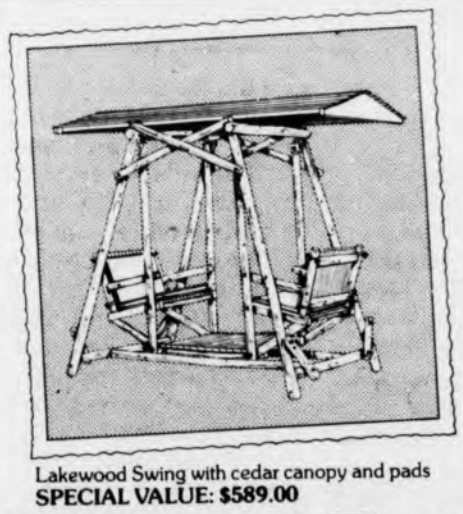


On the way home, they stopped in Philadelphia to see the Liberty Bell and Independence Hall.

Upcoming summer plans include a trip to Niagara Falls, camping in Vermont and overnight duty July 3-4 for the turning of the USS Constitution to Boston Harbor.



Sponsors are needed to help defray the costs involved in making these many opportunities available to local teenagers.



For further information, please call Mrs. Barbara Lavoie, 545-0145, or write USNSCC, F.B. Battle Division, P.O. Box 734, Scituate 02066.

"Doran & Mason gave us $5.00 just to review our homeowner's policy with them," reported Linda Bertino of Hanson.

"We found we could increase the insurance and broaden the coverage on our house, get replacement cost coverage for contents — and save money, too," the Bertinos said.

Doran & Mason took time to understand Linda and Lance Bertino's needs and tailored a new homeowner's policy to meet them. There are no shortcomings to surprise them later.

"We bought exactly the coverages we wanted, we're saving a lot and we got $5.00 for doing it. How can you beat that?" Linda asked.

Doran & Mason recently checked out insurance policies for 100 homeowners. 64 discovered they didn't have the coverage they had thought they had. in 93 comparisons, Doran & Mason produced savings averaging $61.00 per year.

If you could use a crisp, new $5.00 bill, fill out our request form. It'll be worth at least five dollars to you — maybe ten. If your present coverage fully satisfies your objectives and Doran & Mason can't save you money on that coverage, we'll give you a crisp, new $10.00 bill.

But the best feature could be your getting the homeowner's coverage you want and a chance to save money on that.

You can't lose! You can only win! Send us your request now!

YES! I'd like to receive a crisp, new $5.00 bill and find out if my homeowner's insurance will do everything I think it will. I understand that it's Doran & Mason's way of thanking me for allowing them to compare my policy with policies offered by companies they represent and that I will not be further obligated in any way. I also understand that I may qualify to receive a $10.00 bill as described above, and that the comparison requires at least fifteen minutes, at my house or a mutually convenient location.

Rev. Daniel Broder realizes a dream

By Karen Cubie

A few years ago Rev. Dan Broder had a dream.

"I wasn't sure after graduation from seminary whether to go into an existing church, or to become involved in a denominational church starting," he said. "One night I dreampt that I had printed cards which said 'Lighthouse Baptist Church.' I tried to find a lighthouse on the shore. I heard that there was a lighthouse in Hull, but they already had a Baptist church. There wasn't a church in Cohasset, the next town over."

In September, Rev. Broder and his wife, Laurie, came to Cohasset with plans to begin a Baptist church.

"People have been exceptionally friendly," Rev. Broder said. "They support me, maybe not by their presence, but by their words."

Since September, the Broders have managed to build a congregation of fourteen members which meets every Sunday in the Broder's Scituate home.

"We hope to move to a hall (in Cohasset) shortly," Rev. Broder said. "We don't have Sunday School yet but when we move into the hall, we'll start."

The Broders have informed Cohasset of their church by visiting from door to door.

"Some of our congregation heard about us through other churches," Rev. Broder said. "Some learned about us from our personal acquaintance. Some learned through our door-to-door work."

The Broders also sent introduction letters about the church to Cohasset citizens.

"Then we would make visits in order to acquaint ourselves with them," Rev. Broder said. "We invite them to a Bible study. We send out about one hundred letters at a time, and then followed them up."

Rev. Broder has also done religious surveys within the community in order to generate interest in the church.

"We ask about church affiliation," he said, "belief in Christ, and how do you think one becomes a Christian? We also ask what the survey recipients think is the major problem in the world."

According to Rev. Broder, the majority of Cohasset citizens are unchurched.

"Some have religious backgrounds in various demoninations," he said, "but for one reason or another they have left their backgrounds. Roman Catholic seems to be the biggest affiliation around; however, even among them, a lot are not attending church for various reasons."

The Broders hold a Bible study every Thursday night at 7:30 p.m. in the Cohasset Community Center.

"I've been inviting people to a Bible discussion group," he said, "but I haven't been getting a large response. I think we will try something different. I'm putting together a list of 45 questions on life and faith issues, and I will be approaching people door to door. On Thursday evenings I will have a Biblical presentation on these issues, on what the Bible says in regard to these questions. Each issue will be discussed for only one night."

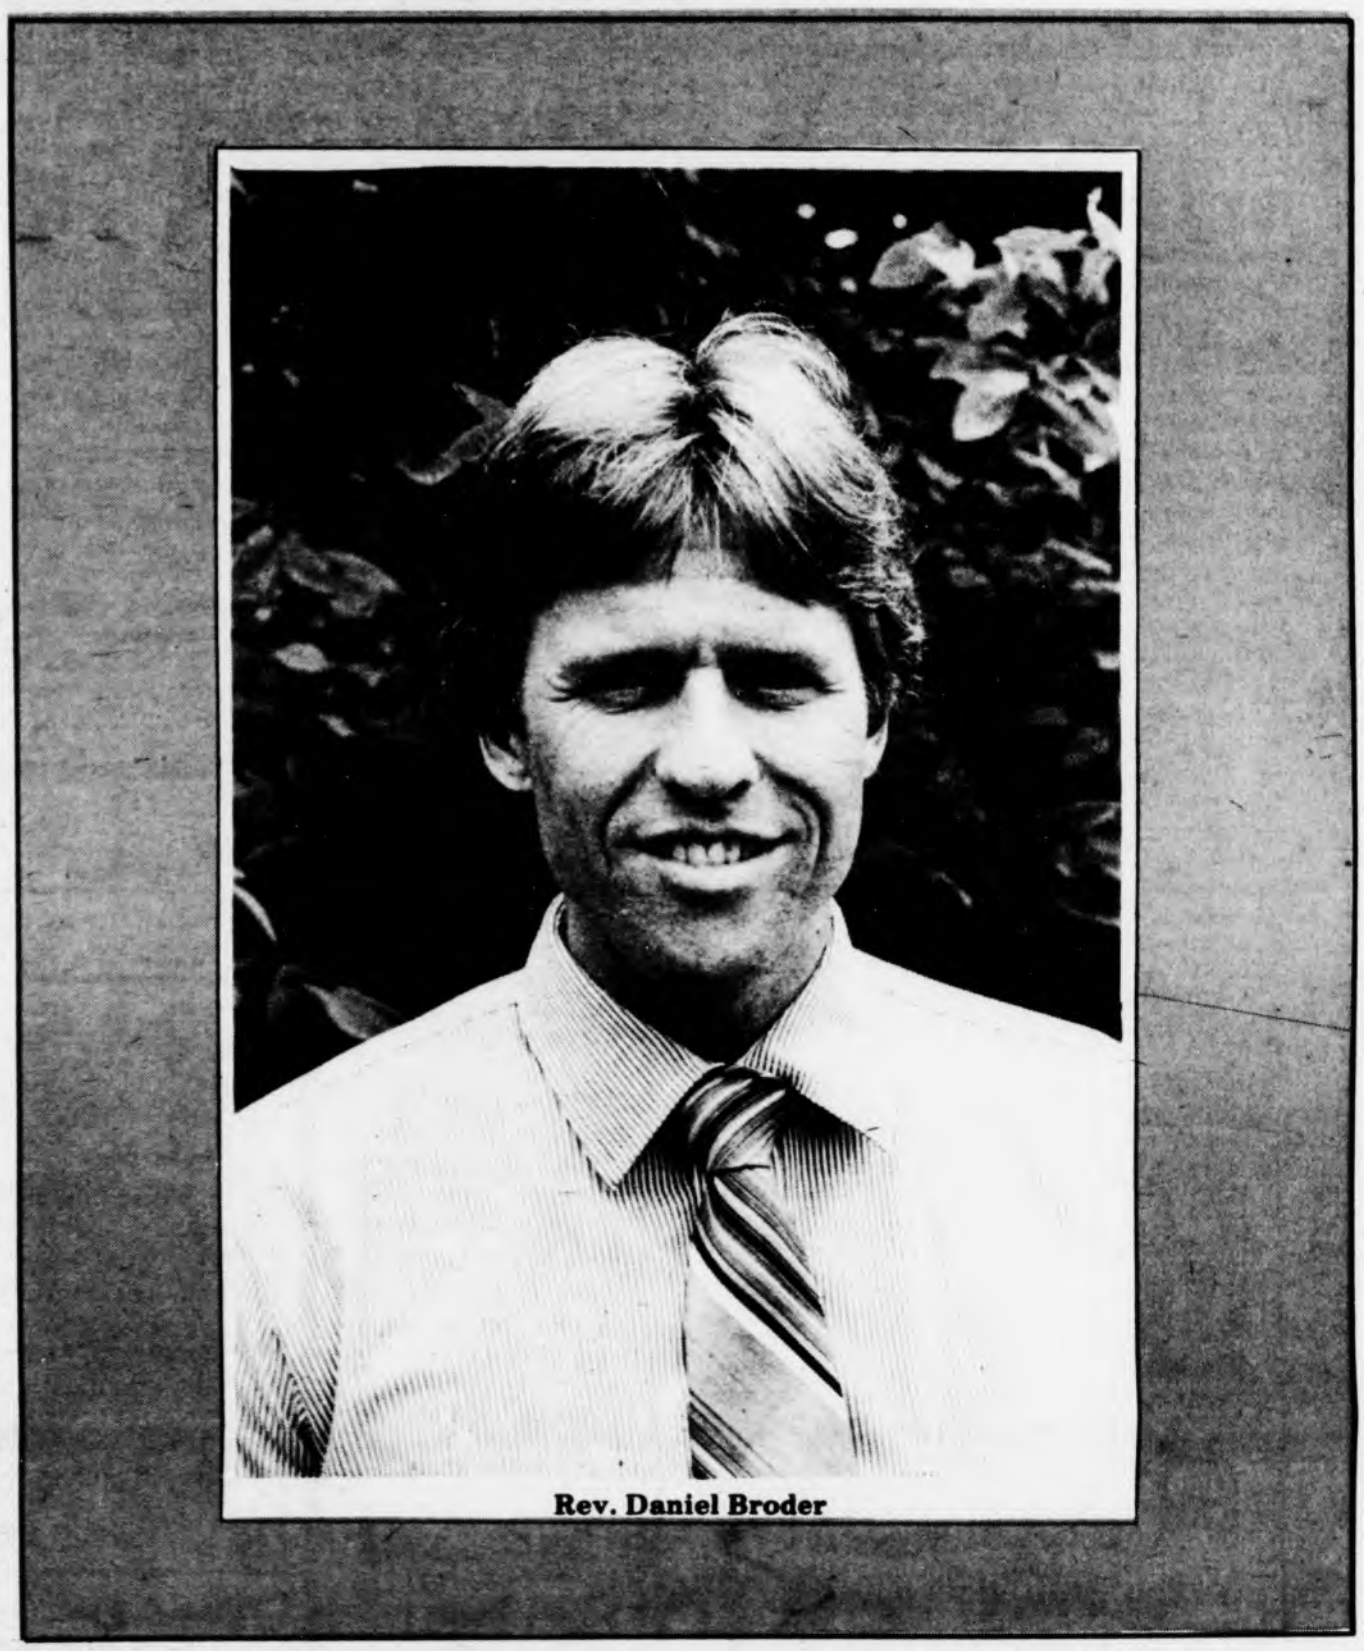
The Broders also are involved in youth work in Cohasset. They provide weekly Bible studies for youth, and activities like roller skating and canoe trips. About 12-15 kids are involved with this.

"We have to give a lot of the credit to Gigi Burbank, a Cohasset High School teacher," Rev. Broder said. "We got to meet her in September. She had been working with the high school students in Bible studies in her own home. She stopped hers, and they became ours. She's very supportive, and she's introduced me to a lot of kids."

The Broders claim that they work as a team. Both are graduates from Gordon College, and Dan has a degree form the Andover Newton Seminary in Newton.

"I recently left a job I had with a Christian bookstore because I felt I had to become more involved in the community," Laurie said. "I lead a women's Bible study, and I'm trying to get to know the women in the church better."

Laurie does not feel called to be involved with Dan's door-to-door work.



"I do some," she said, "but my role is in encouraging and helping with what he needs help in.

"The best training a pastor's wife can have is to really know herself," she continued, "to be able to sort out all of the issues that come, and feel comfortable with them."

"Laurie has a lot of musical ability," Dan added. "She leads the music in the service."

Preaching has been the most difficult aspect of the job for Rev. Broder.

"But I'm enjoying it more and more," he said. "I'm seeing the wonder of human growth and development. This work is way beyond my skill and abilities. I can see myself growing and developing in this work. We enter something beyond ourselves, and we can rise up and meet the challenge. I've seen the faithfulness of God in bringing encouragement to me when its needed."

Rev. Daniel Broder

At the moment the Broders are supported by their Baptist denomination.

"The owner of the Days Inn Motels, a chain all over the South, was Baptist," Rev. Broder said. "When he died, his wife took all the proceeds of the motels, and put them into a trust. They contribute to missionaries and church needs. We're considered missionaries.

"We had an interview with the foundation director," he continued. "He liked us. I have received support from them and from other churches."

Rev. Broder has already managed to get involved in community activities.

"I'm a member of the Cohasset Clergy Association," he said. "We meet once a month. Laurie and I have visited all of the churches in Cohasset."

Dan was recently invited to be on Focus, a local cable TV program.

"I was part of a panel discussion on school prayer," he said. "I think prayer is an important part of a child's development. Children need all the reinforcement they can get that there is a God to seek out. We should provide time at the beginning of the day, opportunity for children to pray, with a moment of silent meditation. This would also be a time for children of other religions to make their own religious observances."

Rev. Broder felt that the discussion discovered common areas of agreement.

"People with differing opinions called in," he said. "Most people agreed on some form of silent meditation."

Dan claims, however, that his focus should not be on politics.

"Individual Christians should be involved with politics," he said, "but I should be devoting myself to the members of my congregation and their spiritual needs and welfare."

Rev. Broder does not plan to leave Cohasset as soon as his church is finished in order to begin another project.

"I would be content to stay here a long time," he said. "But as Christians we are sojourners. We should never be settled in our minds as being fixed. We should be already to move with God's leading."

This summer the Broders have invited a youth group, formed by 30 high school students from Ohio, to visit and perform in Cohasset.

"The kids are from the Far Hill Baptist Church in Dayton, Ohio," he said. "They are coming to help us establish our evangelical work here."

The choir will be performing a concert on June 23 at the Cohasset Town Hall. They will also do survey work in town, and lead Back Yard Bible Clubs.

"These are meant to reach younger children in kindergarten through sixth," Rev. Broder said. "They will present Bible stories, play games, and provide arts and crafts activities. We are planning to use four back yards in different neighborhoods. Each back yard will provide four different classes for different ages."

The back yards the church will be using do not belong to members of the Broder's congregation.

"I've contacted people I've met doing door-to-door work," he said. "This would be a four-day event between June 24 and 27, 10-12 a.m. The choir will be bringing all their enthusiasm and excitement."

If you would like to be involved in this program, contact Rev. Broder at 545-3948, or P.O. Box 1, Cohasset.

Rev. Broder's denomination, the Southern Baptist Church, is an evangelical church.

"We emphasize Christ's teaching of the need for people to experience a spiritual rebirth," Rev. Broder said, "which means that people accept Christ into their lives and let Him be the center of everything they do. Following that acceptance would be a water baptism, and a commitment to the study and practice of the Bible."

Rev. Broder hopes that his church and beliefs will help fill the loneliness he sees in people's lives.

"I would like to give older people a sense of meaning in life through faith which would fill an emptiness," he said. "It would free people from alcoholism. Loneliness is a big problem. I'd like to try to alleviate that loneliness. A relationship with God can replace that loneliness.

"I'd like to see young people starting in life with a sense of the knowledge of God," he said, "and with a sense of values, and morals integrated into life at an early age."

'Tecumseh' model on display at museum

By David Wadsworth
Historical Society Curator

In September of the year 1866, a Cohasset Sea Captain walked aboard a brand new 1,310-ton three-masted, square-rigged sailing vessel to become its first master. The captain was James Collier, the vessel was named "Tecumseh," and it was the latest addition to the fleet belonging to the Nickerson Company of Boston.

Alongside Capt. Collier was his nephew, Cohasseter Samuel Pomeroy Bates, who was to serve as First Officer on "Tecumseh's" maiden voyage. The new vessel, 198 feet in length, 36 feet in breadth and 23.5 feet in depth, was a fine example of the type of ocean-spanning sailing ships being turned out in American shipyards of that day.

"Tecumseh's" builder had been Bostonian James Townsend. Boston-built and Boston-owned, the ship's immediate destiny rested in the hands of two Cohasset-born and Cohasset-trained seafarers.

Born in 1813 in a house on Elm Street (at that time called Ship Cove Lane), Capt. Collier's experiences as a Shipmaster already spanned some 35 years. It had begun at the age of 18 when he took command of the Cohasset trading schooner "Profit." Then followed command of the schooner "Rubicon," the barques "Hobart" and "Julia" and finally, in 1853 Collier became Master of a new Clipper Ship, "Storm King."

The years before and during the Civil War saw the Cohasset Captain as Master of the 1,388 ton vessel "North America" owned by Nickerson Company. "North America" served as a troopship during the war and also made trading voyages across the Pacific.

It was as Captain of "North America" that Collier, while sailing in Australian waters, safely eluded the Confederate raider turned pirate "Shenandoah" shortly after the end of the war. Upon the sale of "North America" to Latin American interests in 1865, Capt. Collier returned briefly to his Cohasset home, before taking command of Tecumseh."

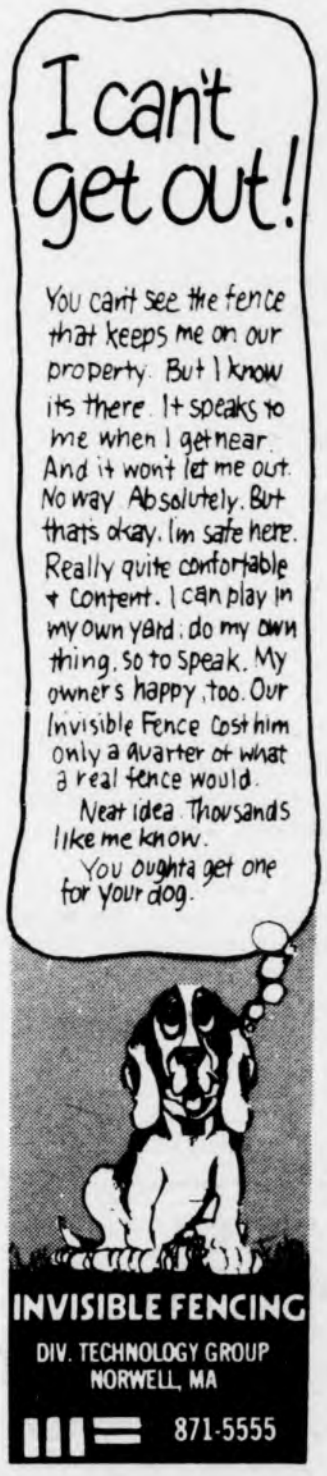
The new vessel's First Officer, Samuel P. Bates, born in Cohasset in 1836, had sailed with his uncle Capt. Collier since the first voyage upon "Storm King" when Bates had been a boy. He had been First Mate for his uncle on "North America" and in future years would become Collier's First Officer upon the vessel "Pharos."

"Tecumseh," on its maiden voyage, departed Boston on Sept. 7, 1866. Its destination was Valparaiso, Chile, and its cargo included canons and cannonballs for the Chilean Army, then engaged in a war with neighboring Peru.

Valparaiso was reached on December 10, and on February 10, 1867 "Tecumseh" left for a long haul to Liverpool, England. Departing Liverpool after a May 29th arrival, the vessel was back in Boston for a refitting in July. During the long maiden voyage, First Mate Bates and the ship's carpenter together had constructed an unusual model of the ship upon which they were voyaging.

In that era, it was not unusual for sailors to while away spare hours pursuing hobbies while at sea. Scrimshaw carving was a favorite among whalermen, and modelmaking was a universally-popular pastime.

Sailor's models are known for the careful and accurate attention paid to details of masts, spars and rigging with which they were so familiar. Bates' and the carpenter's model of "Tecumseh" is unique among shipboard sailor's models because of its unusual size. The replica of the big three-master stretches more than five feet from bowsprit to transom.



Obtained some years ago and carefully restored by the Cohasset Historical Society, the "Tecumseh" model is on view in the Society's Maritime Museum at Cohasset center. After some 120 years, the miniature ship's cabin doors stil slide open and shut.

As for the original "Tecumseh," following its long maiden voyage, the vessel was sold by its owners to a German shipping company. Renamed "Otto" it sailed under foreign flag until finally broken up in the year 1900.

The Historical Society's model of "Tecumseh" portrays the ship as it was upon its maiden voyage under the command of two native sons of Cohasset.

This, along with numerous other collections of maritime objects dating from the great "Age of Sail" can be seen in the Cohasset Historical Society's two museums on Elm Street at Cohasset center. The Maritime Museum and the adjacent Capt. John Wilson House will be open this summer through the end of September from 1'30 to 4:30 p.m. daily.

Explaining the 'mystery' of chiropractic care

By Charlotte Carney

Commentary

There was a crooked man who walked a crooked mile. He had a crooked sixpence and smiled a crooked smile.

Why? Because this little man did not go to his Chiropractor.

Now, had this little man been informed and understood, he would have known that Chiropractic is the science which is concerned with the relationship between structure, primarily of the spine, and function, primarily of the nervous system. And, how that relationship may affect the restoration and preservation of health.

However, being born at the time when sixpence was 'in', you can imagine his limited comprehension of the subject of his own health.

As recently as 20 years ago, people were still living in the 'sixpence' age of health. When a friend of mine told his mother he was going to become a doctor (every mother's dream), she was ecstatic. Then he explained, he would be a Doctor of Chiropractic.

"Just think," he told his dear mother, " of all the money you will save on aspirins, laxatives, muscle relaxants, Maalox, etc. "

The overwhelmed woman had to sit down. He might as well have said he was going to sorcerer's school. A little shaken, she asked,"Does this make you a real doctor?"

Reassuring his Mom, my friend explained that the Doctor of Chiropractic medicine studies all the basic sciences and must pass the State Board of Examiners' basic science examination. This is the basic science exam other doctors, including M.D's are required to pass.

In addition, a Doctor of Chiropractic must then pass the rigid State Board of Chiropractic exam. He then receives a license to practice only after all studies and training requirements have been scrupulously met and the state boards have approved the test scores.

Continuing to sooth his mother's misconceived anxieties, my friend continued to explain how attitudes have changed. "I love medicine, and I believe in what I am doing. The possibilities are endless in bringing a significant change for the betterment of day-to-day health care to all people through Chiropractic care," he stated.

Yes, Mom. Things have changed and for the better. You see, for whatever reason, Mom and others like her felt more secure if they were given medication to arrest a symptom rather than treating the cause with Chiropractic treatments or adjustments, as they are called. This new approach just seemed too easy, too far removed from the medical practices they were used to.

Fortunately today the information supplied the public regarding their own bodies and health care in general is much more thorough than in the past. We are able to make more educated decisions about the care we choose. And frankly, that is an option we should take.

Let's face it. Medicine is a business and expensive one at that, especially if one must endure a hospital stay. It is rather unsettling in a society that professes to hold life above all else, to have us bound to the dollar, in the pursuit of keeping that life healthy and disease free.

I say, bless the physician who heals the sick. But in the same breath, one has to be realistic about the word 'sick.'

I'm sure we've all had experiences where lives have been saved by surgery or an acutely-aware physician who has detected and successfully treated a disease before it has become life threatening.

But on the other hand, I'm sure we have also experienced some of the nonchalant misinformation, wrong medications, and mistakes in diagnosis that confused treatment and masked symptoms of a real cause.

Oh yes, to err is human, That is why, the day-to-day care and maintenance of our bodies is up to us. We must keep ourselves informed.

Too many problems treated with medications take away symptoms but do not cure.They simply put the real problem into remission.

Example: for years I was treated for bursitis with several cute little pills. They helped ease the pain, however the problem always came back.

At one point, the pain in my shoulder and neck became too severe for me to withstand. I called my local Chiropractor against my husband's wishes. "Go to a real doctor," was his reply. But I made what I considered to be an educated decision, based on current medical information. Even though I had never visited a Chiropractor before, I was going in good faith.

After one of the most thorough exmainations I had in a long time, the doctor took the time to explain everything about the examinations and what his course of treatment would be. I even viewed my own X-rays which showed exactly where the problem was.

The doctor proceeded to give me my first treatment and voila, to my unexpected delight, I had some relief immediately. After a few more treatments, all my aches and pains were gone and I've never had bursitis agains.

This was an exhilarating experience. While going for my treatments, I was exposed to informative literature about varied health problems that Chiropractic care was able to treat successfully.

Pleased with my results, I started researching and experimenting. I took one of my daughters for an exam when she complained of back pain. Oddly enough, she was an asthma victim and had all sorts of medication to relieve the symptoms. However, while treating her back pain, her asthma also cleared. Amazing? I'm not exactly sure what happened, but it's been over a year since her first Chiropractic treatment, and she has never had to take her asthma medication again.

The results of comprehensive Chiropractic care continue. Even my husband has had relief from years of pain following an auto accident.

As for the doctor's skeptical Mom, she is doing fine, and quite proud of her son "the Doctor."

The trend of being more responsible for one's own health has brought to light some pleasant alternatives to taking medications and repeated occurrence of contagious and infectious diseases. Proper diet, vitamins, exercise, and comprehensive Chiropractic care have helped me travel the road to great health.

Selectmen asked to investigate water quality

State Senator William Golden (D-Weymouth) has called selectmen in his district to set up task forces to investigate drinking water contamination.

Senator Golden has written selectmen in Weymouth, Hingham, Hull, Cohasset, Scituate, Marshfield and Duxbury to ask them to get their communities involved in combating drinking water contamination.

"Since drinking water contamination is a problem which overlaps jurisdictions in most towns," says Senator Golden, "It often involves several boards, such as the Water Department, Department of Public Works and Department of Health."

Senator Golden is proposing a series of meetings between state officials and the local task forces so the South Shore can commence a comprehensive and effective program to identify the extent of existing water contamination in area towns.

"Drinking water contamination is a serious problem," says Senator Golden. "By identifying potential problem areas, we can begin, as a district, to eliminate them." Senator Golden, in his letter to selectmen, is also proposing a drafting of by-laws to deal with hazardous materials storage, underground petroleum storage tanks and groundwater protection.

South Shore Kennel Club

The South Shore Kennel Club will hold its annual summer Dog Show Friday, June 28 with an entry of more than 1,000 dogs.

Show Chairman Herb Moran of Scituate said that the entry was 1,050 dogs, the largest in the club's history for an outdoor show, and that 120 breeds would be represented.

The dog show will take place at the Hingham High School athletic field on Pleasant Street, Hingham, off Rte. 228.

Most breed judging will be held in the morning in eight show rings, with group judging and Best of Breed to follow later in the day. For further information on the exact judging schedule, call the Publicity Chairman, Janet Kaplan, at 545-1229, the week before the show.

Water revenue rising

Since launching its intensive collection effort of $84,000 of delinquent payments in April, the Cohasset Water Department has successfully collected $52,000.

Three weeks remain until the end of the fiscal year. The department will continue its collection program and the Board of Water Commissioners agreed that the remaining $32,000 shall be received by that time. Employees will continue service shutoffs throughout the community, and all customers failing to make payments on their bill or maintain previously agreed arrangements may have service interrupted.All bills due over 30 days accumulate interest at the rate of 14 percent annually.

All three water commissioners concurred that the program has been the most effective to date. In a number of instances, the payment has been made in full just as the water service was being discontinued.

Hingham Bible Schools

Many churches in Hingham will be conducting Vacation Bible Schools for children entering Grades K through 6 in the fall, during the week of July 8-12. Registration for classes at St. Paul's will be held from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., Monday through Friday at St. Paul's Religious Education Office. Further information may be obtained by calling 749-5568.

During the same week First Baptist Church, Congregational Church, St. John's Church, Second Parish Church, New North Congregational Church and United Methodist of Hingham and Hull will be conducting a Vacation Bible School at the Congregational Church. Registration will be held Monday, June 24, 9 a.m. to noon, at the United Methodist Church Office, 7 Thaxter Street, or by calling the church offices, for Grades K-8. This is an on-going process in each church. Further information may be obtained by calling Janet Cerny, 749-3786, or Jan Bacon, 749-1276. The children will learn through varied instructional medial techniques — class presentations, song, dance, skits, arts and crafts, etc. Classes are 9:30 to 11:45 a.m.

In true ecumenical spirit, closing service, combining both schools, is being planned for Friday evening, July 12.

Museums open house

This Saturday, June 22, marks the opening of the Cohasset Historical Society's two museums at Cohasset Center. An open house will be held at the Maritime Museum and the Captain John Wilson House on Elm Street, Saturday from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m.

Historical Society members will be present and the public is invited to tour the two buildings. The Maritime Museum, a mid-to-late 18th century ship's chandlery, once was the supply building for Samuel and late John Bates' fishing fleet. It contains the old counting room sometimes referred to as "Cohasset's first bank." Relics of the town's mackerel fishing days and schooner fleets, of volunteer lifesaving and navigation, of shipwrecks and salvage, and the story of Minot's Ledge Lighthouse can be seen in the Maritime Museum, along with the ship's carver and sailor's artwork and models.

In the Capt. Wilson Historical House, early home furnishings are on view in a unique setting. The Wilson House has the distinction of begin Cohasset's first historical museum, and was the first headquarters of the Cohasset Historical Society.

Today, it houses the Society's collections of furniture and home equipment in a house basically unaltered since its construction in 1810 by housewright David Nichols. For over a century, the Capt. Wilson House was the residence of Capt. Wilson's descendants, and in 1936 was presented to the then eight year-old Historical Society to be maintained as a center for historical exhibits.

The opening this week will show a newly-repainted first floor and second room kitchen. Following the Saturday Open House, both buildings will be open for the summer each afternoon except Monday through the end of September.

College vacancies

There are many vacancies in colleges throughout New England for freshmen and transfer students, according to state Representative Mary Jeanette Murray (R) Third Plymouth District.

Rep. Murray said, "The New England Board of Higher Education has informed me of space available in four-year and two-year colleges and universities. There is scholarship money available for these vacancies as well."

This year, with 217 of 234 undergraduate colleges responding, 173 institutions reported totals of over 19,000 freshmen vacancies and more than 7,500 transfer vacancies for the 1985 fall term. More than 65 percent of the freshmen openings are in the region's two-year colleges. Public institutions accounted for 81 percent of all vacancies and the region's public two-year institutions reported 61 percent of all freshmen vacancies.

"Applicants who have been denied admission may contact my office to obtain the names of the institutions which had vacancies as of May, 1985," concluded Rep. Murray.

The phone number of Murray's office for Cohasset, Hingham and Hull persons to call is 722-2400.

Sailing Club dinner

Cohasset Sailing Club members and friends are invited to a Launch of the Fleet dinner on the sailing club veranda, Sunday, June 23, beginning at 5 p.m., with dinner served at 7 p.m. The menu calls for shish (lamb) kebabs, salad, rice and dessert.

The sailing club will, at this dinner, auction off several of its lasers, a car and other items which have been donated. Minimum bids have been established for each item. The lasers may be seen down at the Cohasset Sailing Club.

Reservations are needed for this function and may be made by calling 383-0349 or sending a check for $10 per person to 178 South Main St., Cohasset, MA 02025.

Summer Courses

The following courses will be offered at the Cohasset Community Center this summer:

Tennis with Susan Dalrymple, classes start July 15 and will be held at a private court; one hour per week for six weeks, $24. Small individual classes, with times to be arranged to suit schedules.

Gymnastic Camp with Ruthann Sargent, starting July 8 through week of July 12. Cost is $40 per week, Monday through Friday from 10 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Contact Ruthann Sargent or call the office from 9 a.m. to noon, Monday, Wednesday or Friday. Call 383-0088 for more information.

Society museums open

The Cohasset Historical Society announces the opening of its two museums at Cohasset Center for the summer season June 22.

On that day there will be an Open House to which the public is invited at no charge from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. at the Society's Capt. John Wilson Historical House and Maritime Museum.

Both buildings will be open during summer months, through September 29, each afternoon except Monday from 1:30 to 4:30.

Admission is $.75 for each building for adults, $.25 per building for children under 12 years. Special guided tours for groups can be arranged by contacting the Historical Society, 383-0773 or 383-6930.

The Capt. John Wilson Historical House is an 1810 Sea Captain's dwelling containing furnishings representative of its time and collected from some of the old homes of Cohasset.

The Maritime Museum contains numerous artifacts and relics of Cohasset's seafaring past including models of sailing vessels and ship carvings from the town's schooner fleets of a century ago. Also found there is a general historical collection of items from the 18th and 19th centuries of this old New England village.

Summer reading

This summer's reading enrichment program will develop the theme of the sea and an adventuresome summer of reading. The program will continue through August 17.

"Bookaneers" will chart their own courses of adventure along a treasure map of mysteries, poetry, science fiction, biographies and folk tales plus "free" reading choices of their own choosing. Skiffs, sailboats and schooners personalized with each Bookaneer's name will sail along chartered waters over a large mural-map designed for the program by Andrew Glasfeld and Sandra Dunn. Readers going into Grades One through Three will be asked to read 20 books to earn a "treasure" — a gift paperback book from the Friends of the Library. Readers going into Grades Four through Six will read 15 books to earn the treasure, and students entering Grades Seven and up need to read 10 books to select their free paperback.

Reading cards for recording titles read on each person's own reading level may be picked up at the library. They must be endorsed by a parent. For each five books read Bookaneers will be challenged by a Seafarer's Quest, a question or riddle that may be shared with the family.

A TRS-80 computer has been loaned to the library by the Cohasset schools and readers are invited to log their bounty of book titles on the computer and to take home the print-out sheet. Marge Murphy, librarian at the Deer Hill School, has also made available the "Max Dublin and Isle of Men" disc for Bookaneers' further adventures.

According to Jim Trelease, author of "The Read-Aloud Handbook," the major reason why half the children in America can't read, won't read or hate to read is that they don't want to read. Desire is the magic ingredient. Parents are urged to participate with the children's staff at the library in sharing this summer's reading adventure and fun. All local school summer reading lists are also available in the children's room.

ALZHEIMER'S DISEASE

Is this a subject you have thought about? Do you have an elderly relative whose behavior has become a problem, who has difficulty with memory, whose behavior has been erratic? It may not be easy to tell the difference between the way stress or depression affect an older person, and the ravages of a progressive disease like Alzheimer's. This is not simply due to "hardening of the arteries," it is not simply due to "age." We are learning a good deal about Alzheimer's Disease today, and one of the most important things we are learning is how important it is to tell this apart from other causes of memory loss or depression in the elderly!

At the Behavioral Medicine Institute, we believe that an entire team consisting of neurologists, psychiatrists, psychologists, and often very refined modern laboratory tests, are necessary to help us unravel the puzzles of the mind. Let us help you to understand the troubles you might be having with memory or behavior, and if you have Alzheimer's Disease, let us help you to cope with it and try to reserve some of its problems.

AT the Behavioral Medicine Institute, WE TAKE THE TIME TO LISTEN.

S·S· Natural Science Center programs

Special events are coming up at the South Shore Natural Science Center, Jacobs Lane, Norwell.

Night Skies, will be offered on Wednesday, June 26, 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. Moon goes with June—join the South Shore Astronomical Society at the Science Center to take a close look at the moon—its craters and mountains! Swing the telescope for a close view of Saturn with its romantic rings and double stars. Illustrated talk and outside viewing.

Rolf Egon of the Astro Society, instructor. Bring your own telescope and binoculars if you wish. Fee: $3.50 members; $4.50 non-members. For further information call 659-2559. Pre-paid registration requested.

Day Camp

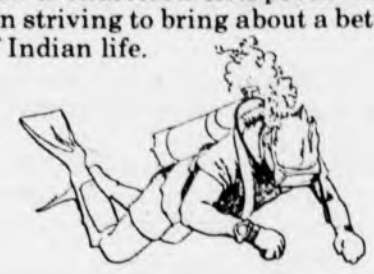
Nature Day Camp, will be from Monday, July 1 -Friday, August 9. Hey Kids! Make friends with a turtle; take a muck and slime safari, meet some spineless 'critters' or spend several days as an Eastern Woodland Indian. All this and more at the South Shore Natural Science Center Nature Day Camp. Ask your parents to sign you up quick! The first day of Camp is almost here. Call 659-2559 for information and registration forms.

Kids Festival

Kids Festival, Saturday, June 22, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Last reminder to you Kids of all Ages—the Great Kids Festival sponsored by the Science Center takes place this Saturday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., rain or shine. Live animals from Trailside Museum and New England Wildlife Center, large hot air balloon on display, kid-tested food and clowns, including "Curly-Q" from WQTV, Channel 68 in Boston who will amuse you with his bag of magic tricks, his unicycle riding and juggling. Also, special this year will be Friendly ice cream cones for .25¢, from noon to 4 p.m. Come and get one while they last! For further information, call 659-2559.

The South Shore Natural Science Center is located on Jacobs Lane, Norwell, just off Route 123, and is open from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Saturday and 1 to 4 p.m. Sundays and most holidays.



Indian Pow Wow

The public is invited to attend and participate in the 9th annual Indian Pow Wow sponsored by The Order for the Preservation of Indian Culture (T.O.P.I.C.) Saturday and Sunday, June 29 and 30, on the grounds of The South Shore Natural Science Center on Jacobs Lane.

Tribal dancing, Native American crafts and a sharing of the Native American culture will be in the offing. The Pow Wow provides an opportunity to travel through the mist of time to share Indian life as it authentically existed generations ago in encampments in this area and elsewhere throughout the land. This Pow Wow will include Indians from many tribes in the nation.

The grounds will be open from 11 a.m. until 6 p.m. with tribal dancing represented by the many tribes, and narration from Chief One Bear Tremblay of the Chippewa Tribe scheduled Saturday June 29 at 2 and 4 p.m. and Sunday, June 30 at 2 p.m.

Refreshments will be sold and hand crafted Indian jewelry, pottery, beadwork and many other crafts will be available for purchase. Admission is .99 cents for adults and .50 cents for children. Funds derived from the weekend will both help the needy and provide scholarships for worthy students. T.O.P.I.C. is a chartered non-profit inter-tribal organization striving to bring about a better understanding of Indian life.

Legal rights of consumers and businessmen

Attorneys Charles Humphreys and Roberta Sawyer talked to local businessmen last week about the rights of consumers and the responsibilities of business owners.

Atty. Humphreys talked about the specific predicament of bosses having to terminate an employee. The legal rights of employees have been well documented in the press, he noted. The subsequent question then comes to mind, "can you fire anyone anymore?" Humphreys asked the audience attending last week's Cohasset Chamber of Commerce meeting.

He explained that it's possible, remembering that persons are employed under three categories, union, contract, or at will. Union regulations for job termination are specific and written, so there can be no deviation. Contract employee also have a written document to support them. But, Humphreys warned, if that employee is hired for a specific time, such as the summer, it should be clearly included in the contract with the phrase "employment is subject to the satisfactory performance of the job."

A 1977 law altered the circumstances that an employer may terminate an "at will" employee. One wrongful manner in which this completed, is if the employer has something to gain by dismissing the employee, such as having to pay him a higher salary because of an impending job promotion.

Another wrongful termination is to fire someone because of race, sex, religion, or if he is handicapped. The laws protecting the handicapped are becoming so strong, Humphreys warned, that there is a push to include alcoholism in that category.

The employer must never display what the courts could determine as "outrageous behavior" when firing an employee. That would also allow the courts to side with the employee, he added.

Despite the conditions attached, "the businessman still has the absolute power to fire or lay off" his employees, according to Humphreys.

"If you fire an employee and you have no position to protect, it's best just to let him go without any diatribe," Humphreys said. On the other hand, if the employer is trying to protect his unemployment insurance and fires an employee for that reason, the laws are very pro-employee.

"The only time you can prevail in that instance, "he said, "is when an employee has willfully disregarded an employer. And it's difficult to prove. It's best to just let go and not state specific reasons. But if you defend your judgment, document it in writing."

Atty. Sawyer, an associate in Humphreys' Border Street firm, talked to the Cohasset businesspeople about Chapter 93A, the law that protects both consumers and business owners.

As Sawyer explained, this law deals with situations of a businessman versus another businessman, or a businessman versus a consumer. The law, she stated, protects against unfair trade practices, and assures fair practices in business transactions.

One way this law is utilized, she explained, is when an attorney sends a 93A letter to a businessman, accusing him or her of unfair and deceptive trade practices. The consumer is suing the business for the costs of the merchandise purchased, and will also have his attorney's fees paid if the courts find the business acted in a deceptive manner.

"Another wrongful termination is to fire someone because of race, sex, religion, or if he is handicapped. The laws protecting the handicapped are becoming so strong, that there is a push to include alcoholism in that category."

"If you get one, what should you do? Don't ignore it. Turn it over to your counsel immediately. You have 30 days to respond, and you have the obligation to make a reasonable offer of settlement. If it goes to litigation, the consumer may be limited to that reasonable amount. Unless you respond to that letter in 30 days, you are liable to treble damages and attorney's fee," Sawyer warned.

Her advice; "set forth the facts immediately and make a reasonable settlement."

Although one businessman asked if it would be satisfactory to sit down with the party and talk without a settlement offer, Sawyer answered, "yes, but I prefer putting an amount in writing or offering to repair the article, or a service offer. Delineate what you are willing to do, so a judge will know you really want to resolve this."

But, she added, some 93A's are groundless. "And in your response, if you feel you are not vulnerable, use that response to define that you are not responsible. That is deemed an appropriate response by the court. It is not unusual to send back a 93A with that response."

In her talk with the businessmen, Sawyer talked about the ways 93A affects advertising practices and debt collections, although it addresses many more areas including landlord-tenants, motor vehicle repairs, and services provided by restaurants, brokers, attorneys, and doctors.

"Everyone must watch out for specific examples of advertising," she stated. "If you display an 'on sale' sign, that can be deemed unfair and deceptive. If you do not say how the item was reduced, and disclose the previous price it was sold at and the sale price, this could be interpreted as unfair trade."

A retailer may not state that the product is sold at wholesale price, unless it really is the wholesale price. A businessman must have a sufficient supply of the 'on sale' item to avoid the 'fish and bait' scheme. If a retailer knows there is a limited supply for the anticipated amount of consumers, then he must state 'limited amount' on the advertisement.

Sawyer warned businesses against offering 'lifetime' guarantees on any product. It's too ambiguous, she stated, "whose life is it guaranteed for, the product's or the consumer's?"

The businessman must specify a certain amount of warranty, and how it will be fulfilled. It must also be stated how the item will be sent back for repairs, and at whose cost. "Also, if it has a one-year warranty, and the consumer returns it after six months, will he get half the purchase price back? These are questions that must be answered in writing," she warned.

The attorney added, "it's better to say too much on a warranty, than too little. It's going to come out of your pocketbook."

Sawyer also listed the "do's and don'ts' of debt collection.

"You can not contact the debtor by phone unless you disclose your name and state the name of the company you are working for. Don't disclose you are working for a debt collection service and you can't threaten a spouse or a child. If the collection pertains to just one person, you may only disclose your purpose to that person.

"You can only talk by phone to that person at his home twice a week, or at his business twice a month. You can't threaten, swear, and if you call his place of business, you can not disclose to anyone else you are calling for debt collection."

Sawyer noted that after contacting the person, you should send a notice of intentions. If the debtor returns the letter and specifically orders you not to call at his work, you are bound by that order.

She added a reasonable course of action is to bring the matter to Small Claims court, if the payment is less than $1200. "It's very simple, it will take five to six weeks, there are no attorney's fees, it costs $5 to $10 to fill out a claim, and the judge really likes to try to settle the case. You are always going to get something, not always as much as you wanted. But it's done quickly and it works well."

Sawyer said the businessman has six years from the date of the last invoice to bring the matter to court. She strongly suggested mailing a billing invoice to the debtor every year.

If a judge rules in the business' favor, the debtor has thirty days to pay his credit. If not, a supplementary process should be filed, and he must personally explain to the judge why the debt has not been paid. The judge will make an immediate decision, she explained, and will follow through to make sure the payment is made.

"There are times when a debtor will continually not show up in court. Unfortunately, an experienced debtor know what to do in court and get around it," she warned.

"If the debtor absolutely can not pay the amount the best thing is to work out a payment schedule. It's better to get $5 or $10 a week than nothing at all, Sawyer acknowledged.

The things you learn on daytime TV

Who the devil is Beatrice? Beats me, but after being entrapped in front of a television set for several days, it has become apparent that she owns everything.

You know how it is, head cold's distress and sinus congestion can force us against our will now and then to languish instead of to the preferred routine.

And with that brief incarceration came an education in daytime television.

These things I learned.

. . . The most dominant among them, as mentioned, is Beatrice.

A woman's voice comes on at the tag of the commercial announcing that whatever product it is, it belongs to Beatrice. I don't think it's Beatrice herself making that pronouncement but it's obvious she has snagged a covy of companies. Like Iacocca, she's so important she doesn't even need to use her full name.

. . . The best commercial on television now is a knee-slapping one, produced and sponsored by the state Department of Public Works. It's a take-off from Kenny Roger's "Ruby, don't take your love to town . . . "

Only it shows men working on Rte. 3, jersey barriers et al, traffic forcing them in a bunch between north and south commuters. They're singing, arms joined, "Pleeeze (that's two syllables,) don't take your car to town." It's funny, I have no idea how effective it is. The idea is to enjoin us to find alternate routes to and from Boston. Not since the Northwest Passage has such a mission seemed so implausible.

. . . I love Aunt Bea. She is better than any of the rhinestoned soap stars who implement the daytime "Dallas" dramas.

I found her, after these many years, in one of the replays of "Andy of Mayberry." She is far more reliable than the soap opera women. Aunt Bea, to my knowledge, doesn't get pregnant, collaborate with shifty characters who steal treasures, or conduct untoward behavior with the butcher.

It isn't that I don't enjoy a dose of racy repartee now and then. But the pillaging and plundering of human spirit in the soaps, all of which could have interchanging plots and characters, requires a viewer in top condition. I can only handle so much stealth and deception in afternoon programming.

. . . Phil Donahue had a show that asked the audience whether or not the media was becoming a wimp. That was a change from the last time I saw him when his question was whether or not the media was a bully.

The controversy centered on Doonesbury's session of sending Frank Sinatra downstream in unsavory company. Executive editors from newspapers nationwide were there to say what they'd done with the comic strip. Some refused to run. Others ran it only on Monday. More ran it as it was and a few, including the New York Daily News editor, ran it but he had altered it.

Intriguing. There was no consensus among those men (and one women) as to what course of action was 'right' in publication. Many prominent newspapers refused to carry Gary Trudeau's unsubtle negative review of Sinatra in the light of the singer's receiving the Medal of Freedom.

The unveiled suggestion, of course, was that Sinatra through his favor with the President received the award in spite of 'reputed' ties with underground characters, one of whom was highlighted by Trudeau as having been charged with murder. Trudeau did not add the man was later acquitted. Some newspapers did that for him.

I didn't agree at all with altering the cartoon. I don't see that as editing. I viewed it as censorship. I believed that if a newspaper chose not to carry it, so be it. But that it should be carried as the political satirist created it or not at all.

I am set neither atwitter nor afire by Trudeau. The bottom line is my faith in readers' intelligence. They are discerning. Incidentally the Mariner printed the controversial strips without comment.

I don't give a hoot about Doonesbury. But I give a lot of hoot about distinguishing as best we can the difference between editing and censoring.

One thing I'd add about those editors. They disagreed well. They were beyond being incited by differences. They kept their cool and their humor. And, I might add, they kept their disparate points of view.

And Nell Carter was on. It isn't her role in the sitcom I admired most, It's Nell. Since the night I saw her with the Boston Pops, emitting music as effortlessly as a breeze flutters leaves on a tree, I've been persuaded.

Wish she'd move to town so I could interview her. But the thing is I was further educated a bit by television. And if I could just find out who Beatrice is, I'll call it enough of daytime television for a while.

Caribbean in October

Single Living Newsmagazine is sponsoring a Caribbean trip in October. The details are sketchy at this point but we'd like to hear from those of you who might be planning a fall vacation, and would like more information.

We can't tell you the exact place and date at this moment, but we can tell you we'll have fun! The zany S.L. staff will be going. There'll be laughs for sure! We plan to limit the ratio of men to women to something approaching equal. It's not a good idea to come with high hopes of meeting your dream person. You'll most likely be disappointed. On the other hand, if you come knowing you'll be with a bunch of other nice single people from the Boston area, that you'll enjoy a 1st class vacation that you deserve, your chances of having a terrific time are 100%.

Please send me more information regarding Single Living *Caribbean in October trip.

PATTERNMAKING

This breakthrough book shows you how to create your own patterns directly from the clothes you love—without having to take them apart or harm them in any way—so that you can enjoy that style or that fit or that look again and again in whatever fabric or color or form you choose!

Using hundreds of ingeniously clear and simple line drawings, the author introduces her own method of pattern drafting. You don't need any skill in math or any special equipment—and anyone can do it. You'll learn step-by-step how to create patterns for:

- dresses (any style, including inseam and patch pockets, set-in, cap and kimono sleeves)
- skirts (any length, any line, including wrap skirts)
- shirts (and also jackets, windbreakers, pullovers and even unlined and reversible coats)
- pants (the most difficult of all to fit right—from short shorts to palazzos) and with this basic know-how, you can duplicate every article in your closet—everything in your friend's closets—and any other design anywhere.

Then learn how to create "the ultimate pattern"—by combining your favorite elements from several individual garments to create your own original designs.

Bensussen discusses choices of fabric and color and line for your figure type, enhancing her comments with lots of elegant fashion illustration. She also offers excellent ideas for coding the patterns you create and filing them, so that you can use them easily again and again. 160 pages, 8 × 10, hundreds of line drawings and diagrams, index.

TO ORDER: Send your name, address, zip code and $8.95 plus $1.25 postage and handling to American Melody, 123 South Street, Oyster Bay, NY 11771. NY residents add appropriate sales tax. Please print clearly.

FROM THE KITCHEN

by JOAN PINKHAM

Once upon a time — July 2, 1936, to be exact — center cuts of salmon were 29¢, fresh peas, also traditional fare for the Fourth, were selling at First National Stores for 21¢ for 2 lb.

The full-page ad in the Boston Traveler has been yellowing in my so-called "files" since Edna Phillips sent it to me when this column first started. It boggles one's mind to read of mackeral at 5¢ a lb., bread, 9¢ for a long, 20 oz. loaf and Fancy Milk Fed Fowl at 27¢ a lb.

At prices like those, the wine would probably cost more than the chicken for this

COQ AU VIN

4 bacon slices, cut in pieces
1 2 1/2 to 3 lb. broiler-fryer, cut up
5T all-purpose flour
1 c. Burgundy
1 c. chicken broth or bouillon
1/2 lb. small white onions
1/2 lb. small mushrooms
1 1/2 tsp. salt, 1/2 tsp. pepper

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. In 12" skillet over medium-high heat, fry bacon until crisp. Remove bacon and in drippings, over medium-high heat, cook chicken until browned on all sides. In 2 1/2 qt. casserole, blend flour and wine 'til smooth. Add chicken, bacon and remaining ingredients. Cover and bake one hour, or until chicken is fork-tender, occasionally basting with sauce. Serves four.

Next to an ad picturing summer coats for sale at $2.98 in Jordan's Basement, the 1936 edition of the Traveler features a lengthy article entitled, "Boston Through Mid-West Eyes." The Boston we know today is a far cry from the city in the 30's, for then it was a prosperous seaport, with America's largest drydock, where there was also the world's greatest fish-freezing and storage plant. It was the center of America's paper, wool, textbook and cotton manufacturing industries and the second port in America in volume of ocean-borne passenger traffic, with 40 miles of berthing to accommodate the largest vessels. "A few minutes' ride from Faneuil Hall are more than 5700 factories and over 25,000 stores of one kind or another." Today, some of the older restaurants such as Durgin Park, Locke Ober's and the Parker House are as popular as ever and reknowned for New England fare such as baked beans, lobster and Indian Pudding, but if you are dining at home, you may wish to serve this very special dish known as

8 oz. veal
1/2 c. flour
1 c. crabmeat (or langostino)
12 asparagus tips, 3 per person
Cream sauce
3T butter, 2T olive oil
Cook asparagus 'til tender (canned may be used.) Set aside.

Make the cream sauce with 2T butter, 2T flour and 1 1/2 c. milk. Add a smidgen of cooking sherry (about 1T). Set aside.

Warm crabmeat (or langostino) slowly after adding a little water in a small pan, covering to keep warm until veal is ready to serve. Prepare veal by pounding and dipping in flour, shaking off excess flour. Heat butter and oil 'til bubbly. Saute the veal on both sides, approx. a minute and set aside. To serve: Top each veal serving with crab or langostino, topping that with 3 asparagus tips, topping with cream sauce. Serves 4.

Thanks to Boston's United Fruit Company, the banana became a staple in diets all over the U.S. John Hancock never saw one and in 1876 at the Philadelphia Centennial Exhibition, curious crowds gazed in wonder at a bunch of them. Today there's no problem when making this dessert of Pam Henry's, from one of my favorite cookbooks called "Cohasset Entertains."

BANANA SPLIT PIE

9" pie shell, baked
1/2 c. butter
1 1/2 c. confectioners sugar
2 eggs
1 tsp. vanilla
1 sq. unsweetened chocolate, grated
2 sliced bananas
1T lemon juice

Cream butter, gradually adding sugar. Add eggs one at a time, beating 3 min. each. Fold in remaining ingredients, turn into pie shell and garnish with additional sliced bananas if desired. Chill 2 to 3 hours.

ANGLER'S CORNER by George Doucette

Small-Mouths - Big Fish on Little Lures

For the past three or four weeks our tackle shop had hundreds of avid fishermen heading for Maine to catch small-mouth bass. Why, when Plymouth County's lakes are full of 2 to 5 pound small-mouth bass do we all go to Maine? Small-mouths are more difficult to catch than their cousin, the large-mouth bass, and your fishing techniques will have to change a little. The baits are the same, only of a small variety. Four inch rubber worms, not the 6" and 8" sizes, 3/8 oz. and 1/4 oz. spinner baits, small Mepps, spinners, Rooster Tails, Kastmasters, and almost any big lure used for large-mouths in a smaller size will work well. Crayfish, small minnows, night crawlers and shrimp also work as natural baits. The lines you use should be 4 and 6 pound test, the same as for trout. As these bass are found in deep, clear lakes and they are a little more cautious than large-mouth bass. Light graphite spinning rods with medium to light reels seem to be everyone's favorite combo.

Local fishing has been good to excellent this spring on many Cape Cod lakes, as well as in Plymouth, Cedarville, Carver, and other areas within 30 minute's drive. So the next time you are thinking about that long ride to New Hampshire or Maine, think local, and remember 5 lb. small-mouths live in your own back yard.

Politicus — by David A. Mittell, Jr.

Jerks are another matter. . .

Every year about this time I go down to Duxbury for a week and just collapse and allow my nearest neighbors Mrs. Raccoon (someone should tell her about birth control), Mr. Gray Fox, and Mr. and Mrs. Great Blue Heron to soothe a brain aching from too much exposure to humanity. The therapy worked again last week; when it ceases to make me a better man let me die.

Alas, Friday came and it was time to check in at the office and check out the junk mail, the bills, and the voices on the infernal answering machine. Among the above was an item the sort of which precisely explains why your reporter has to get away from it all from time to time. It was a leaflet signed by the "gay/lesbian task force" promoting a Fathers' Day march to the rather modest home on Perry Street in Brookline where Gov. Dukakis has lived most of his adult life.

There, the leaflet driveled on, marchers would issue the governor a mock citation for child abuse, his act of "abuse" being a Department of Social Services policy that denies children the high privilege and great civil right of having gays and lesbians as foster parents.

The leaflet concerned me. During Gov. Dukakis' first term I was once on hand when another group of protesters decided to take their grievance home to him. I watched the group in question pitch camp overnight outside his back door, urinate on his trees like so many dobermans, and I saw the fright in the eyes of his daughters Kara and Andrea at what at about nine and eleven must have seemed like the Russian Revolution going on.

Another such performance was more than I thought a man who has devoted a quarter of a century to public service (and who takes plenty of heat in this space) deserved on Fathers' Day. So I telephoned Sec. of Human Services Philip Johnston and read him the leaflet. As I should have known, the "new Dukakis" is nothing if not on top of the political situation, and Sec. Johnston reported that the governor was well aware of the impending march on Perry Street, and had already arranged to celebrate Fathers' Day some place else.

Great, I thought. Here's a fellow who has been as good a friend of gays and lesbians as any governor in the country, and because he has given offense over one rather obscure state regulation, he gets driven out of his home on Fathers' Day. The argument that the perpetrators are qualified to be foster parents suddenly seemed disingenuous. Their behavior gave the lie to their argument.

There is, of course, a distinction to be made in any cause between the professional screamers and those they purport to represent. As I have suggested in this space before, the most innocent parties—perhaps the only innocent parties—in the present overblown quarrel over gay foster-parenting are David X and David Y, the now excluded gay fosterparents who by dint of a Boston Globe story about them, started the whole raucus affair.

The march to Perry St. reminds me of another revealing encounter I once had with the gay/lesbian task force. One of the celebrated gay murders of 1981 was an acquaintance of mine, a professional colleague. I hadn't known of Charley's being gay prior to his being shot one night in the Fenway. But I sure found out at his funeral, because there in full brigade were the same tasteless, inconsiderate protesters who showed up at Gov. Dukakis' house on Fathers' Day.

There, too, were Charley's aged parents. Who knows if they had known Charley was gay? But Charles "came out" in a hurry at his last rights, for there were fifty militants who had never laid eyes on him before, proclaiming his little secret over his dead body.

It seems to me that Charley's funeral and the invasion of Perry St. last Sunday are both case studies in why the gay rights movement, along with many other movements of the last 20 years, are headed to the political "out" house. The American people (contrary to militant gay/lesbian rhetoric) are very fair. Most families have to deal with homosexuality somewhere along the line, and most do so kindly and positively. Most people understand how agonizing it can be coming of age gay in a world that is structured around the predominant straight majority. Most people, I believe, are sympathetic to public policies that protect gay people from harassment, and in most instances, from discrimination.

The single major exception is where children are involved. Many straight people believe, as I do, that most gays can teach school and serve as foster parents as reliably as most straights. But others aren't so sure, and their doubts do not mark them as bigots, their doubts are a legitimate part of a needed debate on the subject.

Those who violated Gov. Dukakis' privacy on Fathers' Day ought to ask themselves how they would have reacted had a bunch of chanting anti-gay demonstrators shown up at the doorstep of David X and David Y (the gay foster parents) on Fathers' Day. I'll tell you how they would have reacted, the epithets the gay/lesbian task force would have used to describe such a violation of the privacy of David X and David Y could not be repeated in this column. Well, the same epithets apply to them and their own violation of the privacy of this most accessible of governors.

At this juncture gay people need to be protected from, among other things, their own extremists. Those gays who will not permit debate on the sensitive subject of gays supervising the children of others only show their own bigotry. The fairness of the American people cuts both ways, and when militant gays start attacking a governor who is a friend of gays, they set themselves up to be slapped down again and again in the political arena.

Society is ready to accept gays, but jerks are another matter.

THE NO-COMPROMISE SOLUTION TO BUYING AN AUTOMOBILE.

When you lay out a substantial amount of money for an automobile, you should get what you want. Buying a car shouldn't be an exercise in making sacrifices.
Saab doesn't ask you to give up anything.
Superb handling and performance have made the Saab 900 one of Europe's most respected sports sedans. But that performance is delivered in return for little gas* and less fuss by a reliable two-liter engine. And unlike many other high-performance cars, the Saab is perfectly at-home in the workaday world. Four adults can travel comfortably all day in a Saab, or the rear two seats can be folded flat to add extra space for cargo.
We'll be happy to tell you about a lot of other features that you won't have to give up when you buy a Saab.
SAAB
The most intelligent car ever built.
*Saab 900 5-speed. EPA estimated mpg, 36 estimated highway mpg. Use estimated mpg for comparison only. Mileage varies with speed, trip length and weather. Actual highway mileage will probably be less.

. . . For A Safer Summer

During the last week in June our associates will be distributing throughout 'Conway Country', copies of an Emergency Poison Control Chart. This chart was produced by RELO/Inter-City Relocation Service and has been given out nationally by its members. Accidental poisoning is a serious problem particularly with children. Dr. Susan S. Fish, Assistant Director of the Massachusetts Poison Control System told a meeting of our office managers that the Center received over 100,000 calls last year requesting help and information for poison victims. This chart can be taped to the inside of a medicine cabinet or some other convenient location for easy reference if ever needed. Additional single copies or multiple copies for groups are available at all Conway Offices.

Right to appeal EPA given to commission

By Jane Lane

He is angry, confused, and feels defeated. But Charles DeSantis, chairman of the sewer commission, is still fighting.

It may seem to many he is fighting against all odds. But DeSantis believes this latest appeal to Washington, D.C. is the last chance to salvage a wastewater plan that has followed all the rules in a game where the opponents are not playing by the same.

Selectmen, by a narrow 3-1 margin, approved the sewer commission's right to appeal the latest EPA's rejection of Cohasset's wastewater plan. Saying she was casting her vote under protest, Selectman Mary Jane McArthur said she would vote with Clifford Mitman and Chairman Frank England to authorize the use of town meeting funds. This will preserve the right to appeal the EPA ruling to the national bureau in Washington, D.C.

Cohasset is under a deadline to submit its intent to appeal. While the EPA is reviewing the document, it can be withdrawn at any time.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle said he could never vote for anything that would indicate his support of the plan, and Selectman Diane Sullivan was not in attendance.

DeSantis and commission member Gary Vanderweil Jr. urged selectmen to approve the $1500-$2000 necessary to appeal the EPA New England Region's decision to the national level. They argued that town meeting last year approved the so-called Ward plan, and the appeal is the next step in following the town's mandate. DeSantis said there is a $3655 balance left from the special town meeting appropriation of $10,000 for sewer commission legal fees. That money must be utilized by June 30, or the money will be reverted back to the town's free cash supply. He also noted that an appeal should be filed immediately while the town continues negotiations with the state for funding of the Hull pipeline connection.

DeSantis explained that the commission and its special counsel agree the only course to follow is the national-level appeal. The appeal is a necessary tool, he said, to help with the funding negotiations Cohasset is currently conducting with the state.

He was defiant in his reaction to the EPA's denial of Cohasset's appeal to overturn state funding for most of the Ward plan. "The decision I find is an out and out disgrace and a complete abdication of the Cohassset requirements," he stated, noting that "Cohasset is not as bad off as some other small communities of Massachusetts."

Regional EPA Administrator Michael Leland has confirmed that the only fundable alternative is to construct a big plant we can't afford. It's a nonsensible decision," he added.

There's lots of summertime fun in Cohasset, most notably along the Mill River. As long as there are rapids, they'll be canoes, kayaks, and kids. (Bill Quigley)

Parents plea for extra teacher

Declaring a "stigma" has been attached to the upcoming sixth grade class, parents urged the school committee to respond to the individual needs of these students.

The method they prescribed Monday night is the addition of a fourth teacher for the sixth grade next year. With the extra classroom instructor, student/teacher ratios will be lowered to about 18/1. Without the fourth instructor, classes sizes are predicted at 27/1 in September.

A renactment of this scene occurred a year ago. Many of the same parents requested an additional fifth grade teacher to lower class sizes, thus enhancing individual attention to these students. The committee responded by adding a half-time teacher to the fifth grade staff.

As a result of that addition, the parents proclaimed that basic skills testing scores improved the past year. In order to continue this positive growth, parents are now pleading with the committee members to add another teacher in the sixth grade.

About 60 parents crowded into the school committee's meeting room to explain the problems long associated with this class, and the way in which they can be eased by the school system.

Committee members made no determination on the matter, explaining that until a contract is negotiated with the teachers' union, there can be no promises regarding staff levels.

They did explain, however, that because a limit has been set for the school budget from which the contract monies must be drawn, there will be no surplus for hiring an additional teacher. The only way in which a teacher can be added to the staff next year is by eliminating supplies or a teacher elsewhere in the system.

It was suggested that one method may to be eliminate the additional teaching position from the fifth grade in exchange for the extra sixth grade instructor.

As committee member Diana Kornet explained Monday night, "I'm not against hiring an additional teacher for the sixth grade. But I want you people here again when we have to justify it to the parents of the (past year's) fourth graders."

Roger Crafts of North Main Street spoke for many of the parents when he commented, "the fifth graders are socially immature and are becoming academically immature. Their teachers have confirmed this."

Their concerns began, he said, in kindergarten when their teacher retired in the middle of the year, and two years later when their teacher had a heart attack. These situations, Crafts said, have had a major negative effect on the development of these kids.

Recent basic testing scores indicated a rise in their reading and math abilities, but they are two grade levels below in language arts.

Class size per say, he continued, is not the issue. "But with an immature class who is struggling, it

It's off to the wilds of Borneo

By Karen Cubie

Jeff Bettinger is in Borneo.

"I'm taking Pepto-Bismol," he said before he left on Wednesday morning. "My system will have to adjust. You don't point at people with the soles of your feet.

"We've heard there are big bugs," he said as he held up his fist to show how large he's heard the bugs are. "Head hunting was outlawed in 1962. I'm relieved at that.

"They have nice beaches," he continued. "But there are sea snakes and ocean crocodiles."

Bettinger's Company, Stone and Webster Engineering Corporation, sent him to Bintulu, Malaysia, on the island of Borneo, to help build a fertilizer plant.

"The job in Malaysia is being done through our affiliates, the Stone and Webster Management Consultant, for a private Malaysian firm," he said.

Jeff, an engineer for the firm which deals in the construction and design of large chemical plants, went to Bintulu with a fellow worker to monitor the operation and performance of the plant.

"Part of the company's contract involves performance standards," he said. "We have to ensure that it is producing so many pounds of urea product with so many pounds of feedstock.

"Steve and I have a pact," Bettinger said. "If my head is shrunk, he'll bring it back. He'll trade as many trinkets as necessary, and I'll do the same for him."

Bettinger, a Cohasset resident for 3 years, is also the chairman of the Watershed Protection Area Committee, a committee formed to develop a water

Cohasset resident elected

At the annual meeting of the Massachusetts Association of Older Americans, Inc., which took place on June 14, it was announced that Attorney Kirk Giffen, President of the Benevolent Fraternity of United Churches, has been elected to the Governing Board.

The Massachusetts Association of Older Americans is an independent, non-profit organization active in the state since 1969. Its purpose is to provide public education on issues of concern to elderly people and to train elders in advocacy strategies around these issues. Its special areas of interest are in the health, housing, employment, income security and transportation fields.

Rape investigation program

Officer Maureen Healy of the Cohasset Police Department recently completed a five day program on rape investigation given at the Massachusetts State Police Academy. The program covered victim counselling, psychology of the rapist, criminalistic procedure, court decisions related to a suspect identification, and prosecution of offenders.

Letters about shipyard

In response to a concern from selectmen's executive secretary Donald Andrew, Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray and Congressman Gerry Studds said they are working to ensure more contracts for the Quincy shipyard.

In a letter from Murray she stated "one of our problems is that shipyards in the south and other areas of the country have lower labor costs, thus our bids are too high."

She noted "I shall continue to do all I can to ensure that the Quiuncy shipyard will not close."

Rep. Murray added, "the yard is not being discriminated against because of their controversial past; this has no bearing on the situation, we were told."

Congressman Studds stated he is working with Congressman Brian Donnelly to "persuade the Navy to award future contracts to the Yard. The Navy's choice of a contractor for the third vessel of its oil tanker fleet is due shortly, as is its decision on awarding a contract for two survey ships."

The Congressman also noted "while I am not ready to concede that the facility can no longer be operated as a shipyard, I feel strongly that it is prudent to study possible alternatives." Studds said he is working toward that end in conjunction with a committee recently appointed by the Quincy City Council.

More filling news

Zoning Enforcement Officer Edward Poskus has again informed the South Shore Music Circus that their annual maintenance procedure resulted in wetlands filling, and ordered them to remove it.

On June 13, Poskus sent a letter to the Sohier Street business, stating that fill had been deposited on the parking lot of the property, which is within the floodplain and watershed protection district. Since producer Ron Rawson failed to receive permission for the filling, he was required to remove it.

Rawson answered that Poskus had witnessed "a routine annual maintenance procedure" which is a regrading of the top surface of the parking lot.

But Poskus termed the action as illegal filling, and advised the producer to remove the fill, and apply for a special permit from the zoning board of appeals.

Committee appointments

Selectmen made the following committee appointments this week: George Fellows and Katherine McGrath, three-year terms, Council on Aging; Katherine Young, James Murphy, Robert Sturdy, three-year terms, Historic District Commission; Cliff Dickson and William Stone, reappoint as assistant harbormasters for one year; Lot E. Bates, one year, Sealer of Weights and Measures; Mary McCormack and Harry Ritter, Government Island Study Committee; Richard Hayes, John Packard, three-year terms, Cable Advisory Committee; Arthur Lehr, one-year Civil Defense Director; Noel Ripley, one-year, Keeper of the Town Clock; David Wadsworth, one-year, Town Archives; and all current special police officers.

The Law and You

by Richard Price, Attorney-at-Law

PARTITION

A lawsuit that asks the court to divide real estate owned by more than one person is called a "partition". In this situation, the court does not merely apply technical rules of law and award money damages. It sits in equity and must look at all the circumstances to make a fair decision. This involves taking into account the circumstances of each partner as well as the character of the real estate. The situation would be different if there was a written agreement that spelled out each partner's rights when the partnership dissolved. An attorney could have written this into the original contract. The court would then simply enforce the contract and award damages.

The decision of the court is based on the facts presented. Thus, it is vitally important to have your case presented in the most favorable light possible. For the experienced approaches and achievable results you desire, utilize the services of an attorney. LAW OFFICES OF RICHARD PRICE, 760 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy., Rt. 3A, Cohasset, 383-9882. I am available daily by appointment.

The rules of equity are designed to do justice when money damages cannot repay a party to a lawsuit.

DeSantis rejects state's ruling

Cohasset is relatively fortunate, DeSantis stated, in that the regionalized hook-up with Hull is a valid option.

DeSantis explained it took the EPA one full year to decided to deny Cohasset's appeal, and four months just to schedule an adversarial meeting with the Department of Water Pollution Control (DWPC). The physical filing of the appeal is a move Cohasset must make, he warned, although it could be another five years before the town hears anything from the feds.

"It's difficult to give the town its best shot without this ammunition," he told selectmen. "The appeal is vital. We're very serious and very concerned."

Concurrently with the appeal, the town will be proceeding to negotiate a contract with Hull for the pipeline regionalization.

DeSantis also emphasized for selectmen that in the midst of a "very negative document" (from the EPA) there are some positive aspects. The regional administrator notes that "Cohasset's vigorous effort to achieve the most cost-efficient alternative and to impress upon the Commonwealth and EPA that it is doing so, is not only appropriate, but it is in fact required by statute and regulations."

But the commission chairman also noted that in the next breath the administrator reported, "the town should keep in mind that although its overall project may be the most cost-effective alternative, certain components of the project may not be eligible for EPA grant funding under the Clean Water Act and regulations."

"Cohasset is characterized by the EPA as crazy or bold for requesting this funding from the state," DeSantis claimed.

Selectman Mitman said although he approved following the town's mandate to pursue the Ward plan, he also supported McArthur's suggestion to hold a joint meeting with the sewer commission and selectmen. In the meantime, he said, it was important for the town to act quickly "so we don't lose the weight of our argument."

Selectman Laugelle told DeSantis, "the last couple of years you've had a lot of bag of tricks and it has not survived. Face it Charlie."

"I realize the position I'm in," McArthur told the sewer commissioners. "The appeal will go down if I vote no. I will vote yes, Charlie, but under protest."

Leaving the meeting after the vote, R. Murray Campbell, a longtime opponent of the Ward plan, characterized the appeal as a "total waste of time," and the selectmen's vote as "gutless."

Selectmen agreed to meet with the sewer commissioners in two weeks to update the progress of the appeal.

Outside the meeting Tuesday night, DeSantis said Cohasset's appeal to the national level is unique because of the issues being addressed. The main thrust of their argument is "that the state agency (DWPC) whose function is to assess the most cost-efficient project for the town, and assist in securing funds, has done everything to frustrate those goals in direct conflict of the Clean Waters Act."

"I'm absolutely outraged and disgusted that this state agency chooses to make law instead of administering the law," he added. DeSantis said he remains confident the majority of the town is solidly behind the Ward plan and supports a high level appeal.

"I want to be realistic with everyone," he cautioned, "and let everyone know that the probable outcome of the appeal is that of course, the Hull connection will come through, with a greatly reduced sewered area and a town-funded on-site septic system repair program.

Despite the reduction of the plan's scope, DeSantis said the total cost will certainly be less than the original Metcalf and Eddy project "without outfall into Sandy Beach and a belching plant that could bankrupt the town."

He continued, "it's a disgrace and an outrage-this decision. Cohasset did everything the EPA wanted a community to do under the EPA regulations and laws. We did everything they told us to do. Leland (EPA regional administrator) said we had to do it in his report, yet he denies the funding. It's fascinating."

Another priority of the sewer commission, he said, is to convene a meeting of the Massachusetts Congressional Delegation and the 30 small communities affected by the EPA decision. DeSantis said it would be an opportunity for the local officials to find out "what the delegation meant when they voted for the Clean Waters Act."

He noted, "I feel defeated and confused. This decision is an affront to the people of Cohasset. We did everything they asked, and we paid the bills. They said, 'you're nice guys, but no money.'

"The people make the laws in this country and I'm an elected official of the town. Something has got to happen to the leadership of the DWPC because they are not representing the people. I hope the government gets the message. This agency has been serving someone, but certainly not the communities of the Commonwealth."

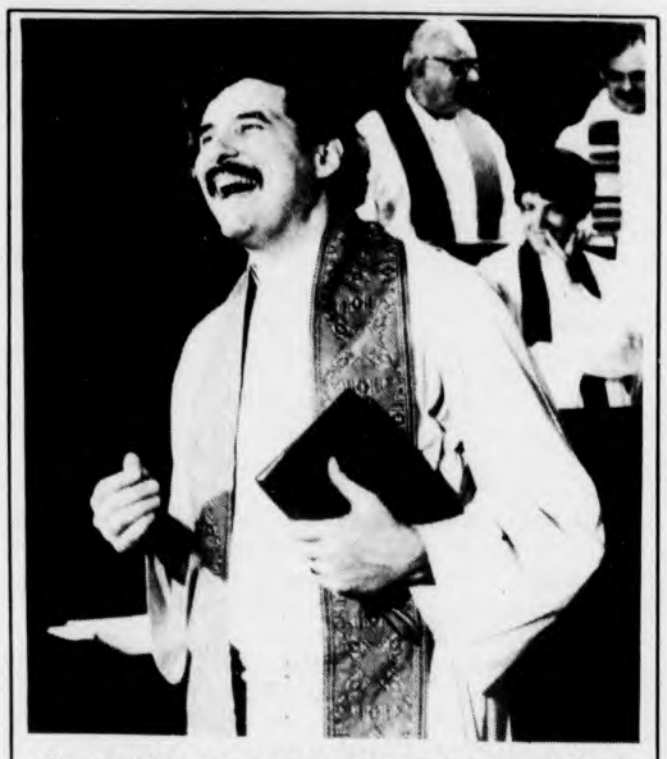
Community helps celebrate a new ministry

In a ceremony resplendent with joyous song and jubilant friends and family, the new ministry of Rev. E. Clifford Cutler was celebrated Sunday afternoon.

The new Rector of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church was officially instituted into office after serving the church the past four months.

Prior to the 4 p.m. ceremony, Carillonneur Earl Chamberlain treated the community to a majestic recital. The sounds of the bronze cast bells from within the belfry of St. Stephen's pealed throughout the Common area as churchpeople and passersby stopped to listen.



As the sun broke through afternoon clouds, the ceremony began inside the church. Friends and parishioners filled the pews within this small stone church set upon the tall mountain of ledge.

John Bowen Coburn, Bishop of Massachusetts, was celebrant of the ministry ceremony. His official letter to Rev. Cutler was read aloud to the congregation.

"This letter," the Bishop stated,"is a sign that you are fully empowered and authorized to exercise this ministry, accepting its privileges and responsibilities as a priest of this Diocese, in communion with your Bishop.".

Having committed yourself to this work," he stated,"do not forget the trust of those who have chosen you. Care alike for young and old, strong and weak, rich and poor. By your words, and in your life, proclaim the Gospel. Love and serve Christ's people. Nourish them, and strengthen them to glorify God in this life and in the life to come."

Betsy Stevenson read the Epistle, a letter from Paul to the Romans in which he advised the followers of Jesus Christ to "serve the Lord, contribute to the needs of God's people. Care about each other. Live at peace with all people."

Joy and humor are shown on the face of Rev. E. Clifford Cutler during installation ceremonies at St. Stephen's Church. (Chris Pierce)

The Gospel, John 15:9-16, was read by The Rev. Andrew Hamersley. "Love one another as I have loved you," the congregation was advised. "There is no greater love than this."

Sunday's sermon was delivered by The Rev. Ronald L. Reed, Staff Officer for Stewardship, Executive Council of the Episcopal Church and Preacher. A long-time acquaintance of Rev. Cutler's, Rev. Reed said there was one message of his lecture that day — "That Cliff and Amy and you will grow

by Dr. Kevin M. Neill, Chiropractic Physician

AHEAD OF ITS TIME

Since its inception, chiropractic has believed that health is the result of man's remaining in harmony with the principles of nature. Chiropractic pioneers were severely attacked for their criticism of drug over-utilization, involuntary immunization programs, the perversion of food during processing and the neglect of physical fitness. Today, we realize the validity of such criticism. Both society and science realize that we have placed too much attention on prescription rather than prevention, too much attention on weakening invaders rather than on strengthening their host. Concern for both the internal and external environments should be kept in balance. Ecology should concern us, both from within and without.

Chiropractic is a natural, drugless and knifeless approach to helping the body heal itself. Through proven applications points of interference along the body's communication network are eliminated. Thus sources of energy and guidance pass to all parts and organs allowing for a natural healing process to take place. For specific needs or as a regular health style routine, we welcome your visits at the COHASSET CHIROPRACTIC OFFICE, 760 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy., Suite 12. House calls under special and emergency circumstances. Tel. 383-1211, 1214. Captain John Wilson House

The Cohasset Historical Society's Captain John Wilson House, located at Cohasset Center, serves a unique function among the town's historical assets. At the head of Elm Street and built in 1810 by housewright David Nichols, the great-great-great grandfather of the Society's present curator, this early sea captain's house is perhaps the only primitive house remaining in Cohasset.

Today its interior remains much the same as it was when the building was constructed a century and three-quarters ago. Unheated today, the old home never has had central heating or plumbing, though it was utilized as a dwelling until into the 20th century.

On the exterior, many examples still exist of antique, perhaps original, clapboards, some made from short lengths of wood and all having beveled ends overlapping their neighbors. In its unusual windows numerous panes of old glass can be seen, wavy and tinted with a green or purple hue. Inside the sturdy hand-cut beams and timbers of frame and ceiling show evidence of housewright Nichols' thriftiness.

Some of the ancient structural members were used once before in an earlier structure, probably a barn, as shown by numerous notches cut into the wood in places not used in the present house. It was not unusual for early builders to recycle large timbers, thereby saving the work of hand-cutting new ones each time.

Overhead, the ceiling timbers have been trimmed to fit the unevenness of the wide-board flooring of the second story. Housewright David Nichols is known to have constructed one other home, his own house, still existing near the North Main Street end of Jerusalem Road. That hip-roof Federal design house is believed to be some eight to 10 years later than the Elm Street house built for Capt. Wilson on Elm Street (at that time called "Ship Cove Lane"). The Jerusalem Road house remained in the Nichols family for nearly a century and a half, the Elm Street home was sold to Capt. Wilson in the year of its construction. The original deed for the house is dated 1810 and the sale price was for less than $500. Interestingly, that deed describes the house as being "on land of the town." Thus it appears to have been one of the numerous encroachments made upon the remaining undivided common land of the town in the area between today's Town Common and the Harbor, along the side of Elm Street.

Later, in a deed dated January 14, 1828, Town Treasurer Samuel Bates, acting for the Inhabitants of Cohasset, conveyed the parcel of land to Capt. Wilson for $34.75, thus clearing the title of ownership.

The first floor of the Wilson House contains a fireplace, but it is not the kitchen or cooking fireplace to be expected in an old house. The kitchen is found upstairs at the north end of the second floor. Downstairs, Capt. Wilson ran a small store described as a ship's chandlery, while the family resided above. Sometime after 1810 the second floor was extended further to the rear of the house and rests on the granite ledge called "Bourne's Rocks," an outcropping which overlooks Cohasset Center.

Several generations of the Wilson family resided in the Elm Street house, and in the year 1912, in a deed dated May 31, Trustee Charles Wilson conveyed the house and land to Cohasset businessman William Hamilton McGaw. For a number of years the old sea captain's house was the site of a tailor's shop, photographer's studio and tea room. Then in 1936 McGaw presented the property to the Cohasset Historical Society in memory of his late wife Priscilla Lothrop Collier.

Today, the Capt. John Wilson Historical House, Cohasset's first museum, houses an extensive collection of early household furnishings from the older houses of the town, donated by interested residents. Here, they are displayed in a setting almost unchanged since the construction of the house in 1810.

The Wilson House, one of two popular museums owned by the Cohasset Historical Society on Elm Street, attracts several hundred visitors each summer. They come not only from the South Shore area but from many parts of the country and from foreign lands to see this old New England homestead in its original setting. The Capt. Wilson House and the adjacent Maritime Museum now are open through the end of September each afternoon except Mondays from 1:30 to 4:30.

Art Center festival throughout weekend

Five different artists, each expressing their ideas in the abstract, will exhibit their work together in the 30th anniversary of the South Shore Arts Festival.

Selected for the invitational exhibit of the festival are two painters, Irene Valincius and Michael O'Connell, and three sculptors, Suzanna Schell, Jay Havighurst and Lenore Tenenblatt. Their works will be on exhibit in the Cohasset Congregational Church during the South Shore Art Center's festival, June 28 through June 30.

Barbara Gurnis and Ron Goodwin, whose responsibility has been to put together the invitational show, when looking for work that was non-representational and "so evolved these artists whose work, though different in nature, go together for the invitational exhibit," Gurnis explained.

Except for Havighurst, all the other artists work out of the Fort Point Channel Arts Community of Boston. Havighurst, an environmental artist and kinetic sculptor, works out of Brighton. His works incorporate sound and movement and has been involved with dance with his sculptures at the Mobius Theatre.

He is a graduate of Massachusetts College of Art and has been in group shows at the DeCordova Museum, Springfield Art Museum and the Kingston Gallery in Boston.

Irene Valincius, a young Boston painter, exhibits widely in the Boston area and is represented in several public collections. Her abstract oils are described as vibrant and intriguing works. Working out of her Fort Point Channel studio, she has transformed her daily environment of roadways and urban commerce into abstract, uncompromising art. Implicit in this art are the materials of the environment — asphalt, concrete, enamel, metal, water — and the processes of accumulation and erosion by which these materials take form and gain texture.

Her works are in the public collections of Chermayeff and Geismar in New York; Herrick and Smith, Boston; The Putnam Cos., Boston; Rolm, New York; Sherbourne, Powers and Needham, Boston; Trenton State College, New Jersey; the Boston Globe; Computers in Medicine, Cambridge; and others.

Painter Michael O'Connell is a recent finalist in the Provincetown Fine Arts Work Center Fellowship competition. His oils have been in one-person shows in the Artisera Cooperative Gallery and the Fairbanks Gallery, both in Syracuse, N.Y.

His group shows include Fort Point Artists at the Kingston Gallery, Boston; 18th annual juried exhibit, Spartanburg, S.C. Art Assn.; Handmade paper Artists Invitational, Thompson Gallery, Boston; group invitational exhibit, Brixton Artists Space, London; Root Art Center, University of Nebraska, in Lincoln; and others.

Sculptor Lenore Tenenblatt, a Boston Museum School graduate, recently returned from a residency at the MacDowell Colony in Peterborough, N.H. She is currently working on a commission for outdoor sculptures which are being constructed in oiled steel.

Teneblatt constructs sculptures which vary in scale from one to eight feet and are made of wood and painted with various mixtures of oil based paint, wax and bronze powder. She has shown widely in galleries in Massachusetts and Connecticut.

This invitational exhibit demonstrates the ability of five different artists to bring together their work into one cohesive show. For a complete listing of events during the festival contact the South Shore Art Center, 103 Ripley Road in Cohasset, 383-9548.

Help needed! — The Maintenance Committee will be overseeing the repairs to the Meeting House later this year. There are four jobs involving the shutters on the Meeting House we do not plan to contract out, and we are looking for volunteers to help with one or all. The jobs are as follows: 1. Help get the shutters off the building - we plan to have a shutter removal party Saturday, June 29 at 9 a.m. 2. Storing the shutters - does someone have a barn suitable for storage? We will need help moving. Possibly we could use the basement of the Meeting House.
3. Repair and paint shutters where necessary. Help will be needed here. 4. Putting shutters back when contract work is completed. If you would like to help with any of these jobs, please call Jack Hubbard, 383-0586.

Carriage House Nursery School news — It is with regret that the Carriage House Board and I announce the resignation of Gail Columbare. Gail has taught with me since the school began seven years ago. She has accepted a full-time position with the Weymouth Library. We wish her well! However, it is with pleasure that we announce the appointment of Weezie Welz to fill the teaching position. Weezie is a graduate of Wheelock College and has several years of preschool teaching experience. Weezie lives in Cohasset with her husband, Brian, and two children, Allie and Nicky. She is well acquainted with the Carriage House and its philosophy, as Allie was a member of our first class and Weezie was a faithful volunteer. Some of you may know her as one of the Paul Pratt Library volunteers responsible for the preschool story hours.

ALZHEIMER'S DISEASE

Is this a subject you have thought about? Do you have an elderly relative whose behavior has become a problem, who has difficulty with memory, whose behavior has been erratic? It may not be easy to tell the difference between the way stress or depression affect an older person, and the ravages of a progressive disease like Alzheimer's. This is not simply due to "hardening of the arteries," it is not simply due to "age." We are learning a good deal about Alzheimer's Disease today, and one of the most important things we are learning is how important it is to tell this apart from other causes of memory loss or depression in the elderly!

At the Behavioral Medicine Institute, we believe that an entire team consisting of neurologists, psychiatrists, psychologists, and often very refined modern laboratory tests, are necessary to help us unravel the puzzles of the mind. Let us help you to understand the troubles you might be having with memory or behavior, and if you have Alzheimer's Disease, let us help you to cope with it and try to reverse some of its problems.

AT the Behavioral Medicine Institute, WE TAKE THE TIME TO LISTEN.

Second Congregational Church

Elevator Dedication — is June 30. After years of deliberation and months of planning and construction, we will dedicate the elevator on June 30 at 11 a.m. We want to be sure that everyone can take part in this joyous conclusion of a major project. We're offering transportation to and from the church for any Cohasset resident. Just call the church office: if no one is there, please leave a message on the answering machine. We hope to see you on June 30!

Home Needed — A former Cohasset family who has returned to seek medical treatment in Boston needs a house or apartment. If you know of one (at least two bedrooms), please call Claudia Story, 383-6976.

In the Family — Our sympathy is extended to the family of Carleton Day, who died on June 14 after a long illness. A memorial service was held in the church on June 18. Caroline Williams has moved to Connecticut, her address is: Mediplex of Westport, 1 Burr Rd., Westport, Connecticut, 06880.

After the Beep — We have installed a telephone answering machine in the church office (383-0345). If you know someone in need of pastoral services, please leave a message or call at home (383-6697) between 5:30 and 7 p.m. (or a.m. for that matter).

Message Copies — "I do! I do! We're glad we did!" - Copies of the joint message by John and Mary Benbow (June 16) will be available June 23. Copies will also be mailed if you request them.

Quincy Crisis Center Thanks You — The recent offerings of clothing and food were gratefully received by Mrs. Esther Sanger. She also sent along an invitation to church members to attend the Center's fifth anniversary celebration, at 2 p.m. on June 30 at Quincy City Hall.

New ministry . . .

in friendship, love and mutual respect. That his ministry will not just be the fulfillment of an office," he said.

Rev. Reed talked of the varieties of leadership, and hoped that Rev. Cutler's leadership at St. Stephen's would be "a friendship - to go forth with enduring spirit and be a fruitful friendship."

He noted, "Cliff works well with people. He is an inclusive person, an inviting person. He has great organizational skills. These are some of the many gifts of grace he brings to you.

"But help Cliff say no sometimes. That is not always easy. Tell him your feelings, your dreams for this church and the community," Rev. Reed advised. "Define your ministry and mission for this church clearly and work out a plan of action together. If you don't take risk, you will never know the fruits of failure. God will support you and your church."

Following the sermon, it was Rev. Cutler's turn to address his new congregation. After working with the people of St. Stephen's for the past months, he observed, "It is clear to me that the people here are very gifted, and that my call is real. The Bishop said to trust your feelings. I've been here four months, and it continues to feel right. I am glad to be here with you to share God's love. May the peace of the Lord be always with you."

Bishop Coburn noted that the people of St. Stephen's have worked with their new Rector "with vitality and commitment to Christ these past months." He observed that the installation of the new ministry, marks "a new chapter for all who belong here. God bless you."

With the conclusion of the Ministry of the Word, members of the congregation and community presented the new Rector with welcoming gifts.

A Bible was presented by members of St. Stephen's Bible Study Group and Water was given by the Rt. Rev. John Coburn. A stole was presented by the lay readers of St. Stephen's and a Book of Prayers was given to the Rector from the combined clergy in the Town of Cohasset.

Town Counsel Richard Henderson gave Rev. Cutler the keys to the church and the Constitution and Canons of the Church were presented by the Rev. Joseph A. Pelham, Executive Director, Episcopal City Mission, and the Rev. Robert E. Merry, who served St. Stephen's during part of the interim between the former and present rectors.

Bread and wine were given by the representatives of the Altar Guild and Chalice Bearers of St. Stephen's.

around town

☐ There was a case of incomplete and/or incorrect reporting in last week's Around Town, concerning the Kennedy family anniversary...first of all, it was the 25th not the 20th as written. It did take place on Stevens Lane, and the Kennedy's children, Ben and Joycelyn did host the gala event. There were 50 local friends and family present, and another nifty idea was present too. For all of the family and friends that could not be there, there was a book compiled for the Kennedys. It was full of messages and cards from throughout the country. Everyone was heard from one way or the other!! Mary and Don had a grand time as they mingled with their guests, renewing friendships and reminiscing about old times. Happy 25th!

☐ Wasn't it nice to see the town meeting begin when it was suppose to, and all in one night, thanks to the new quorum rules....

☐ Congratulations are in order for CHS student Kathi McGuire, whose artwork will be on display in the office of Senator William Golden. Kathi's black and white photograph of Cohasset Harbor was chosen for the State House exhibit.

☐ Robin Suhrbier certainly deserves the beautiful mirror that the PSO presented her as a thank you for her work as president of the organization...a hard working gal that surely works for what she believes in!

☐ Saw Marie Price on Sandy Beach last week, says she is still feeling better every day and will soon be as good as new. She sure has gotten a great lift out of all her students being so thoughtful...

☐ The Social Service League held its annual meeting recently, and they elected new officers for the coming year. President is Virginia Riley, vice president is Ann Hublitz, secretary is Jane Porter treasurer is Virginia Thomson and Jane Bell is assistant treasurer. The Social Service League office is open daily, and can help Cohasset residents with medical and social services.

☐ Congratulations to the newlyweds, Scott and Nannette Fone and every wish for a long and happy life together.

☐ Lots of smiles "around town" this weekend, as school books are put away for another year! There are a lot of activities that the town has lined up for those with "nothing to do," watch the recreation department for news or give them a call.

☐ As this is being written, the town is almost back to normal...that is, the Log and Line is almost finished! Many "townies" were going crazy, so it was opened for them before it was even finished, and the coffee and muffins started going faster than ever. The building itself will probably be done as this goes to press, and it sure looks wonderful. Now everything can be back to the way people of Cohasset like it most.

☐ Bob Shultz is having a grand time with his role at Boys State. We're hoping for a full report upon his return, as you know it will be an interesting one. Bobby is always involved with whatever he does to the maximum, he'll have a good story to tell.

☐ Sandy Beach is really looking fine this year, as it officially opened this weekend. If you haven't gotten a sticker yet, hurry to do so. There wasn't any wait at all last week, and the gals in charge make it an easy job to do.

☐ The Historical Society is opening its two museums again this summer, they are open each afternoon from 1:30 to 4:30 every day but Monday. Admission is 75 cents for each building for adults, 25 cents for children. The Capt. John Wilson House and the Maritime Museum are both representative of old homes in Cohasset, and the seafaring past of Cohasset. Extremely interesting! Groups can receive a guided tour by calling the Historical Society.

☐ Patrick Broderick, son of Mr. and Mrs. William E. Broderick, 20 Buttonwood Lane, was among the 577 State University of New York Maritime College cadets who arrived at Hamburg, Germany aboard the training ship, Empire State. The ship will stop in Spain and Italy and arrive back in New York on July 16.

☐ Eirik Charles Anderson and Kate Anna Collins, both of Cohasset, graduated recently from Lawrence Academy, an independent secondary school at Groton, Massachusetts.

Eirik is the son of Mr. and Mrs. A. Daniel Anderson of Cohasset. He will attend Tulane University. Kate, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Warren E. Collins III of Cohasset, plans to attend Rockford College.

☐ Patrick Duffy of Fairoaks Lane and Stephen Winn of North Main Street graduated May 18 from Worcester Polytechnic Institute. Duffy received a BS with distinction in electronic engineering. Winn also received a BS in electrical engineering.

☐ Nancy Fernald, of Cohasset, received an Associate of Science degree in medical record technology from Laboure College. Graduation took place May 11.

☐ Kimberly J. Ferreira, of 295 Beechwood St., was awarded the degree of Bachelor of Science in business administration at the June 9 commencement exercises of Suffolk University held at the Wang Center, 270 Tremont St., Boston.

Ferreira is a 1981 graduate of CHS and is the daughter of Robert and Arlene Ferreira.

☐ Susan T. Lowrey, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Lowery, was awarded a Bachelor of Science in education degree from Lesley College, Cambridge.

Lowrey, a graduate of Sycamore High School, majored in early childhood education/special needs at Lesley.

☐ That's the news from here this week...keep it coming, everyone loves to hear it.

Committee told need for extra teacher

could be very deletorious," he stated.

Crafts also warned the future sixth graders "are not ready for the environment of the high school" the following year.

"These kids are falling behind now. You must address it now, or in the future with special needs," Crafts noted.

Committee Chairman Joseph Nedrow reiterated that any data he's reviewed has never indicated class sizes help develop a student's maturity level. He has long maintained the best way to assist these and other students is through a crisis intervention counselor for the elementary schools. That proposal was eliminated from the 1985-86 budget because of insufficient funds.

"We've tried to find the numbers," he said, explaining the annual budget review," but our problem is that budget. We've just spent a half-hour with a teacher who's been rif'ed (laid off) and that is going to be the situation at the high school. We've got to look at what's best for the school. Look at some of the texts we're using. I would rather spend $24,000 on texts than on lowering the class ratio in the sixth grade.

"Any suggestions where we take the money from?" he asked the parents.

One parent suggested an alternative may be to take the extra teacher hired this year for the fifth grade and place that position into the sixth grade staff. Based on the most recent student population projections for next year, Supt. Eugene Crowell said a fourth teacher added to the class would create a low student/teacher ratio of 18.3/1, or three units of 25 students. The sixth grade for next year is predicted at 80 students. The upcoming fifth grade will have about 82 students. "You have your guns pointed in the wrong direction," he commented, referring to the suggestion to eliminate one fifth grade teacher next year.

Linda Campbell, who is a parent of an upcoming sixth grader, urged the committee to consider another teacher for the class. Saying a counselor would not ease the problem, Campbell, who is a teacher, said the most successful method is adding another instructor and giving more individualized attention to the students who are in need.

Committee member Kornet explained that even if there were 82 sixth grade students next year, the highest number of students per class would be about 27. Some classes in the high school have 29 and 30 students.

"If you are trying to justify taking a teacher away from the fifth grade so the sixth grade will have 18 students per class, then there will be a real stigma attached to those kids. This is the type of numbers we fight for in kindergarten classes," she stated.

Fifth grade teacher Joanne Magoun read a brief letter from faculty members who have expressed concern over this class. In order to deal with their social problems and academic weaknesses, the faculty supports the parents' request, she said.

"I don't know if numbers is the issue, Magoun said. "I think it's the type of kids we are dealing with. A lot of the bright and average students in this class suffer because of the continual need to address the other students."

Crowell said although test scores indicate the added fifth grade teacher probably helped them the past year, the class size is predicted to drop a bit by next year. A class of 18 students is considered extremely low in any public or private school system, he suggested.

He further explained that for the committee to go back to the advisory committee and request $18,000 for an additional teacher, without knowing the results of the contract settlement, is an impossible task. That is especially true, Crowell added, when one considers that several programs, including the gifted and talented program, have been eliminated or decreased, and other staff requests have been denied, such as the crisis intervention counselor.

Karin Bartow of Sohier Street worried that the the teachers' educational concerns were not fully addressed during budget time, "and the problems of academic, emotional and social concerns were swept by the wayside."

Parent Don DiMichele noted that "statistics are not important, but what is the best way to deploy our teachers to meet the needs of the class."

Chairman Nedrow emphasized to the parents that an additional teacher may not be a viable alternative. "To whatever degree this contract is settled, we are going to come out with less teachers. We might be in a worse situation than before," he said.

Member Kornet warned the parents that fighting for lower than average class sizes, "is casting quite an aura about this class."

Campbell explained that the reason for the students' problems are related to "the make-up of these kids. They are upset because of the history associated with their class. They don't need counseling, but more individualized attention," she said.

Committee member Richard Conley chastized the parents for failing to attend the numerous budget sessions, when the committee was forced to prioritize budget requests. "We fought your battles for your teachers. I recognize your problem, but my view is these children can be adequately taught with three teachers. I understand the emotions. But the kids in this building (high school) went through a far worse emotional upset this year."

Deer Hill Principal Ken Ekberg said his priority would be to hire an intervention counselor for the entire school. He's confident the three sixth grade instructors, Mrs. Cisneros, Mr. Becker and Mr. Schultz can deal with any problems associated with the sixth grade.

The committee agreed any decision on the request can not be rendered until the student population figures are confirmed by the end of summer.

It was noted at the conclusion of the meeting, that there are currently 43 boys, compared to 32 girls in that class. Boys at that age are characterized as being less mature than females.

Try to name horse

The newest member of the Plymouth County Sheriff's Department, a foal or baby horse, remains nameless and Sheriff Peter Y. Flynn is looking for help from county children between the ages of seven and 12 in naming her.

"Her mother, 'Gypsy,' is my favorite mount in the Sheriff's Mounted Tactical Division (MTD) to ride," said Flynn. "As they say, both mother and daughter are doing fine. But, I am sure that they both would like to see her get a name."

All children between the ages of seven to 12 and who live in Plymouth County are eligible to enter except children of employees of the Sheriff's Department. Send one entry name per envelope; there is no limit to entries. The winner will be chosen on the basis of originality and relevance to the foal's future role in the MTD by an equestrian expert who is not part of the Sheriff's Department. The contest closing date is July 17. Send entries to: It's a Girl, Sheriff's Department, Obery Heights, Plymouth, MA 02360.

A 'stigma'

The parents have long held this belief. There is a 'stigma' attached to the students who have just graduated from the fifth grade.

Time and again, they have approached the school committee and publically related how emotionally, academically, and socially immature some of these kids are.

Once again, in the name of their children, they have asked the school committee to find a way to help these kids. No, they don't need counseling, they say. They need smaller classes which produce greater individualized attention.

If these kids are not helped, there's a good chance they will turn to drugs and alcohol later, one parent stated to the committee Monday night.

We agree with one committee member who noted "this may be a case of self-fulfilled prophecy."

The more these parents pronounce the problems associated with these kids, the more these kids are going to follow that label. "Well, my parents think I'm mixed up and need attention, so I guess that's how I am," is how we envision the kids' reaction to this latest parental demand.

Did anyone ever ask these kids how they feel? How do they like school? What do they like about school? Do they like their teachers?

Do they like their parents telling the entire community they have problems?

It looks as if an additional teacher may not be a financially possible solution. Why should this class be divided into 18 students per unit, when kindergarteners are being introduced to school with class sizes of 27? Where's the justification?

Let's forget this 'stigma' stuff. Rather than prattling on about their maturity level, let's think of viable alternatives.

Parents could work with the the teachers and students on various projects and trips. Perhaps Mike Gill could help start up a program designed specifically for this class, inviting parental participation.

This is an active group of concerned parents if there has ever been one. We think they are all well-meaning, but off track. Redirect your complaints into meaningful, productive alternatives.

And let's make a promise to each other never to mention a 'stigma' again.

Correction

We goofed on the credits for the Deer Hill School Olympic Day photographs.

Our staff photographer, super Carol McCann, took those great shots, not the equally great Rose Cundari.

Sorry about that Carol! Hope you continue to find some terrific scenes of Cohasset this summer.

And that's when life begins

By Claire McDonough

"I think I've finally located the woman who has plagued me all my adult life," I told the Dragon.

He looked up, surprised. "You mean . . ."

I nodded. "Everyone Else's Mother. You remember her? She's the one who used to let her kids watch the Late Show? When they were in first grade?"

"I sure do," the Dragon replied. "She never made her kids brush their teeth, and she let them have hot fudge sundaes for breakfast. If I remember correctly, she also told them they should be able to decide for themselves whether they should do homework."

"That's the one," I agreed. "Everyone Else's Mother was very understanding. She told her kids she didn't mind a bit if they aspired to a career as panhandlers in Times Square, and if her youngsters got in trouble at school she rushed up and told those teachers they had no right imposing their values on her darlings.

"Unlike a certain other mother our children knew who made them walk the time they were kicked off the school bus and wouldn't write a note saying they couldn't do detention."

"How about Everyone Else's Father," the Dragon asked, "did you find him, too?"

"I sure did," I assured him. "I think he's married to Everyone Else's Mother, and they have the happiest kids in the world."

The Dragon shook his head.

"I'll never forget the time that guy told his sons there was no reason they should have to come home from a hard day of school and soccer and take out the trash. He was happy to do it himself after thirteen hours of work because he understood that his sons needed to save their energy for really important things."

"I remember that," I said. "It was about the same time his wife used to go to the driveway on winter mornings and shovel their son's car out, then start the engine so it'd warm up while he was having breakfast.

"Everyone Else's Mother wanted her son to be rested for gym. When she found out he never went to gym, she thought it was a wonderful joke."

The Dragon nooded. "And "Everyone's Else's Father" bought all his kids cars and let them drive when they were fourteen years old because he knew how archaic our laws are."

"Everyone Else's Mother was even more understanding," I told him. "When she and her son had a philosophical difference about acceptable noise levels for stereos, she got him his own apartment."

"They certainly are remarkable parents," the Dragon agreed. "Where did you find them?"

"I'm not absolutely positive," I replied, "but I think they're doing radio and t.v. commercials.

"I mean, who but Everyone Else's Father would have a son ask, 'Dad, where's a good place to buy a diamond ring?' and respond by telling him about some place that takes you into a private room and explains cut and color of gems?

"Wouldn't every father we know wave his arms and yell 'What do you mean, buy a diamond? You can't afford a diamond. You haven't even paid off your student loan yet. And anyway, have you discussed this with your mother? Who are you buying this diamond for? Is there something you haven't told us?'"

"Sounds like the same guy to me," the Dragon said. "How about Everyone Else's Mother?"

I snorted derisively. "Who else smiles fondly at her son when he asks if A-L-L will take purple paint off the puppy? Or shrugs her shoulders and grins when a dog, two cats, and seventeen kids rush across her freshly waxed floor?

"The announcer says it's because she drinks extra milk, but I'd pay a lot to know what she puts in it."

Skip, who had wearied of our conversation, turned on the television. Hordes of beautifully tanned individuals who looked about thirteen years old were frolicing on a beach.

"See," Skip exclaimed, "Everyone Else's Parents let their kids thumb to Hawaii so they can major in surfing."

protection plan for the town of Cohasset. He is taking a six month leave of absence from the committee to take this trip. Committee member Tom Cook will be the acting chairman.

"It's bad to leave any project in the middle," he said. "This is a career move for me. I have regrets, but there is no hesitation on my part. The rest of the Committee is extremely capable. No one person should ever dominate a committee or a board.

"One of the unique things about our Committee is that it is a hybrid of various town committees," he continued. "It contains representatives from every board who know what is going on with their boards, and can discuss our actions with them. It's funny that I'm the chair because I've been here the shortest amount of time."

Bettinger became involved with town politics when he ran for Water Commissioner a year ago.

"What you have to do when you go anywhere is start to work your way in," he said. "When I ran for office, people didn't know me or what to expect from me. We feel very accepted here."

Bettinger doesn't know if he'll run again.

"The most important thing I'm working on around town now is the Watershed Protection Area plan," he said. "When that's done I'll look around and see. It wouldn't be bad to have free time."

"A lot of people have the idea that they can't just come in and be involved," Nancy, Jeff's wife, said. "People sometimes overemphasize that."

Nancy is remaining in Cohasset with their three-legged watch dog during Jeff's absence.

"I work," she said. "The job ends soon, and I'm in the process of finding a new job. I couldn't work in Bintulu since it's an Islamic area. It would probably be hard to get a position for only 6 months anyway."

Nancy does not want to let the chance to visit another part of the world slip entirely through her fingers, however.

"I'm still hoping to take a leave at the end of Jeff's stint there," she said. "I'd love to see it, but I don't want to stay for 6 months. It's hot there, and women can't go out without their shoulders covered. Shorts can only be worn inside the home. Jeff's company would probably not be wild about me going off on my own. There wouldn't be enough to keep me busy for 6 months."

"The only negative things about the trip are that I have to separate from Nancy for 6 months, and the bugs," Jeff said. "I'll probably develop some type of mutual coexistence with the bugs."

A great story

To the Editor:

You have written such a wonderful article about chiropractic, that I wanted to tell you how pleased I am. I have read many pro-chiropractic articles but seldom one as well said as yours in the Mariner.

You chiropractor is very blessed to have a patient and supporter like yourself. Please do continue to communicate that which you have learned so well about chiropractic.

Please feel free to stop by anytime as we would very much like to meet you.

Yours in Health,
Richard Lewis, D.C.

Coast Guard fund help

The House of Representatives recently gave the U.S. Coast Guard an important helping hand when it approved an amendment proposed by Congressman Gerry E. Studds (D-MA) to make an additional $15 million available to the service during the remainder of this fiscal year and in 1986.

Rep. Studds, who is Chairman of the House Subcommittee on Coast Guard and Navigation, was able to gain broad support for the amendment by pointing out that the funds requested would not come from the general treasury, but instead from a special fund financed by recreational boaters, and intended by federal law to be used to help pay the operating expenses of the Coast Guard.

The fund, which was established in its present form by legislation Studds sponsored last year, consists of money derived from that part of the federal tax on gasoline that is attributable to the purchase of motorboat fuel. Studds' amendment was needed to make $15 million of the amount derived from this tax available for expenditure by the Coast Guard.

These are the eighth and ninth grade students at the Capitol steps during their April trip to Washington, D.C.

Students work together to honor two friends

Although they would claim they are very ordinary, the eighth graders this year have accomplished some very special things.

Their young lives were touched by tragedy this past winter when schoolmates Desiree Yess and Seanna O'Leary were killed in an automobile accident.

Nothing has been the same for these students who mourned the deaths along with their parents and friends. But from sorrow, thoughtfulness and compassion have arisen.

In April, several of the eighth and a couple of ninth graders traveled to Washington, D.C. with their teachers Mr. Magneson and Mr. Bouchard. It was an eventful three-day trip in which the students learned much and had great fun.

They visited the Capital and even had their photo taken on the steps of this national institution. They were later presented with the flag that flew over that huge domed building on April 12. Congressman Studds made the presentation possible.

According to Mageneson and student Susie Lean, the students then thought it appropriate to donate the flag to their school. And what could be more fitting than to dedicate it to the memory of their beloved friends, Seanna and Desiree.

In a simple ceremony June 18, the students gathered in front of their school, along with teachers and administrators. With Seanna and Desiree's parents in attendance, they raised the flag that will remain atop the pole located at the entrance to the school.

Without fanfare or notoriety, the students bought a tree from their class fund and dedicated that in honor of their two friends. The birch tree is located near the school's west wing entrance.

Supt. Eugene Crowell observed that during the summer, a bench will be constructed around the small tree. In years to come, students and visitors will be able to rest under the shade of the tall birch.

Desiree's father, James, was so moved by the students' actions, he wrote a letter to the superintendent. Within the note he thanked the students and teachers for their continued kindness and thoughtfulness. He expressed his gratitude for honoring his daughter in such a special manner.

But the students have not stopped their efforts there.

Last Saturday, Seanna and Desiree's classmates held what was probably the most successful car wash in the school's history.

For six hours that day, many of the eighth graders participated in a car wash at the South Shore Bank. As Susie noted, "maybe it was because most people knew the cause, and even if they didn't know the two girls, they were willing to help."

According to the 13 year-old student, half of the $460 made from the car wash will be given to the scholarship at Massasoit Community College in Desiree's name. The other half will be sent in Seanna's memory to the Intensive Care Unit at Children's Hospital in Boston.

The most successful car wash in CHS history was also a lot of fun, too, for the eighth and tenth graders last week. Proceeds went to two memorial scholarship funds.
(Sarah Lewis)

Among the students who helped wash cars during last week's fundraiser were the following eighth graders: Susie Lean, Diana Kornet, Allison Riley, Katie Horn, Jeff Bryant, Megan Terry, Allie Redfield, Amy Lincoln, Yvonne Keller, Paul Froio, Chris Froio, Adam Hill, Matt Buckley, Jonathan Holand, and Condy Dormer.

Also, Felicia Bartow, Katie Ryan, Katie Murphey, Jennifer Lagroterria, Eileen O'Connor, Sacha Manton, Mike Suhrbier, Krista Kuhn, Beth Collins, Erin Hunt, Kim Dwyer, Mike Figueiredo, Nancy Riley, Katie Lord, and Alexis Bowen. Also, two sophomores, Bill Lean and Liam Stanford.

Report from the State House

Recently there has been an emergence of a very important issue — organ transplant operations. Everyday we read and hear more about a life that has been saved by the gift of another's organ. Jamie Fisk and Shaun Harrington are among the most publicized cases. However, there are still many others in need who have not received the same attention.

As the success rate increases, transplant operations are becoming more common. According to most reports, the success rate for heart, liver and kidney transplants is now between 70 and 85 percent. Unfortunately, however, out of the 20,000 potential donors in the U.S. every year, only 15 percent of them donate their organs.

But this can change through more education and information being made available to the general public. Media outlets — T.V., newspapers, magazines — medical organizations and government are all joining together in an effort to increase organ availabilty.

On the national level, President Reagan signed into law the Organ Procurement and Transplantation Act. It calls for the establishment of a national computerized network, to keep a record of available donors and those in need. Congress has appropriated $2 million to fund this network, which will soon be in place.

Television shows are also educating people about the facts and myths surrounding transplants. Fears about organs being removed from people who are still alive and visions of disfigurement are quickly vanishing. Programs are teaching people that all operations are carried out by doctors in a sterile and surgical procedure with the utmost care and respect for the deceased persons body.

What we are pursuing here is a second chance — a chance for the terminally ill patient to live, and a chance for others to give the ultimate gift after their death — the gift of life.

Organ donor cards are available through the Registry of Motor Vehicles and the New England Organ Bank.

Policy discussion

School committee member Richard Conley commented it's not often he is in disagreement with his fellow members, but Monday night was his turn to set off some sparks.

Before the committee approved any extra duty positions, he asked that the members first review its philosophy regarding senior varsity team members. Conley requested that any athletic coach be denied permission to cut a senior varsity team member from the squad. Saying the senior has earned his or her place on the team, Conley said it was not fair to the student to be cut his last year in favor of "an up and coming" younger student.

"There's no where else for this senior to go, if he's cut from the varsity squad. After playing varsity, he can't go down to junior varsity," he stated. "He deserves a place on that team."

In association with this request, Conley made a separate suggestion "that any student involved in drugs or alcohol will be suspended from an athletic team."

Conley continued, "I know this is a harsh statement, but after talking with my family about this, there was zero opposition to what I planned to say. I would like the committee to adopt that philosophy."

Regarding the senior athletic proposal, Chairman Joseph Nedrow said it is the responsibility of each coach to field the best team, regardless of whom he cuts. It is the prerogative of coach of determine who should play.

And in reference to the drug philosophy, Nedrow said that would be a difficult matter to enforce. How could the schools render a sudden and inflexible decision, before the courts make a final determination to prosecute the student? he questioned.

"I have a problem with any absolute policies," he added. "And athletics may the only thing keeping a student in school." He noted that individual situations must be taken into account, and not the implementation of a broad-based policy or philosophy.

"How about if we suspend someone and the courts then find him not guilty?" Nedrow asked.

Athletic Director Clark Chatterton cited a situation which ocurred this spring when six high school students were arrested for transporting alcohol. What would have happened if the schools suspended them from athletic teams, when the courts later dismissed the case? he querried.

Regarding the senior athletic team members, Conley urged the membcrs to consider a change in philosophy.

But one parent stated she was strongly against such a policy. "We encourage each student to do the best they can. You should not be able to get something just because you're a senior. The coach is trying to provide the best team, and that might mean putting someone younger on the team, she stated"

Principal Richard Streeter said the coaches have a general understanding that they will try not to cut seniors from the varsity team.

"A senior student is devastated when he is cut from a team," Conley observed.

In other business Monday night, the committee approved a five and one-half percent increase in the new one-year contract for administration and secretaries.

These are the new salaries for the school administrators: John Creamer - $41,489; Gino DiGirolamo - $42,082; Kenneth Ekberg - $42,675; John Leary - $40,303; Richard Streeter - $46,823.

Vo-tech grads

Ninety percent of the Massachusetts 1984 Vocational School graduates either found jobs or continued their education, according to a survey released today by the state Department of Education. The report, which surveyed 9,619 graduates in 58 vocational schools with 68 different programs also showed that 61 percent found jobs in their specialty, 12 percent found jobs unrelated to their field, 12 percent were enrolled in postsecondary education and five percent joined the military.

The schools surveyed included regional vocational high schools, city and town vocational high schools and comprehensive high schools with at least five state approved vocational programs.

The report explained that the 27 regional vocational high schools had the most success in placing their students in jobs relating to their training (65 percent) while comprehensive high schools had the lowest percent of students in that category (48 percent). However, comprehensive high schools encouraged the largest percentage of their graduates to attend postsecondary education programs (22 percent) with the regional vocational schools having only 10 percent of their graduates continuing their education.

In a detailed analysis of placement rates by vocational programs, the report showed that the traditional trades had the highest percentage of graduates who found jobs in their specialties (63 percent). In other job categories, business occupations placed 61 percent of the students, agriculture 60 percent, health and homemaking occupations 55 percent, respectively, and 47 percent in the technical occupations.

State announces more P&B buses

State Transportation Secretary Frederick P. Salvucci announced that Plymouth & Brockton bus company customers will soon be riding in seven brand new buses, thanks to a state program which will allow the company to lease the vehicles from the state at low rates. The vehicles, valued at $1.2 million, will be delivered in September.

The award was made under the state Intercity Bus Capital Assistance Program (IBCAP), through which the state purchases new coach buses and then leases them to private carriers at savings up to $1,000 a month for each vehicle.

"Sen. William Golden and Rep. Frank Hynes deserve credit for their support of the IBCAP program and the benefits that will be provided through P&B for commuters," Salvucci said. "The Plymouth and Brockton bus company provides an important service to commuters throughout the South Shore and Cape Cod. This award will allow them to upgrade service in a relatively low-cost way."

"The IBCAP program is part of Governor Dukakis' overall plan to improve Mass. transportation options and reduce highway congestion all over the state," he added.

Salvucci said that six of the 28 vehicles being awarded are equipped with wheelchair lifts. The P&B award includes one of the lift-equipped buses.

"This is the first time anywhere in the nation that this type of bus will be accessible to special needs riders," he said. "If the lifts prove successful, we will install them in the remaining 22 buses."

Salvucci added that the state would end up fully repaid for the $5 million in program funding.

"After a lease period of seven years, the buses will be sold at auction," he explained. "The lease payments on the vehicles plus the money received from their sale will completely cover program costs."

P&B provides transportation from the South Shore, Plymouth and Cape Cod to Boston.

Greek festival

Underneath a large yellow and white stiped tent the rich aroma of skewered lamb and fresh pastry mingles with the strumming sound of a Greek dance band. A long line of dancers snake their way past rows of banquet tables where families sit and talk over plates of pastitsio and glasses and ouzo and wine.

It is the Transfiguration's fourth Greek Festival, one of several festivals held by Greek Orthodox Churches across the Commonwealth this summer. The festival, sometimes called a "Taverna" (Greek for tavern), is an excellent opportunity for Greeks and non-Greeks alike to sample traditional Greek foods while being entertained by dancing, music and special cultural activities organized by the Church.

Despite some attrition in membership, the Greek Orthodox Church enjoys a tightly knit relationship with its members. According to Mary Sofis, a member of the Panagia Greek Orthodox Church in Cohasset, "Every time a group of Greek people has moved somewhere, they've started a church. The church is the place you can be yourself."

In addition to reaffirming ethnic traditions and introducing the delights of these traditions to non-Greek participants, the festivals are also an extremely effective way for the church to raise money. According to Peter Cavoures, financial manager of the Transfiguration's festival, the 1985 festival netted an estimated $60,000.

If that seems like a lot of money for a three-day festival, it is important to remember the staggering amount of work involved in a festival of this size. "It takes 18 months to prepare and six months to recover," explains Cavoures, saying that this is why churches don't hold festivals every year.

Festivals traditionally bring in outside talent in the form of professional dance groups who perform Greek dances and bands that play a variety of traditional Greek music. (Note: non-professionals are encouraged to join in the dancing as well!).

But the highlight of the Taverna is — without question — the food. People whose only exposure to Greek food consists of Greek salad and Baklava, will find an enticing selection of traditional dishes such as Kefthedes (Greek meatballs), Dolmades (stuffed grape leaves) and Spanakopita (spinach pie). Pastries, baked fresh by church volunteers — many of whom learned to cook from mothers and grandmothers — include Loukoumades (honey puffs), Koulourakia (braided cookie) and Copenhai (nut layer cake).

"It's natural for Greeks to be interested in food," explains Sofis, whose husband Ernie is the food chairman for the "Taverna" at the Panagia Church in Cohasset on July 4-7. "It's the thing they do best and can offer the public. Women, over generations, have learned to cook and the festival taps into that talent."

Another talent that has traditionally belonged to Greek women is their ability to sew and make quilts. The Agora, or boutique — an important and lucrative part of the festival — features handmade aprons, pillows and quilts as well as imported Greek articles like fisherman caps and string bags.

The largest festival coming up this summer is at the Panagia Greek Orthodox Church, 817 Jerusalem Rd. at Rte. 228. The festival will be held July 4-7 from noon to 9 p.m. There will be professional Greek dancers, a Greek orchestra, and Greek music — both live and mixed by a disc jockey. There will be a bar or taverna, and a boutique with imported Greek goods. Everyone is welcome.

Glen Hochkeppel

Cohasset High School Senior Glen Hochkeppel, 17, will be featured in Side by Side by Sondheim at Christo's II Dinner Theatre in Brockton July 5, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12 and 14.

Musical director for the show will be Caroline Curtis, organist and choir director at Cohasset's First Parish Church on the Common.

Glen has sung and acted in two all-school musicals, Godspell and Snoopy and also appeared with Curtain Call Theatre in Braintee in 1776, where critics reported he moved the audience to tears with his rendition of Mama, Look Sharp, a young soldier's song.

Curtis has been musical director of three other Christo's shows as well as numerous shows for Curtain Call Theatre, the Duxbury Bay Players and other area theatres.

In Side by Side, eight performers sing, dance and act their way through songs from such Stephen Sondheim shows as Gypsy, West Side Story, A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum, Follies and A Little Night Music.

It is a sophisticated, humorous entertainment woven together by narrated snippets from the composer's career. The narrator is Adele Pevzner of Duxbury.

This is the fifth year dinner theatre has been offered at Christo's II. For most performances, cocktails are served starting at 6:30 p.m., dinner is at 7:30 p.m. and the curtain goes up at 9 p.m.

On Sundays, all times are half hour earlier. Tickets for dinner and show are $16.95. Please call 588-4202 for reservation information.

Science activities

The South Shore Natural Science Center invites you to pass 'Through the Garden Gate' to visit seven colorful and varied gardens in the towns of Cohasset, Scituate, Norwell and Hanover, Wednesday, July 17 from 9:30 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Follow the arrows along the garden trail to:

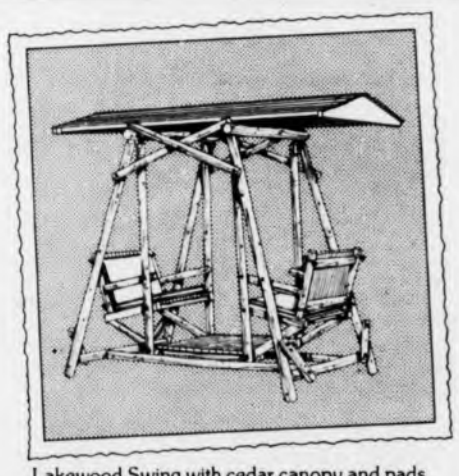
The Oaks, in Cohasset — formerly the home of Mrs. Jessie Cox this nine acre estate contains the roses and rare trees planted by Mrs. Cox. Massive plantings of impatiens, begonias, geraniums and coleus produce a riot of summer color. Now owned and maintained by Yankee Companies, Inc.

The Garden of Dr. and Mrs. Ronald H. Goldenson, Scituate — done in the style of a French chateau, raised rectangular beds full of delphiniums, campanulas, day lilies and bachelor's buttons surround a copper lined pool which contains a fountain. White roses line the fences and a stone wall is bordered by raised beds of dahlias.

The Garden of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley H. Richards, Jr., of Norwell — partially cultivated, this 20 acre estate of woods and fields creates a feeling of 'days gone by.' Woolly sheep add to the charm of the working farm. Unusual trees are the focal points in this rural setting — Espalier Apple, Umbrella Pine, Mimosa. Two large vegetable gardens are boarded by a Golden Rain Tree and a Franklinia (named for Ben Franklin)

Herb Garden and Grounds of the South Shore Natural Science Center, Norwell — Pause here for a light lunch and browse in the Gift Shop that features items relating to or reflecting the beauty of nature. We invite you to return another day to walk the marked trails on the 27 acres of land.

The Garden of Mr. and Mrs. L. Bruce Mahler, Hanover — the Mahlers have turned a treeless pasture into large flowerbeds of perennials and a jungle of wild roses into a bountiful vegetable garden. Honeysuckle, roses and clematis adorn fences. Over 70 varieties of day lilies and a field of wildflowers delight the senses.



The Garden of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Nava, Hanover — a series of grassy foot paths and garden sections harmonize in color and shape to form a medieval-type maze. Perennials, herbs, flowering shrubs and trees form picturesque compositions. This is a garden of unique design and charm.

The Garden of Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Morgan, Norwell — Rich colors of perennials and annuals, all started from seed, accent a cobblestone patio and stone walls. Roses line the drive to a 'nursery' of saplings. Of particular interest to vegetable growers is his picture-perfect raised vegetable garden. Tulip trees, a giant poplar, pine and hemlock add variety and interest.

An end to a ministry

A farewell service for Rev. Robert L. Campbell was held June 8, 1985 at 2 p.m. at the Beechwood Congregational Church, 53 Church St. Rev. Campbell is retiring after serving 20 years as pastor of the Beechwood Congregational Church.

When asked to serve as pastor, Rev. Campbell said he would try it for a few years and the few years turned into twenty. Rev. Campbell was the minister of the Beechwood Congregational Church for the longest period of time in the history of the Church.

Mrs. Ruth Dalbeck, organist, provided the music with soloist Bryan Marks singing, "Jesus Name of Wonderous Love" and "All My Life." Rev. John Benbow and Rev. Paul Sinn participated in the service.

E. Gardner Jones was guest speaker with the message "To Everything There is a Season." Mrs. May Merritt gave some reflections that Rev. Campbell has given to the Church and the Campbell family shared their feelings, thoughts and memories.

Moderator Francis Mitchell conferred the honor of Pastor Emeritus with Rev. Robert Campbell accepting. Robert Richardson presented Mr. Campbell with a gift from the Church and Supt. Mrs. Cheryl Kristiansen presented a gift to Mrs. Campbell from the Sunday School.

Following the benediction, the Congregation went outside for the presentation of a pink dogwood tree from the Campbell family. Elmer Stoddard, Trustee accepted this gift for the church.

A reception was held in the vestry following the presentation of the tree. Sandwiches, punch, coffee, cake and deserts were served.

Mr. Campbell was born in California, spent the first thirteen years of his childhood in Montana before returning to California. After graduating from University of Pacific, Stockton in 1949 he attended Boston University School of Theology. In 1955 he married Barbara Lockhart a fellow student he met while at Boston University .

During his early seminary years he served as assistant minister to the Haverhill Methodist Church for one year. The first Church he ministered to was the Green Mountain Parish in northern Vermont from 1950-1951. Mr. Campbell was also Youth Director of Mathewson Street Methodist Church in Providence and pastor of Cranston Street Church in Rhode Island for two years.

Following his ordination in 1954 he served as pastor of Hatherly Methodist in Rockland and Abington Methodist Church from 1954-1956. From 1956-1965 he served as pastor of Porter Methodist now known as United Methodist of East Weymouth. Rev. Campbell served the Beechwood Congregational Church from 1965-1985.

Rev. and Mrs. Campbell are the parents of four grown children, Nancy of East Granby, CT, Judy of PA, David of Needham and Steven of Weymouth.

Aside from being pastor of the Beechwood Church, Rev. Campbell has been a probation officer in the Quincy Court for the past 20 years. Rev. Campbell took over this position from Rev. William G. Sewell who was retiring from both the court House and the Beechwood Church.

Rev. and Mrs. Campbell, along with their two sons, are planning a vacation to Europe. When he returns, Mr. Campbell will visit his mother and family in California.

It has been our pleasure to have had Rev. Campbell and his famiy with us for twenty years. We will miss them but never forget them. He has enriched us spiritually, and generously shared with us his favorite psalms, songs, poems and scriptures.

Rev. Campbell loves God, life, family and friends. By his example, Rev. Campbell has shown us how to be true Christians.

Obituary

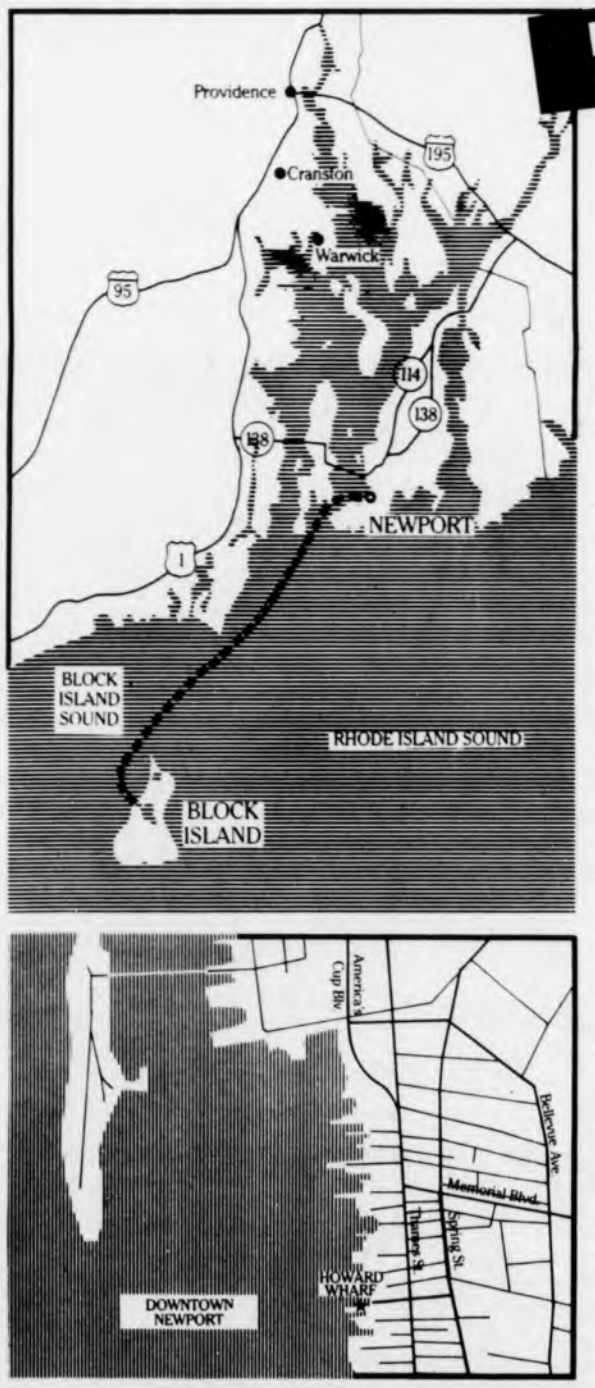
Elizabeth O. Tower

There will be a memorial service for Elizabeth O. Tower at the First Parish Meeting House in Cohasset Sunday, June 30 at 5 p.m.

Elizabeth Osgood (Collier) Tower died in Cohasset on May 26 after a long illness. She was born in Cohasset in 1888, was graduated from Cohasset High School and Radcliffe College, Class of 1910, and she had studied at the Harvard Graduate School of Education. Her specialty was teaching students with reading problems which she did in Boston and at her home in Cohasset.

She had been chairman of the U.S.O. in Cohasset during World War II, had served on the Cohasset School Committee, had been a founding member of the Cohasset Discussion Club, had been chairman of the 50th reunion of her college class, and active in alumni activities of Radcliffe College.

She was the widow of the late Gilbert S. Tower. She leaves a son, Osgood Tower, and a daughter, Frances Maroni, both of Fairfax County, Virginia, 10 grandchildren and 11 great-grandchildren. She also leaves her brother, Edmund Collier of Duxbury.



Relax away the tensions of the day.

Get ready for the July 4 'Grandaddy' of a parade

Much like the old saying "Every kid loves a parade," so too does the Town of Hingham.

There has been a 4th of July Parade in Hingham for as long as most residents can remember. "In 29 years I've never missed one," parade Co-Chairman June Lopaus reported.

The Town of Hingham was first settled in 1635. With 1985 being Hingham's 350th birthday year, the traditional parade should prove to be bigger and better than ever.

A committee of 17 has been planning the celebration event, chaired by Lopaus and Jerry Ruth. Police safety officer Leo Mahoney and Pete Nicola are coordinating the musical units and Tom Foster is float coordinator.

When the array of marching splendor steps off at 10 a.m., there will be all the ingredients parades are made of, including the fun things children will always remember.

"Old cars, fire engines, and people throwing candy," seven-year-old Alice Lee told us . Although Alice lives in Chestnut Hill, her mother Lucinda (Hopkins) Lee grew up in Hingham and returns annually to view the parade.

Leading the parade will be a street-wide banner made by students and staff at Notre Dame Academy, and carried by four of the girls.

Parade theme is "Hingham - 350 Years of History." Appropriately, the Grand Marshalls will be long-time Hingham residents, Dr. Wilmon and Katharine Brewer.

Dr. Brewer has lived in the town all his life and Mrs. Brewer has been a resident since 1921.

Dr. Brewer is a poet, lecturer and critic. He has written 16 books and last week his latest work, a two-volume autobiography titled Looking Backwards, came out.

"The Brewers have contributed a great deal to the town," Co-Chairperson Lopaus said. In 1922, they gave the Old Ordinary on Lincoln St. to the Hingham Historical Society.

Other Brewer contributions to Hingham have been Brewer Reservation, the More-Brewer Park, the Wilmon Brewer Fund for Hingham's public library, the Brewer Fund for the Old Ship Church, and a contribution to funds which purchased World's End.

Next in the line of march will be 13 past grand marshalls and their spouses riding in automobiles.

Members of all youth and adult organizations in town will participate, either as marchers or on floats. A total of 55 floats will move down the parade route which begins at the high school, goes down Middle and Main Streets, turns right on North Street, and ends at Station Street.

To avoid a tremendous traffic jam in the Station Street area, awards will be given out from the reviewing stand at 14 Main St. by the co-chairmen of the Fourth of July Committee and the chairman of the 350th Anniversary Committee, Robert Garvin. They will share the reviewing stand with town officials.

Senior citizens have agreed to use a reviewing stand in a shady spot at the intersection of Winter and Main Streets. Participants in the parade are urged to move smoothly through the Station Street parking lot.

This year's parade will not have awards based on categories, according to Lopaus. Five winning floats will come by the reviewing stand. One will have a banner showing that it is the best in the parade and the others will use horseshoe wreaths to show their placement.

The parade's committee will be handing out trophies, and the 350th committee will give out cash prizes totalling $1,000 in allotments of $500, $250, $150, $100 and $50.

The awards will be announced over a P.A. system. The short ceremonies, along with the rest of the parade, will be videotaped by the American Cablesystems of Mass., situated across the street from the stand.

The floats will be judged by true-life judges from Hingham. They are Judge Charles Black, Brockton District Court, Judge Geraldine Lombardo, Hingham District Court, and retired Massachusetts Superior Court Judge Paul Reardon. The parade should begin lining up by 8 a.m. and judging should begin at 8:30 a.m.

The parade, due to its huge size, is expected to last up to three hours.

It is important to note that no parking will be allowed on either side of Union Street during the holiday, so one of the biggest parades in Hingham's history won't have trouble assembling near the high school.

She said the floats are unusually large this year. Sixteen entries are more than 25 feet long. The Hingham Civic Music Theatre has registered the largest float. It is 55 feet long. And the Hingham Community Center is putting in two 40-foot floats.

A float entered by the newly formed Irish Heritage Committee will feature the names of Irish men and women who settled in Hingham prior to 1872.

One of the most unusual float themes to Lopaus is being created by Rogalski Associates, 128 South Pleasant St. It's called "Salute to Peter B. Bradley." Bradley, 1850-1933, was a Boston industrialist who ran the Hingham Stock Farm where he bred fine blood lines of Arabian horses. Appropriately, the float features a huge horse.

According to Lopaus's file, Bradley owned one of the first collections of Arabians in the country. He is known for helping to establish Arabians in the United States.

George Ela, Hingham's traditional Uncle Sam for four or five years, will again participate. There will be professional clowns, fire engines from the Hingham Museum of Fire Engines on Beal St., and fire equipment from surrounding towns.

Some of the nine musical units are Hingham High School Band, Sancians Drum and Bugle Corps of South Weymouth, Satuit Band from Scituate, Colonial Pipers, 26th Yankee Infantry Division Band, and the Middlesex County 4-H Fife and Drum Corps from Concord.

Police Sgt. Robert Meyers reports that traffic along the parade route will be rerouted as necessary. In the past years, Hingham's 4th of July Parade drew from 8 to 10 thousand spectators. "This year could go well over that," Meyers said.

Rain date for the parade will be Sunday, July 7, beginning at noon.

Quincy Cooperative Bank issues report

At the 96th annual meeting of the Quincy Cooperative Bank, chairman of the board, John J. Sullivan, presented the results for the year. Sullivan announced "The directors and officers are pleased to report the completion of the most successful year in the 96 year history of the bank."

The meeting of the shareholders was held May 22 at the main office at 85 Quincy Avenue in Quincy. Mr. Sullivan announced several major accomplishments:

- Assets increased $10,610,382.91 and 7,395 new accounts were added. Deposits increased $9,741,427.04 during the past year.
- As an equal opportunity lender, $21,361,100 in new mortgages were granted.
- $14,321,596 in dividends were paid, representing the highest amount in the history of the bank.

Sullivan remarked with enthusiasm about the bank's continued growth, noting that the new main office of the bank at 85 Quincy Avenue continues to grow far in excess of original expectations.

He informed the shareholders that completion of the new branch on Newport Avenue in North Quincy is expected in August.

The bank has great optimism for this new office due to the spectacular commercial growth of that area in recent years.

Sen. Golden names Day Care panel

Senator William Golden (D-Weymouth) has named five panelists for a Day Care Seminar to be held at the South Shore Chamber of Commerce Friday, June 28.

Sen. Golden is co-hosting the Seminar with the Chamber, which will deal with the aspects of company-sponsored day care programs, and how businesses can set up day care programs for their employees.

The panelists for the Seminar will be Catherine Wolfe of the Howard Johnson Child Care Center in North Quincy, Nancy Bailey of Child Care Management in Needham, Barbara Murphy of South Shore Day Care Services of Braintree, Nancy Goldsmith of the Colonial Nursing and Rehabilitation Center in Weymouth, and Pat Cronin of the Executive Office of Economic Affairs, which oversees the Corporate Child Care Program.

"With the increase in single parent families, day care is a very important element of everyday life," states Senator Golden. "Many businesses, large and small, are realizing the tremendous advantages of setting up day care programs, whether in-house, or contracted out, for their employees."

The Seminar is free to any business or group interested in learning more about day care services, and how to get involved with available programs. For more information, call 722-1646, or the South Shore Chamber at 479-1111.

Young people's summer theatre

The Young People's Summer Theatre recently completed casting for its summer production of the musical "Barnum."

The leading role of Barnum will be played by Don MacKillop of Holbrook. Other leads are Sue MacPhetres as Chairy and Doug Mathews as James A. Bailey, both from Scituate.

Also, Lindsey Berents of Cohasset will play the Blues Singer, Sean Fagan of Kingston will be Tom Thumb, and Jodi Capeless of Easton will be Joice Heth, the oldest woman in the world.

Jenny White of Taunton will play Jenny Lind, the Swedish Nightingale.

Speaking roles include: Jeanne MacLellan, Chris Lee, Wendy MacPhetres, Andy Salvador, Tom Fusco, Arthur Beecher, all of Scituate; Jennifer McCarthy, Celeste Finn and Greg Palmer, of Marshfield; Chris Roman of Pembroke, Jeff Godfrey of East Bridgewater, and Kathy Kay of Duxbury.

Circus performers are Kristen Adams, Chris Bowen, Dan Carberg, Kim Costas, Emily Culbert, Paddy Doherty, Katie Ellsworth, Hilary Gilligan, Jennifer Goodwin, Mike Hailer, Patrick Healy, Jane Henry, Greg Jensen, Suzanne Kelly, Sallyann Kluz, Jeanine LaValley, Jenni Limbacher, Suzanne MacKay, Lisa MacLean, Amy MacPhetres, Michele McVay, Maryalice Mohr, Lee Ann Moore, Deena Paolucci, Julie Power, Carolyn Roche, Stephanie Ronan, Linda Ross, Henrietta Shannon, Katie Shea, Kim Stieglitz, Ted Wider, Jennifer Takacs, Judy Waterman and Gina Vanaria, all of Scituate.

Chris Billings, David Billings, Stephen Doherty, Greg Hewitt, Bruce Palmer and Caroline Struzik, all of Marshfield;

Elizabeth Derochea, Julie and Denielle Edlund, Jennifer Hennigan, Christopher Lage and Nicole Taylor, all of Norwell;

Lauren Kalita, Matt Kuhn and Mary McElroy of Cohasset;

Donna and Kim Beaman, Chris D'Olimpia and Melissa Godfrey from East Bridgewater;

Carrie Buckley, Tammy Budgett and Justine Thurston from Hingham, and Matt Taylor from Brockton.

The group is still accepting chorus members and dancers. Those interested should attend rehearsal Monday, June 30 at the First Trinitarian Congregational Church at 6:45 p.m. "Barnum" will be presented at Scituate High School Aug. 1, 2, and 3.

Museums open for summer

The Cohasset Historical Society has opened two museums at Cohasset Center for the summer season.

Both the Society's Capt. John Wilson Historical House and the Maritime Museum will be open during summer months, through September 29, each afternoon except Monday from 1:30 to 4:30.

Admission is 75 cents for each building for adults, 25 cents per building for children under 12 years.

Special guided tours for groups can be arranged by contacting the Historical Society, 383-0773 or 383-6930.

The Capt. John Wilson Historical House is an 1810 sea captain's dwelling containing furnishings representative of its time and collected from some of the old homes of Cohasset.

The Maritime Museum contains numerous artifacts and relics of Cohasset's seafaring past, including models of sailing vessels and ship carvings from the towns' schooner fleets of a century ago.

Also there is a general historical collection of items from the 18th and 19th centuries of this old New England village.

Final plea for phon-a-thon pledges

The Cohasset PSO (Parent School Organization) is grateful to everyone who sent in their donations in response to the annual phon-a-thon. It was a terrific fund raiser!

Please, anyone who promised to send a check and who has not done so, send it in as soon as possible so the PSO can close its books for the year.

Dear Hill treats

Popsicles, donated by Stop & Shop, were a delicious treat for weary Deer Hill fifth-graders following the tug-of-war at Deer Hill Olympic Day.

Olympic winners

Three Cohasset Special Needs students representing the Cohasset Special Olympics Team returned victorious from the Summer Games held June 21-23 at Boston University.

Jay Nothnagle won gold medals in long jump and 100 meter run in the 8-11 age, Tim Myers won a gold medal for 100 meters in the 12-15 age group, and Ryan Picton won a silver medal in the softball throw and a bronze in the 50 meter run for 8-11 year olds.

The three boys were selected to compete in the state games on the basis of their performance at the Plymouth County meet in May. At B.U. hundreds of Special Olympians competed in track and field, equestrian, gymnastic, and swimming events. They also participated in an opening parade, Olympic Town activities, and a South Pacific banquet and dance.

Special Olympics was created in 1968 by the Joseph P. Kennedy Foundation. Since then it has become the largest program of sports training and athletic competition for mentally retarded in the world. The games at B.U. involved over 600 volunteers. The Cohasset team is sponsored financially by the Cohasset Rotary Club.

(Ed. Note: Cohasset Mariner writer Charlotte Carney was asked by the Kennedy Foundation to perform her song, "It's our time" at the closing ceremonies of the Olympic games. Sources say she "brought down the house.")

Early deadline

Because July Fourth has the audacity to arrive Thursday (Cohasset Mariner day), we warn everyone to get their ads and copy in a bit early.

The Mariner will arrive Friday, July 5 next week. But we will attempt, for the staff's sake, to get all copy out early in time to take Thursday off.

Please have all your ads in the drop spots (Cohasset Colonial Pharmacy or Cohasset News Co.) or the Marshfield office by 9 a.m. Monday. All news must be in by 9 a.m. Tuesday.

The following week we'll be back to our normal, leisurely schedule.

Senior citizens news

Eighty 60 Plus Club members enjoyed a gala day at Hugo's June 18. An excellent dinner was followed with music, singing and dancing by members.

Thursday, Aug. 15, is the picnic date at the Donovan's on Jerusalem Road.

Special Birthday greetings and Good Wishes to Mr. Percy James, a lifelong resident of Cohasset, on his 90th birthday, July 19.

P&B Tours will present a one-day Cape Cod Clambake to Cohasset 60 Plus Club members, and all Cohasset senior citizens. The date is Thursday, July 18, at Captain's Clambake Emporium in Dennisport.

There will be a fresh-baked lobster, steamers, corn-on-the-cob, chilled melon, a glass of beer or wine, and fun. Steak is available for those who prefer it.

Entertainment is promised with a player piano, and songbooks for all.

In the afternoon there will be a stop at Hyannis to browse at the West End Marketplace. It's a mini Faneuil Hall — 30 shops located in this English Tudor-style structure. This marketplace is located on Main St., and easily accessible to a large variety of shopping adventures.

The price is $36 and includes: Captain's Clambake, taxes and gratuities, service of an escort, and transportation via deluxe motor coach.

Full payment is due by July 3.

The tour will depart from Town Hall at 10:15 a.m., and estimated return time is 6 p.m.

Make checks payable to Cohasset 60 Plus Club and mail to Connie Silipo, 29 Wheeler Park, Scituate, MA 02066.

Cohasset Village Fair

In these first days of summer, a Christmas season event seems a long way off. But the central organization of Cohasset's unique five-church Village Fair has already been put together, has met several times and a few committees are even now at work assembling and crafting some of the items that will go on sale when the big benefit is held on Saturday, December 7.

This will be the 45th edition of the joint church fundraiser that started as a combined effort of the three churches of Cohasset Common, but which in recent years has been extended to involve two other churches of the town in a totally ecumenical effort.

Under the system of rotating leadership of the Fair, the direction of this year's event will be the responsibility of the First Parish Unitarian Church with Gail Bell as General Chairman. Mrs. Bell will have the special help of three fellow parishioners as her Assistant Chairs: Mrs. Timothy Marsac, Mrs. William Phelps and Mrs. Kenneth Wilcox.

The other churches joining in sponsorship of the Fair are St. Stephen's Episcopal, St. Anthony's Roman Catholic, Second Congregational and the Panagia Greek Orthodox which had the leadership role last year.

Each of these churches has named one or more representatives to the Central Committee which sets policy and recruits the participation from the individual congregations. Representatives to this Central Committee are as follows: First Parish, Mrs. Stuart Weier; St. Stephen's, Mrs. Lester Gammons; St. Anthony's, Mrs. John Langel, Mrs. Thomas McGrath and Mrs. John O'Toole; Second Congregational, Mrs. Wayne Sawchuk and Mrs. Joseph Nedrow, and Panagia Greek Orthodox, Mrs. James Barber.

Completing the Central Committee of the 1985 Cohasset Village Fair are Mrs. John F. Roy as Secretary, and Charles Costas as Treasurer.

The "early bird" committees already at work on their commitments for the Fair include the Boutique, headed by Mrs. Russell Sandblom and Mrs. Timothy Marsac, the Children's Table headed by Miss Barbara Mullett, and the Bargain Bazaar being organized by Mrs. Jack Duncombe.

The Boutique and Children's Table committees would welcome volunteer workers or the donation of material which the ingenious ladies can fashion into attractive items for their booths. Donations of attic treasures and basement bargains are being solicited for the Bargain Bazaar and these can be deposited in the rear basement of St. Anthony's Rectory. In all cases the committee chairmen can advise about schedules and procedures.

Festival fun

Artist's demonstrations, face painting, thumbprint drawings, a tricycle parade — all help to round out the activities of the 30th anniversary of the South Shore Arts Festival.

Interspersed among the three-day festival put on by the South Shore Art Center, 103 Ripley Road in Cohasset, are these workshops that involve both kids and adults. And occurring for two days, Saturday, June 29 and Sunday, June 30, will be a continuous craft exhibit including sculpture, jewelry, stained glass and much more. All these activities are scheduled so as not to conflict with the performances planned for the festival.

Any three-wheeled powered tricycles or hot wheels may be entered in the tricycle parade. Participants should meet at the main festival tent on the Cohasset Common at 9:45 a.m. Saturday, June 29. The first ten riders will receive free balloons.

Saturday's artist demonstrations include at 11 a.m., acrylic painting by Pat Michelson and at 3 p.m., watercolor by Ottilie Brown. Both demonstrations will be on the Common. At 2:30 p.m. Kenje Ogata will do children and adult face painting.

On Sunday, a 3 p.m., Ogata will do children's thumbprint drawings. Artist demonstrations will be at 1 p.m., watercolor by Judith Campbell Reed and at 3 p.m., oil painting by Donna Green.

Environmentalists pleased with state acres

By Elisabeth Gorfinkle

Local environmentalists say they are pleased the state will acquire 632 acres of former U.S. Army Reserve land, as an addition to Wompatuck State Park.

But added that they are disappointed the U.S. General Services Administration, the agency in charge of disposing of unwanted federal property, won't agree to give the state Department of Environmental Management an additional 135 acres which are contiguous with the 632 acres.

The GSA informed DEM that the parcel is considered prime real estate worth $1.5 million. The state has the option to buy the 135 acres, according to Hingham's Conservation Commission Chairman Robert Beal.

Beal, who met a couple of weeks ago with DEM officials at Wompatuck State Park, said the state wants very much to acquire the remaining parcel, but is torn over the issue of spending public funds on public land.

"It's far better to gain what we can now, than to postpone gaining anything over an issue the federal government is very strong on," he said. "I think the town will stand on keeping the existing zoning (of open space), unless an overriding public benefit is shown."

The parcel, which is contained within Hingham, was zoned for open space 15 years ago. Residential development wouldn't be allowed without a change in zoning.

Beal added if the parcel fell into the hands of developers, Hingham would lose an extremely valuable geological area and natural wildlife refuge.

"Based on information that has come out, the 135 acres certainly proves to be one of the most, if not the most, valuable open spaces in Hingham," Beal said.

Most of the information Beal is referring to was compiled by former conservation commission member John Richardson, who is an environmental consultant for DEM and the federal government's Department of the Interior.

In the fall of 1984, Richardson did a comprehensive study of the 135 acres for the Interior. "I walked every foot of that parcel of land, taking an inventory of all the natural and historic resources of the area," he said during a recent interview.

"I think it would be a disaster, as far as urban park planning is concerned, to develop this parcel. It would be just like driving a wedge right into the heart of an area of important parkland," he said.

Richardson explained the parcel is nearby the park, Whitney Woods and Triphammer Pond.

"Introducing people into the middle of a sensitive, wild environmental zone would compromise one of the most scenic and remote of Hingham's open areas.

"As Hingham becomes more urbanized, it becomes all the more important to protect large open areas, to preserve the feeling of wildlands and wildlife habitats, so people can experience it in time. If left alone, barring natural disasters, the parcel will regain its primeval forest stature," he said.

Richardson disagrees with the GSA's description of the parcel as prime upland area. He said a large portion of the 135 acres is high ledge cut by ravines and wetlands.

For instance, part of Saw Mill Pond is located in the parcel. This manmade pond, built in about 1800, used to be part of a mill that made ship blocks and pumps for the ship-building industry on the North River.

Most of the 40 to 50-acre pond's basin is filled in and the area is marshy. Richardson said the pond could be easily reclaimed by blocking three culverts and installing a spillway in the mill's dam to handle overflow of water.

The pond, with its four islands, would then be an even finer passive recreation area in the midst of a scenic haven for native animals and plants, he said.

Richardson continued, "The ledges rise 60 to 70 feet on one side (of the pond). On them grow stunted trees that are about 100 to 200 years old."

"Behind the ledges is a stand of about 250 to 300 native dogwood. Some of the trees are up to 30 feet high. The stand is probably unique to this region.

"The wooded area is full of sparse (uncommon) trees and wildflower species. A few of these species I've never seen anywhere else around here. And the nearby swamp has some of the largest white cedar trees existing today in New England. The area is rich in species of native birds and other wildlife."

The 2,877-acre Wompatuck State Park spreads over portions of the towns of Hingham, Norwell, Cohasset and Scituate. The state acquired the former annex to the Hingham Naval Ammunition Depot from the federal government in 1972.

The adjacent 767 acres in Hingham and Cohasset were used by the Army Reserve until 1982, when the property became surplus and was handed to the GSA.

The GSA has been willing since last August to give the state the 632-acre parcel, but wanted to sell the remaining land to the highest bidder.

State officials informed the federal government last fall that their application filed in February 1984 for the entire 767 acres should be honored.

Recently, after months of negotiating, the state changed it's application to request only the 632 acres.

The state may convert the former military reservation into a recreational area which will include a pool, fishing pond and bicycle trails.

Natural Science Center elects officers

The annual meeting of the South Shore Natural Science Center, Inc. was held on May 19, with Chairman of the Board, Richard K. McMullan, presiding. Officers elected unanimously for one-year terms were: Patricia Kaczorowski, Marshfield, secretary; David T. Sargent, Hingham, and Trevor W. Lake, Marshfield, co-treasurers.

Trustees elected unanimously for a three-year term ending April, 1988, included:

Eric Anderson, II, Plympton; David T. Donahue, Scituate; Patricia Kaczorowski and Trevor W. Lake, both of Marshfield; Gaylen G. Litchfield, Norwell; David T. Sargent and Mary Jean Schultz, both of Hingham; Kevin V. Symmons, No. Easton; Margaret Sullivan, Boston; and Pamela K. Vinal, Norwell.

Susan H. Donahue of Norwell, was elected unanimously for a 1-year term as a trustee.

Honorary Trustees included: Dr. Clifford Easton, So. Weymouth; Gwen Ferrini, Scituate; Laura Jacobs, Richard Leahy, Esq., Mildred McCoy and Richard D. McMullan, all of Norwell; Richard Murray, Abington; Eleanor Norris, Norwell; and Phillip O. Swanson, Hingham.

Special recognition was given to: Gaylen Litchfield, Norwell; Barbara Devine, Scituate; Monica Luft, Bedford; Gwen Ferrini, Scituate; William Perkins, Halifax; David Donahue, Scituate; Susan Donahue and Randolph Wright, both of Norwell.

Cohasset's summer sports

By Melissa L. Barcomb

The Strawberry Parfait softball team evened out their record to 7-7, after winning both games of a double header played Sunday.

Undaunted by the weather, the Parfait players braved the rain and cold to prove themselves as true winners.

Sunday's game was played against Anderson Insulation at the Beechwood Ballpark.

In the first game, until the bottom of the sixth inning, the two teams appeared closely matched with a 6-6 tie.

With Joe Pomerico, Donny Cahil, Joe Dooley and Dave Pomerico all hitting singles, three more runs came in bringing the score to a Parfait advantage of 9-6.

In the top of the seventh inning, Anderson Insulation had some powerful hitting, bringing in four more runs and taking the lead.

With a 10-9 score, and Anderson Insulation in the bottom of the seventh inning, the Parfait didn't get the two runs they needed to win, although they did bring in one, thanks to the combined hitting and running efforts of Bill Protrulus and Dave Patrolia.

Game one went into extra innings because of a 10-10 tie.

In the top of the eighth inning, thanks to Dave Patrolia's skillful pitching and some attentive outfield play, especially Donny Cahil's impressive catch, Anderson Insulation couldn't get any runs in.

In the bottom of the eighth inning, Joe Pomerico hit an automative double and came home off Donny Cahil's hit bringing the final score of game one to 11-10, a Parfait victory.

John Usher started off game two with a homerun in the first inning.

Anderson came back with a run and evened the score to 1-1 in the second inning. In the top of the fourth inning, Bill Protrulus had a ground rule double and Donny Cahil hit a double. The Parfait had another run in taking the lead with a score of 2-1.

The Parfait was lacking in outfield play in the fifth inning. Anderson Insulation brought in four runs and set the score at their advantage, 5-2.

In the seventh inning, the Parfait hitting was at a peak.

Joe Pomerico hit a homerun and Dave Pomerico came home.

There were six straight hits from Joe Dooley, Dave Patrolia, Joe Pomerico, Dave Pomerico, Kevin Dooley and Donny Cahil.

In the seventh inning, Parfait came in with six runs. Game two ended with a score of 8-5, Strawberry Parfait.

FLYING SCOTS RACE SERIES

The Flying Scots were off and racing Saturday completing their third week of competition. This year the series is privileged to have one of its most active fleets in a long time. With 10 boats in the fleet this season will undoubtedly be filled with many exciting races.

Saturday, Ray Kasperowicz along with his crew, Bob Davenport and Tad Kasperowicz, raced to victory. Roger Porter with Peg Soltesz came in second, Steve Bartow with George Yeager was third, Bob Jackson with Jeff Bettinger came in fourth, and Peter Goedecke along with Carl Goedecke came in fifth.

Summer recreation schedule

BAND CONCERT

The Cohasset Recreation Department's first band concert of the season will be at 7:30 p.m., Saturday evening, June 29, Cohasset Common. The 30-piece South Shore Concert Band under the direction of Mr. Richard Whitmarsh will be performing.

LATE REGISTRATIONS

Late Playground Program registrations for children four through 12 will be accepted as will late Youth Tennis registrations.

The first Music Circus Thursday morning Children's program registrations will be held at the Recreation office on Thursday, June 27, from 9 a.m. to noon, and again during the evening from 6 to 7:30 p.m. All tickets are $3.20 each and the first registration will be "Aladdin" which we will attend on Thursday, July 11. The next registration to be held will be on Wednesday, July 3, 9 a.m. to noon, only! That registration will be for "Snow White."

WRESTLING CLINIC

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept telephone registratons for a Summer Wrestling Clinic for all aged students. Mr. Torin Sweeney and Mr. J.T. Price will conduct the six-week program to be held at the Deer Hill School on Monday and Thursday evenings from 6 to 7:30 p.m.

The six-week program is $12 per person. Classes are scheduled to begin on Monday, July 8. Please call the Recreation Department office at 383-6791 to register.

Scholarship award

The Scituate-Cohasset Newcomers Club this year was able to increase its Scholarship Fund Award to a total of $2000. That is an increase of $500 over last year's awards.

The award increase is due to the dedicated efforts of the club members. With pride and pleasure, Club President Florence Etheridge made the presentation at Scituate High School's award night. Graduating senior Janet Russell was presented with a $1000 scholarship from the club president.

In Cohasset, the $1000 Newcomers Club award was given to graduate Janet Bagley.

The Scituate-Cohasset Newcomers Club extends congratulations to these two graduates, and best wishes for a successful future.

Donations of $250 each were also made to the Scituate Town Library and the Cohasset High School Library.

Students say fixed schedule is a bore

Although they may have been fed a lot of incorrect information, many high school students are against the implementation of a non-rotating schedule next year.

Saying they'll be "bored" by the routine of a fixed class schedule, Student Representative Jim Conley urged the school committee Monday to delay putting it into place next year.

After questioning Conley and Robert Corcoran about their objections, the committee found that much misinformation has been spread about the new schedule.

Committee members denied there would be assigned seating at the two lunch sessions, and they also noted that the class day would not be lengthened as the students had thought.

The students also objected to reducing the corridor pass time from five to four minutes. Noting that many students must travel from the west wing to the opposite side of the building, they argued that four minutes is not enough time. There would be no time to go to the restroom or get books in their lockers, they said.

Committee members said they had traveled the school frequently, and that four minutes seemed ample time to travel to classes.

The students also objected to the reduction to two 25-minute lunch periods. With 320 students in each period, there would be long lines at the food counter with barely enough time to eat.

Their main argument was that the fixed schedule would result in "boredom" for the students who are accustomed to a variety of classes and times. A fixed schedule would mean that some classes would be held the same time throughout the school year. A rotating schedule allows variations of times and classes each day.

The committee explained that a vast majority of schools in this state function on a fixed class schedule. Their reason for implementing the fixed schedule is to allow for double, 90-minute science labs which did not fit within the former schedule. The new plan would also allow the schools to hire some part-time teachers, now that the schedule will be the same each day.

"We were told two years ago these were the best days of our lives. You are taking the best years away and adding boredom to the best years of our lives," Conley told the committee. He also presented the committee with a petition signed by students

Committee defends change in schedule

opposed to the change in school scheduling.

Committee Chairman Joseph Nedrow explained that there was a need to boost the high school curriculum with double science lab periods. In addition, he said, the fixed schedule allows more flexibility in view of declining enrollment, with employment of some part time staff.

He also noted that the five-minute pass time was added several years ago when the school enrollment was much greater.

Member Diana Kornet expressed her concern that there has been no continuity between the student representatives who just graduated, and those new members who attended Monday's meeting. If sophomore or junior representatives were elected, she noted, they would be familiar with the issues that have been discussed periodically, such as the fixed schedule.

Answering the students' concerns about limited lunch period, Chairman Nedrow replied, "I'd rather beef up the academic program. I don't envision more kids buying their lunch next year (and longer lines at the food counter)."

Crowell reiterated the need for the double science lab, saying that was a major concern of the science teachers when he began as Cohasset's superintendent. He urged the students to try the new system out, comparing the advantages to the minuses of the plan. "You're going to give up the variety of a rotating schedule. But they'll be a gifted and talented program, team teachers, double labs and part-time teachers. There are so many advantages," he said.

"We've made your time more productive, not longer," Nedrow added. "And I think we've made you more competitive."

One student claimed that with the shortened pass time, more students would 'rig' lockers to automatically open. This would probably result in more stolen items and broken lockers, Corcoran stated.

Supt. Crowell concurred that vandalism to the lockers is increasing. The administration is thinking about installing a master system where students would have a key to unlock the device on the locker. "We are unhappy about the amount of damage to the lockers this year," he said.

One student noted that with fixed schedules, the same students would attend the same seventh period class each week. It would be unfair to the teachers and students to always have, for instance, English, at seventh period when a student is less productive.

She noted that in a Chicago school system, the first two periods are fixed for lab classes, but the fourth through the seventh periods are rotated.

At the conclusion of this discussion, one parent asked if it was also true that seniors would not be graduating early next year. Like so many rumors, the committee said that was "ridiculous" and the class would follow the tradition of early release.

They also informed the audience they will be discussing the attendance policy at the July 8 school committee meeting.

Letters from a land of devastation

(The following includes exerpts from three letters sent by Eileen Mullaney of South Main Street to her family. Eileen is one of four nurses working for Church World Services, providing medical care in Ethiopia. Ed.)

May 3, 1985

Fortunately, Ethiopia has received a fair amount of rain but there is no indication of the end of the drought. The beautiful change has brought some smiling faces, but little seed is available in the country. The government is trying to hold out on dispersement until they're assured a positive crop production.

Finally obtained our gas coupons enabling us to buy gas more frequently. Plus, we now have our new AIO plates which allows us to drive after 4 p.m. and on Sundays. Travel permits continue to be a problem within the country - the government is adamant about preventing free travel. So we remain close to our working area and spend the two or three days in Addis Ababa hoping to obtain permits for short breaks.

At the moment we are in the midst of reregistering all families of each of the 13 districts. We'll take close to one month since each child is assessed medically and nutritionally; close to 20,000 children. We usually finish by 6 or 6:30 p.m. but sometimes the families have to stay over night and register in the morning. So we provide them with food, water and blankets to prevent their four-mile trek home and back again.

Saw the video of "We Are The World" in the Australian Embassy - we were so impressed and made us feel fortunate that people really do care!

Endemic birds of Ethiopia

Five months have passed. Fruitful in many ways but not nearly enough time to see production. Our Intensive unit is filled with over 100 children just barely surviving and the painstaking job to pull these children through is one of constant evaluation. The worst are those children who have lost the will to survive!

Now that our team has increased to six members we're able to give thorough assessments and obviously reaching a higher percentage of the total number of children in each district - yeah!

The days remain in the low 100's and night, 70's, constituting the use of blankets and comfortable sleeping.

Decided yesterday to extend our storeroom which hopefully will be the last of our construction. Had the carpenters put up gutters to catch any water flow, a precious commodity. I think water is our biggest problem. To say the least, it's a pain having to travel two and three times a day to fill gerry cans and barrels.

The river has gone from a stagnant stream to a moderate flow, but muddy and carrying debris. The well, seven kilometers away, is our major source.

Another film crew arrived a few days ago interviewing each of us - in a way it's a hassle. The people or visitors have been congenial. Speaking of news crews - we received the two generators last week as a result of our requests back in January from Channel 4 in Boston. A real pleasure and we'll soon set it up for our intensive feeding program.

May 15, 1985

The United States' "Save The Children" organization has been given a grant to feed the 196,000 drought victims of the 320,000 people in this area. Their food supply is far greater than what most of the agencies can offer - consisting of grain, oil, and milk powder. Since they feed each person in the family (monthly dry distribution) and we only give to those in that need supplement (below 85 percent

ANGLER'S CORNER by George Doucette

Drifting and jigging for cod and pollack can be a fast action sport. The captain of the charter boat is a master at finding fish on offshore fishing grounds in March thru late June. Tides, weather, bait, and above all, the right location, are all factors in finding fish to fill the fish boxes.

In 120 feet of water, a 17 oz. jig can feel like a ton before a huge fish hits it. Above the jig, 2 or 3 tubes with 8/0 to 12/0 hooks are used as teasers. These will also catch fish when there is more than one on the bottom feeding. Stiff action 7 to 8 foot rods are used to lift the jig off the bottom and induce a strike. A good reel, 4/0 or higher in size, like the Penn 112H or 113H are perfect for this type of fishing. The reels will hold four to five hundred feet of 60 to 80 pound test monofilament line. Heavy duty swivels are a must and will save you tackle if you snag the bottom while drifting. Cod, Pollack and Bluefish (occasionally a Striper in the 40 pound class) will hit these jigs.

A charter boat trip can be a very rewarding experience, especially if you own your own boat. Valuable information can save you time and money when offshore fishing and your own fishing trips will produce larger and more consistent catches of fish.

Politicus — by David A. Mittell, Jr.

When to much protection means less protection

The Massachusetts Department of Public Health recently began a public relations campaign with respect to the problem of residual lead paint in and on Massachusetts homes . . . and therein lies a story that helps to understand the counterproductive role that government so often plays when it tries to protect us from evil.

The impetus of the present public relations effort is hard to fathom. It may spring from some courageous public servant's appreciation of the fact that (according to statistics) there remain 1,500 children in Massachusetts with elevated levels of lead in their blood. It may be an attempt by the Department of Public Health to distract scrutiny from the near scandalous mismanagement of its federally funded nutrition program for women, infants, and children. (That the subject of a once and future column.) Or the lead paint p.r. campaign may simply be one of those events that inexplicably emerge ex nihilo out of large bureaucracies.

In any case, the present media blitz, like the Massachusetts lead paint law under which it is taking place, is a case study in what can go wrong when good intentions, a little bit of knowledge, a bad law, and a self-perpetuating bureaucracy combine to produce public policy.

The seminal issue was an inarguably righteous cause. Small children, at the age they are inclined to put anything they can get their hands on into their mouths, and at the same critical age they are learning to speak, can suffer brain damage and developmental impairment if they ingest sweet tasting leaden paint chips. Until this fact was discovered some 20 years ago, all paint contained lead, which was the finest paint base there was.

Clearly children had to be protected. Clearly if the choice were between leadpainted woodwork — even beautiful leadpainted woodwork — and the health of living children, the woodwork would have to go. Accordingly, in the early seventies, Massachusetts passed the strictest lead paint law in the nation. Whereas 47 states merely require the covering of lead paint with two coats of unleaded paint, Massachusetts now requires that owners of dwellings housing children under six to remove all lead paint up to four feet inside and out. This must be done at the owner's expense, which ranges from $1,500 for the average house to many thousands of dollars for larger homes with multi-family dwellings. Deleading must be done according to specific procedures including the use of a dry blade which effectively ruins woodwork. Stripping chemicals are not permitted because they can leave a residue of lead in the pores of the wood which can (at least theoretically) be ingested by a child chewing on the wood.

In support of this law the good argument is made that extremism in the protection of children is a moral imperative and that a law that goes too far is preferable to a law that does not go far enough. This "good argument" has carried the day in Massachusetts for 15 years . . . and that's exactly what the problem is because of the lead paint issue the "good argument" is demonstrably false. The bad law it has brought about has demonstrably failed to protect children from being poisoned and in some cases probably maimed.

What is wrong with the Massachusetts paint law is simply this: too much "protection" has produced resistance and avoidance rather than compliance — and therefore less protection. Protection, as 47 other states recognize by dint of the laws on their books, is accomplished by removing peeling lead paint and covering the unpeeled remainder with two coats of unleaded paint (or with vinyl wainscotting or whatever one's taste or lack of same prefers.)

But our law demands a needless, expensive, unaesthetic major renovation, a demand that begs for non-compliance, especially among the poor where the great majority of our lead poisoned children are found. It's of course great fun to picture the wealthy, unscrupulous landlord living off the rents of impoverished families whose children he incidentally poisons. The reality is that a plurality of the 1,500 lead-poisoned children in Massachusetts live in public housing. Thus, in 15 years government itself has not been able to conform to the strictures of its own lawful mandates. That ought to tell our thinkers something.

The problem is that in the real world where real children sometimes get exposed to the lead hazard, many real, hard-pressed landlords resist the ridiculous requirements of the state's lead paint law until forced to comply — then if they can they pass on the expense of compliance to their tenants. Other landlords simply avoid renting to families and rent to "yuppies" who are inclined to raise plants, not children. Whatever one thinks of the approximately 95 percent of property owners who have not yet deleaded pre-1970 dwellings, it ought to be obvious that this law is not working.

If one finds it more fun being on the righteous side of a moral argument, the obvious answer is to make the lead paint law so strict that absolutely no one can comply. Then there will always be landlords to condemn and children to protect. But if one simply wants to help a few hundred kids grow up without exposure to the lead hazard, then the solution is to get in line with 47 of our sister states. Require two coats of fresh, unleaded paint every time a child moves into a dwelling. Sure, in 20 years that paint will peel and the leaden underneath will once again show. Then it will have to be painted again — a far greater likelihood than general compliance with the present law which clearly does not operate in the real world.

So it is with most law and most government regulation. Rules that are moderate and reasonable in what they expect of the real people who are asked to comply with them have some hope of being complied with. But there comes a point in every regulatory case where the increasing cumbersomeness of stricture produces a decreasing degree of compliance. In the case of the lead paint law, something less than five precent of all pre-1970 homes have been duly stripped in nearly 15 years. At this rate the stripping will still be incomplete in the quadricentennial year of 2176.

That ought to tell our thinkers something, but it won't.

— Attention Singles —

Caribbean in October

Single Living Newsmagazine is sponsoring a Caribbean trip in October. The details are sketchy at this point but we'd like to hear from those of you who might be planning a fall vacation, and would like more information.

We can't tell you the exact place and date at this moment, but we can tell you we'll have fun! The zany S.L. staff will be going. There'll be laughs for sure! We plan to limit the ratio of men to women to something approaching equal. It's not a good idea to come with high hopes of meeting your dream person. You'll most likely be disappointed. On the other hand, if you come knowing you'll be with a bunch of other nice single people from the Boston area, that you'll enjoy a 1st class vacation that you deserve, your chances of having a terrific time are 100%.

Please send me more information regarding Single Living *Caribbean in October trip.

FROM THE KITCHEN

by JOAN PINKHAM

Most of us have seen Plymouth Rock, had a quick glimpse of the Bunker Hill Monument as we head north and toured Old Ironsides, if not in Charlestown Navy Yard, via television, but how many of us have visited the antique houses lovingly restored and cherished by our local historical societies? For a glimpse of a way of life once native to the small towns of our South Shore, you will want to be in Norwell this Saturday for the Historical Society's 50th anniversary activities. Old-fashioned strawberry shortcake will be served on the grounds of the Jacobs Farmhouse from 11 to 5 p.m. and the farmhouse owned by the Society for the Preservation of New England Antiquities, will be open to visitors. Built in 1726, there are 10 rooms in the museum area of the house, a stenciled floor in the living room, a butteryand a kitchen where a brass and iron pump at the ironstone sink reminds visitors of the effort that went into meal preparation when the cook, in her ankle-length skirts and petticoats spent many a hot August day over the fireplace or woodburning stove. Barbara Gardener and Larry Matteauare resident overseers who will show you through the museum Sundays from 1 to 5 p.m. through Sept. 15. Helena Oshima of Fern Hill Farm in Pembroke tells us of how the women of that era protected their woolens against moths during the summer months when clothes were stored away. Sometimes they would stud an orange with whole cloves and hang it in the closet; a sweet-smelling arrangement that makes a gift project easily prepared by your Scouts or Camp Fire girls. They also made little cloth bags filled with tansy, wormwood, lavender, peppermint and curly mint and tucked them in bureau drawers.

Hope Poor, one of the Colonial Dames who has tended the Dorothy Quincy Homestead in that city, tells of the large, low-beamed ceiling in that particular kitchen. Garden clubs, tourists and classes of school-children take delight in tours arranged by these women belonging to the federal society of "Dames." Period kitchen utensils once used to prepare tea for Benjamin Franklin may be seen in the house which dates back to the 17th century. Your summer guests would relish a tour offered from noon to five (the last tour at 4 p.m.) Tuesdays through Sundays. New Englanders have never liked to waste words and their recipes tend to be rather terse, as you can see from this old English recipe written by hand and found at the Homestead among some old papers and pictures.

3/4 C. butter

Roll to 1/4" thickness. Cut in narrow strips 1/2" long and twist around.

And that's it — no directions, but it might be safe to try them at 350 for 8 to 10 minutes on greased cookie sheet.

Few houses in our nation can compare with the Historic Winslow House at the corner of Webster and Careswell Sts. in Marshfield. A four square house, built around a gigantic chimney, the fireplaces are truly magnificent, holding a four-foot log with considerable ease. In the kitchen are many ancient cooking utensils and shelves filled with old pewter. Under the watchful eye of Sue Freeman and green thumbs of members of the Seaside Gardeners, the herb garden has been restored to reflect the 17th century era where Gov. Edward Winslow, Gov. Josiah Winslow and General John Winslow lived. In today's garden you may see the lavendar used in sachets, horehound used medicinally, sweet cicely used as a sweetening, thyme, burnet, mint, sage and chive, used then, as now, in cooking. Today's summery salads and barbecued meats go nicely with a slice or two of this:

FRENCH HERB BREAD

Cut long loaf in 1" slices nearly through. Mix 1/2 C. butter, 1/4 C. chopped chives, 1/4 C. chopped parsley, some oregano. Spread on bread, wrap in foil. Place in moderate oven until thoroughly heated. Remove foil to brown slightly, just before serving.

* * *

To go with a cold, clear cucumber soup or gazpacho, you can make

HERBED BREAD CUBES

Spread sliced bread with butter, cut into small cubes. Sprinkle cubes with parsley, chives, thyme, savory. Toast under broiler lightly. Just before serving, place a few in each bowl.

Story behind your telephone voice

The family is in the kitchen. Someone's getting the devil. It is a serious moment but something that happens now and then where people coexist. Someone is fully and openly annoyed at someone else. There's a bit of slatting around going on. Dishes are closer to being thrown on the table than put there. The lid to the boiling potatoes is slammed rather than placed.

Expressions on the principal debators reflect the mood, ticked, angry, farthest thing from the expressions in the family picture.

As emotions are swelling to the peak, the telephone rings. Nine times out of 10, one of the participants answers it. Before the very eyes of the loved ones, that person transforms. The lips purse and across the wires rings something that each of us has . . . The Telephone Voice.

No matter how piqued the moment, how furrowed the brows, how jutted the jaw of the adversary, from within the answerer rises the telephone voice.

And this causes trouble. It's infuriating to be arguing with someone, even yelling, and then have him or her switch from ugly to sweet-as-pie right there in front of you. But while that's socially annoying, it's in worse taste to take your fight to the phone and to answer the innocent caller with a feisty 'hello.'

Having a telephone voice is no accident. We were raised and trained to it, like standing up when our elders enter a room, covering our mouths for restrained coughing.

No argument is quite the same after the phone has been answered by the person who had to shift moods to do it. So one could say there's that plus in the voice change.

Most of the time people don't wittingly change tones to answer the phone. But we'd rather not snarl into the mouthpiece, at least until we know who is there. When they have the video in the service, that my happen.

It's embarrassing to use the telephone voice in the midst of an argument. It makes the answerer feel like a phony, which is close. He or she would admit to putting on an act of sorts. But the choice is probably to save face in front of strangers rather than in front of family.

Most of us feel required to be our best in answering the phone. It's a handshake of sorts, a greeting. It's a first impression that could embarrass us if it were not polite.

It is possible for someone to hear the phone, race toward it, slip on a rug, scramble to her feet, hooking a knee or a foot on a chair and reach the phone with a harried but proper 'hello.' We don't keep callers waiting. We would probably hurt ourselves to avoid that. The phone's demand on us is apparent. Get to it. Be nice about it. Don't let them sense your toe's bleeding.

There have been those calls in the dark of night. Less frequent, they are intimidating, potentially bad news. Few of us respond with annoyance at being awakened. We simply respond.

Trouble is it is from a posture of sleep, mentally and physically. I have picked up a ringing phone in the middle of the night and gone right back to sleep with the receiver in my hand.

Worse, I have reached for the phone, missed, knocked it to the floor, rolled to the floor to find it, groped while it was ceaselessly ringing. But for the record, when I finally found it, I was pleasant when I said 'hello.' Usually it was to no one because they'd hung up. But I'm nice even to wrong numbers. That is because I've dialed wrong ones and I've had to apologize to all the people I've bothered. I view as unutterably chicken the people who dial a wrong number and then hang up on you without a word. No fair. You dial it, you deal with it, even briefly, to explain the intrusion.

I've marveled at people who let phones ring and don't answer them. I can't do that. I don't even want to. It isn't that I think the President's on the other end of the line. But it's like someone's calling my name, so I answer.

Same with someone at the door. In fact we apply the same strictures to phone answering that we do going to the door, a dight of grace for our home if we can come up with it.

I have aunts who answer the phone, "Hi-Lo," It's a unique greeting/response. I'd know them anywhere.

Then, of course, there was Aunt Milly, a great aunt, and I mean that, who didn't hold with the foolishness of implied telephone etiquette. She hung up when she was through talking. No matter if you were, when she had finished she put the phone back on the hook. If Aunt Milly had a telephone voice, I never heard it. But she, believe me, always came through loud, clear and true.

BEACON Hill Roll CALL

"Beacon Hill Roll Call" records local representatives' votes on 10 roll calls from the week of June 17-21.

1986 BUDGET (S 2401)

House 144-7, refused to concur with the Senate version of a fiscal 1986 $8.8 billion state budget. Supporters said the Senate version is better and noted agreeing with it will prevent a limited six-member conference committee from drafting the final version of the budget.

Opponents said the House version is better and argued the House should not give in on many of its major points.

State Reps. Charles Mann, Mary Jeanette Murray voted for the Senate version. Reps. Frank Hynes, William Flynn, Robert Cerasoli, Suzanne Bump and Robert Ambler voted "Nay."

SUPPLEMENTAL BUDGET (H 6236)

House 117-15, gave near final approval to a $108.9 million supplemental fiscal 1985 budget.

Supporters said the package is a fiscally responsible one which will pay bills and fund necessary programs.

Opponents said the budget was loaded with waste and does not provide for any additional local aid or tax relief.

Voting for the budget was Reps. Cerasoli, Hynes and Murray. Rep. Mann voted "Nay" and Reps. Ambler and Bump did not vote.

ELDERLY INCOME (H 6236)

House 90-63, rejected a supplemental budget amendment eliminating the 10.7 percent tax on a portion of unearned income for persons over 65. The amendment eliminates the tax for these individuals on unearned income up to $3300 in 1986, $6600 in 1987, and $9900 in 1988.

For joint filers, the figures are $3600, $7380 and $11070.

Supporters said the elderly need this tax relief which can easily be funded by the state surplus. Opponents said the state cannot afford the revenue loss and noted the amendment only helps the wealthy elderly.

Reps. Cerasoli, Flynn and Hynes voted "Nay." Reps. Mann, Murray, Ambler and Bump voted "yea."

$82.8 MILLION (H 6236)

House 91-49, rejected a supplemental budget amendment providing $82.8 million in additional fiscal 1984 local aid to cities and towns to be distributed in proportion to $95 per public school student.

Supporters said this would give communities money they are owed since they were promised 40 percent of actual growth revenue but have received 40 percent of estimated growth revenue.

Opponents said when indirect aid is included, communities have already received 40 percent of actual growth revenue.

(Reps. Mann, Murray, Flynn and Ambler voted "yea." Reps. Bump, Cerasoli and Hynes voted "nay."

MORTGAGE INTEREST (H 6236)

House 80-62, rejected a supplemental budget amendment allowing homeowners to deduct 50 percent of their mortgage interest payments, up to $3000, on their state income tax return and increasing the maximum deduction for renters from $2500 to $3000.

Supporters said this will help homeowners by giving them the same advantage renters received under Proposition 2 1/2.

Opponents said homeowners already benefited from Prop 2 1/2 and claimed the state cannot afford the revenue loss.

Rep. Ambler did not vote. Reps. Bump and Cerasoli voted "nay." Reps. Flynn, Hynes, Mann and Murray voted "yea."

LEGISLATIVE AIDES (H 6236)

House 121-19, approved a supplemental budget amendment providing an additional $52,000 for legislative and administrative aides to representatives. Supporters said this would provide a hike of an additional $325 for hardworking aides and bring their salary up to $19,000 per year. Opponents said the hike is simply not necessary at this time.

Rep. Murray voted "nay." Reps. Ambler and Bump did not vote. Reps. Cerasoli, Flynn, Hynes and Mann voted "yea."

EXEMPTION (H 6236)

House 79-52, rejected an amendment increasing the initial amount of interest which is exempt from the five percent tax on savings account interest from $100 to $200 for an individual; from $200 to $400 for a married couple; and adding an additional $100 new exemption for people over 65 years old. Supporters said the amendment will save taxpayers $48 million. Opponents said the state cannot afford the revenue loss.

Reps. Flynn, Mann, and Murray voted "yea." Reps. Cerasoli and Hynes voted "nay." Reps. Ambler and Bump did not vote.

SURTAX (H 6236)

House 87-56, rejected an amendment immediately repealing the 7.5 percent surtax; 79-61, rejected a three year phaseout of the surtax; and 74-65, rejected a four year phaseout of the surtax.

Supporters said it was time to repeal this tax which was adopted as a temporary tax in 1975.

Opponents said the state cannot afford the revenue loss. (A "yea" vote is for the amendment. A "nay" vote is against it. Three roll calls are listed below.)

Voting "yea" on all three roll calls were Reps. Murray, Mann, Hynes, and Flynn. Rep. Ambler voted "yea" on the first roll call. Reps. Bump and Cersoli voted "nay."

THE SENATE

"Beacon Hill Roll Call" records local senators' votes on three roll calls from the week of June 17-21.

CONCERTS (S 874)

Senate 19-11, refused to table a bill allowing persons who are denied permits by a city of town to hold events in a 30,000 plus seat facility, to appeal their case to the commissioner of Public Safety who can approve permits if it is determined the events would not endanger the public health.

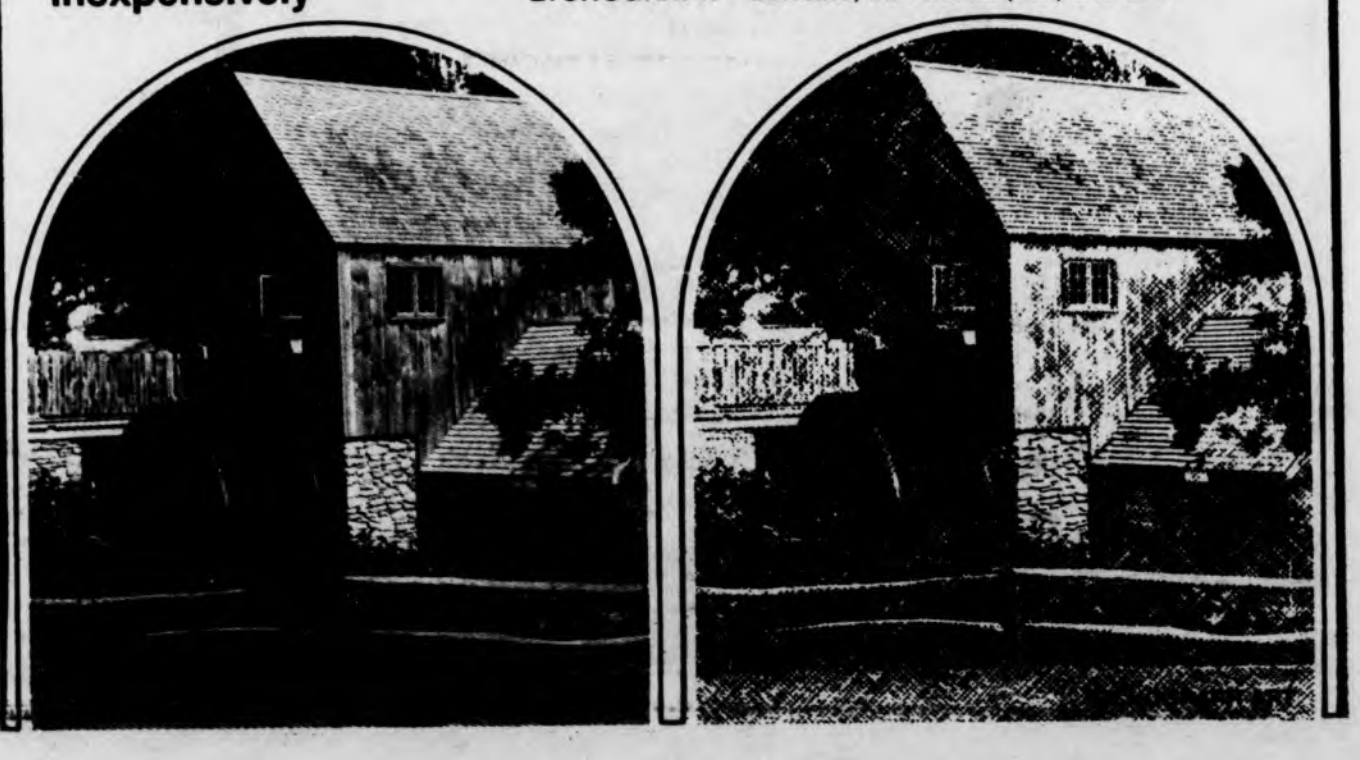
Supporters of the bill said this provides a fair appeals process involving large stadiums, including Foxboro, where selectmen unfairly vetoed the Michael Jackson concert last year.

Opponents said the bill violates home rule and permits state override of a local decision.

Sens. Paul Harold and Edward Kirby voted "yea." Reps. Buckley and Alden voted "nay."

SCHOLARSHIPS (S 2339)

Senate 36-0, approved and sent to the House a bill providing $60 million for higher education scholarship programs. Supporters said federal cutbacks dictate that the state provide additional money for needy sutdents who wish to attend college.



All area Senators voted "yea."

Notice to Hingham Real Estate Offices:
Re: Jonathan Livingston Square

Several weeks ago I got a phone call from a Hingham Real Estate office looking for space at Jonathan Livingston Square (130 King Street) Route 3A in Cohasset.

I promised the Broker to call if space became available.

Well...store front space (600-800 sq. feet depending on layout) will soon be available at Jonathan Livingston Square. The monthly rent will be approximately $800-$1000 per month.

If you are that broker, or if you or a customer have interest in the space please call our broker Chris Ford in Cohasset at 383-1887.

THE NO-COMPROMISE SOLUTION TO BUYING AN AUTOMOBILE.

When you lay out a substantial amount of money for an automobile, you should get what you want. Buying a car shouldn't be an exercise in making sacrifices.

Saab doesn't ask you to give up anything.

Superb handling and performance have made the Saab 900 one of Europe's most respected sports sedans. But that performance is delivered in return for little gas* and less fuss by a reliable two-liter engine. And unlike many other high-performance cars, the Saab is perfectly at home in the workaday world. Four adults can travel comfortably all day in a Saab, or the rear two seats can be folded flat to add extra space for cargo.

We'll be happy to tell you about a lot of other features that you won't have to give up when you buy a Saab.

SAAB
The most intelligent car ever built.

*Saab 900 5-speed. EPA estimated mpg, 36 estimated highway mpg. Use estimated mpg for comparison only. Mileage varies with speed, trip length and weather. Actual highway mileage will probably be less.

Land of devastation . . .

standard height for weight) they will eventually take over our program of 8000 children except those 130 children in our Intensive Feeding Program.

In our area alone 700,500 deaths occurred from the drought (death rate has considerably dropped since all the feeding centers began) and 240,000 animals have perished also. With the past month's rain it is doubtful that any animals will perish - that is if the rains in July appear!

The seeds that were previously planted barely survived the rain flooding. So each of the eight feeding centers in this area will phase out handing over the distribution to "Save The Children" organization. If it works, will be fantastic. The phase out program could take four to six months, depending if we receive Intensive qualified children below 70 percent standard height for weight! The question is, what will happen to us? CRDS (Church Relief Development Service) is saying that there are still many areas untouched and we could begin other medical/ nutritional feeding programs or we may coordinate with "Save The Children" helping them to assess the children during registration or train locals to become community health workers within their villages.

The nights are cooler and the days remain hot and recently dry. Still difficult getting used to the heat! Did you see the "Newsweek" article on Ethiopia? John Edlin wrote it, but didn't take credit for it. He is so sensitive to the African people and most of all has a close picture of how it really is! He was born in New Zealand and left for Africa at the age of 17 as a journalist. Now at the age of 40, and more than 20 years of African journalism, he is the leading correspondent. Anyway, John has been sent to Beirut since the Americans pulled out. We'll miss his updates!

June 14, 1985

I'm in good health and at the moment I'm writing this note by real light at the Hilton in Addis Ababa, taking advantage of a few days to pick up supplies from "We Are The World" whom, I'm sure, you all know flew in a large 747 Air Cargo filled with oodles of supplies for the drought victims. We personally received malaria drugs, antibiotics, IV's, syringes, T-shirts, etc. All of which are most welcome and will be used immediately.

Harry Belefonte is quite a man and has a firm handshake, speaks articulately and has researched this immense problem. His wife is quiet, but speaks with eloquent force. Marlon Jackson is shy like his brother and shows sensitivity and interest.

Plan to head back tomorrow as time is precious and must get out the measle vaccine as the deathrate is too high from such a disease. ABC News NYC is hoping to visit our camp this weekend but looks doubtful since the commissioners (high up on the totem) plan to visit the centers and wouldn't look quite right.

Decided not to take the job in Sudan, and will continue finishing my work here in Ethiopia - too much to do as we are now constructing a health clinic and may begin a latrine project.

Just had dinner with ABC News and looks like they're planning on coming. A lot of politicking continues to persist but somehow we manage to slip by.

Contributions

For those of you who would like to help ease the famine in Ethiopia, this is an organization Eileen Mullany lists among the best. It not only provides food and water, but transportation and cooking utensils to send and prepare the food. All the money sent to this organization will be used to alleviate the famine and disease in that country.

Desmond awarded CRB

Muriel Desmond, manager of the Cohasset office of the Jack Conway Company, has been awarded the Certified Real Estate Brokerage Manager (CRB) designation by the Realtors National Marketing Institute, an affiliate of the National Association of Realtors.

The award was announced during the Marketing Institute meetings held in conjunction with the Realtors Legislative Meetings of the National Association of Realtors, held recently in Washington, D.C.

Desmond has managed the Cohasset office for eight years. She is a member of the Quincy and South Shore Board of Realtors and the Massachusetts Association of Realtors.

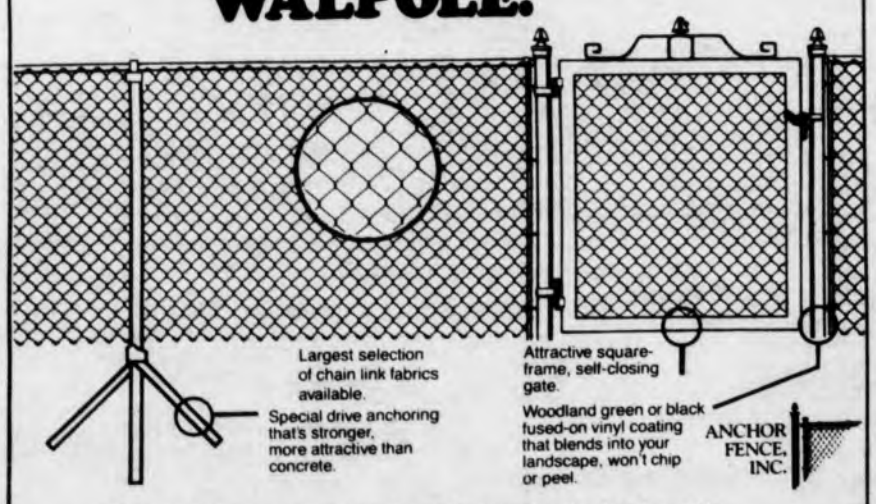
Other associates of the Jack Conway Co. with the CRB designation include Jack Conway of Cohasset, chairman of the company's board of directors.

Martha Gjesteby attends conference

Martha Gjesteby, representative of the Metropolitan Area Planning Council for Cohasset, met with 1000 state, county, city and regional officials from across the country June 8-11 at the 19th annual Conference of Regional Councils.

The conference is sponsored by the National Association of Regional Councils.

Gjesteby was among other state, county, city and regional officials in discussions on the major challenges facing state and local governments and shared approaches to meeting those challenges.



Gjesteby also met with state and local elected officials to explore new options for dealing with federal funding and proposed revisions of the tax code. Shifting roles of local governments in intergovernmental process have led citiesm counties and towns to explore new partnerships with state governments and the private sector as integral means for continued provision of essential programs and services.

The theme for the NARC 19th annual conference, "Regional Councils - Partners for Change, The State Connection," provided a forum for local officials to explore these partnerships. Representatives from state governments spoke on roles and initiatives for local governments in maintaining and enhancing state legislatures.

You've built equity in your home . . .

The equity in your home (the difference between the amount you owe on your first mortgage and what your home is really worth) is an asset often overlooked.

You worked for your home...now let your home work for you. Our loan officers will be pleased to talk with you about taking advantage of this ideal money source.

A loan on this equity can pay the tuition for your children's education, buy or build a recreational home, allow you to take advantage of investment opportunities, and even help you assume an existing mortgage on a new home. We can assist with any worthwhile financial need.

You have built equity in your home — why not use it???

Seminar helps sensitize officer to rape victi

By Jane Lane

Rape occurs in every town, no matter how small the community. Recognizing that fact, the Cohasset Police Department realized a need.

There is a need for someone sympathetic to the the victim; understanding and knowledgeable enough to capably assist during the crisis.

In early June, Officer Maureen Healy spent one week at the Framingham State Police Academy attending a rape investigation seminar. From those five days, she acquired new facts and a personal, human perspective about helping a victim through an experience the officer says "will change his or her life forever".

After a person has been raped, she explains, "he or she will have to alter their lifestyle forever. It will change the way they think about themselves, about the way their friends think about them, and the way their family sees them. Their life will never be the same."

From that seminar, Officer Healy departed with much knowledge and a new understanding of what a victim experiences in the aftermath of a rape. Once the crime has been committed, the trauma for a victim has just begun.

As Healy explains, a victim should report the crime to police. As Cohasset's rape officer, Healy will be confidentially contacted once the call is placed to police. She will then begin her work with the victim, helping to transport her to the hospital for an examination.

"Sometimes, even though the victim is often a woman, she may prefer to talk with another woman, although some may request a male officer," Healy says. As the only female on the Cohasset force, she will be the one to respond in most such inst.

Conversation and guidance, not pushing the victim to any decision, is the most important function of a rape officer at this time, she says. "At the time of the rape, the victim lost her right to make a decision. She had absolutely no rights or decisions in that matter. It's up to the officer now to allow her to make her own decisions, for her to feel responsible for taking control of the situation," Healy adds.

Although she is never proded into a choice, it is important for the victim to understand how crucial physical evidence is in prosecuting a rape case.

Search starts for new fire chief

The advertisement for the position of Cohasset Fire Chief will be sent out this week.

The committee assigned by selectmen to assist in finding a new chief set a deadline of August 15 for all applicants. After that, they will screen, interview, and likely test the eligible applicants. A list of five finalists, which the committee will list in prioritized order, will be given to selectmen in October.

Selectmen have the right to reject that final list, or select a new chief based on the committee's recommendations.

The contract for current Fire Chief Martin Dooley, will expire December 31. Selectmen decided several months ago not to renew that contract.

At the committee's first meeting Monday night, the subject of an exam was discussed. Stephen Bobo, chairman of the six-member group, said he would be able to have an examination compiled for applicants to the Cohasset position.

Edward McLaughlin of the International Society of Fire Services Instruction, has indicated a willingness to compile a test specifically designed for the Cohasset Fire Chief applicants. The main concern, he told the committee, would be the cost of devising such a test, and having someone administer and grade the exam.

Everyone on the committee agreed an outside agency or person should be responsible for administering the examination. Although there was some discussion about the length of the exam, it was decided it should not be more than four hours in length, and should pertain to firefighting situations unique to Cohasset.

It was also agreed the test should be given to those applicants deemed eligible for the position, since hundreds may respond to the advertisement. Only Bobo and member Brad Ketchum disagreed with the implementation of a test.

Applications will be screened as they arrive, members agreed. The committee chairman will receive copies of the applications from selectmen without any names, and the committee will review them together. Only those candidates deemed worthy for the position will be allowed to take an exam.

Bobo will talk with McLaughlin this week about the costs of such a test, and will talk also with selectmen about setting a budget for the committee. If the cost is extreme, a test will not be possible, he said.

It was also decided that although high marks on the test will be heavily considered, "it won't be the whole ball of wax," according to Bobo. "We have to see this exam first before we decide how it will be weighted."

The committee also has a list of 15 questions upon which each candidate will be scored. The individual

Blowing winds and soaking rains might have dampened at least part of the weekend's activities, but the future looks promising for the South Shore Art Center.

With obvious pride and anticipation, Center President Sheldon Ripley announced at Thursday's festival opening that the art center had just that afternoon purchased Tantillo's Auto Body Shop at 115 Ripley Road. He later said conversion from the auto shop to a gallery and classrooms, will take about a year and a half to complete.

The art center board of directors had been negotiating with William Tantillo, owner of the auto body shop for several months. About two months ago, the deal was closed with the stipulation that the center acquire all necessary state and local permits before the purchase was finalized.

According to Ripley, the shop owner grew weary of the uncertain wait, and said the deal would have to be completed immediately. Ripley said the board members concurred that the location fitted the center's needs, and voted last week to go through with the deal, although the permits had not yet been approved.

The center will appear before the Cohasset Zoning Board of Appeals August 1 to seek a special permit. The local sewer commission has okayed the change of use for the location, but the center is awaiting formal notification from the state Division of Water Pollution Control.

'Barnraising' for CCC

The Cohasset Community Center, a lasting landmark within Cohasset Village, is about to embark on a new adventure.

The Community Center, serving residents throughout the South Shore for about 40 years, is not moving to a new location. It's goal is simply to utilize all available space within its corner at South Main Street and Ripley Road.

Beginning now, the center is gathering its financial resources to expand its facilities and gymnasium. What they have planned is full use of a now-vacant barn located at the rear of the property. That barn will be virtually reconstructed, according to Center President Judy Volungis, with two levels available for gymnastic, ballet, aerobic and karate classes.

That will leave the nursery school room, which currently doubles as a gym, open for a fullday's use as a nursery school classroom. According to Volungis, the center is hoping to extend the current half-day class schedule to a full day's actvities.

The center is seeking $20,000 community contributions to match a $20,000 grant to be given by the South Shore Playhouse Associates Inc. Once that $40,000 is raised, construction will begin.

Dreams of expanding the center's facilities and activities have been in the planning stages for about eight years, since Volungis has been president. "This is it," she said this week, "we want construction to start yesterday."

Realistically, she noted, as soon as the financial building will take shape as the weeks progress, according to the center's development manager Joni Jensen.

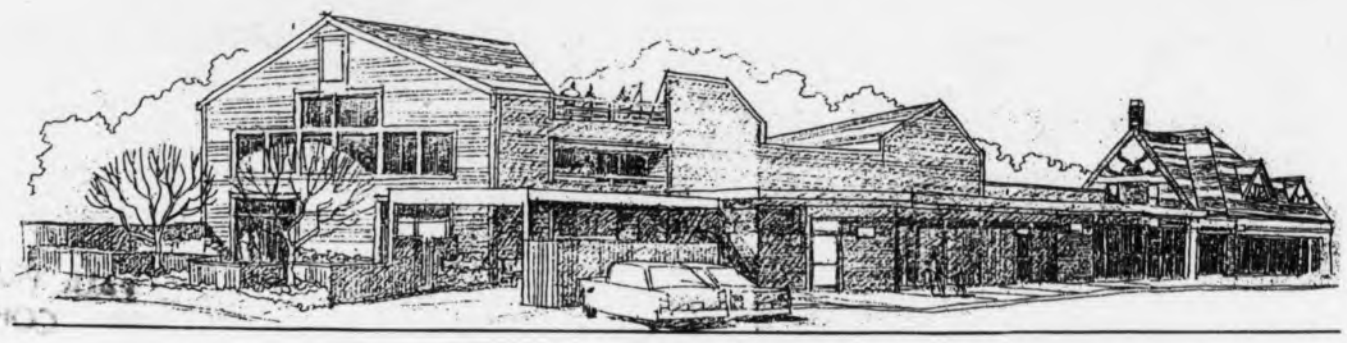
According to Jensen, the present auto body owner will be out of the building December 31. During the interim, the center will be talking with Ripley Road businesses, including the barber shop and bicycle shop owners, to see if renovations to the entire corner should be done in conjunction with the art center proposal.

Architects from Otis Vcevoid Stekalovsky of Hingham, have drawn preliminary plans for the new building. Until the architects meet with the other businesses in the vicinity, the exact costs of the renovations will not be known.

Although some money has been promised for the capital expenditure, there will be a major fundraiser, according to Jensen. After all plans are completed and costs are finalized, the board of directors will have a firm idea of those expenditures.

"It may be several weeks before we have a clear idea on what our costs will be," she explained. "If that whole corner is going to be renovated, it may change the perspective. We haven't yet gone through all the pricing."



It's a perfect way to celebrate the center's 30th anniversary, according to President Ripley who made the happy announcement to an assembled crowd at the Art Center Festival opening preview.

More than 100 artists, patrons and well-wishers gathered inside the Second Congregational Church to view the prize-winning pieces. Although the painting, scuplture, photography and 3-D exhibit was supposed to take place on the grounds of The Oaks, foul weather spoiled those plans.

Protected from the chilling winds and steady rains, the guests and artists sipped champagne and listened to a brass quintet while viewing the works. It was a cheerful, accommodating crowd that helped to celebrate the beginning of the Festival weekend, and the start of a new future for the South Shore Art Center.

Festival prize winners

In selecting the juried show for the 30th anniversary of the Art Festival, the jurors looked for the predominance of the personality of the artist over convention.

This is the architect's rendering of the proposed art center on Ripley Road.

First prize, second prize, and honorable mentions were given in oil, acrylic, watercolor, graphics, drawing , and sculpture and 3-D.

First prize in oil and acrylic awarded by Rockland Trust Co. went to Jean Sawyer Railton for her oil piece, Yellow Bowl and Blue Box. Second in this category went to Jeff Kern for his oil, Red House, Equinox. Honorable mentions were given to Janet C. Blagdon, Susan DeMichele, John Kilroy, and Susan Rodgerson.

First prize in watercolor awarded by Lincoln Trust Co. went to Mary Lizotte for her piece, Aunt Con's Vase. Second prize went to Joanne regan for her work, Tha Many Mended Basket and to Margaret Tittemore for Before the Tea Ceremony. Honorable mentions were given to Dassie Abelson and Dorothy Gunther.

First prize in graphics and drawing awarded by Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Williams and Cohasset Savings Bank went to Wilfred Loring for her acquatint, My Father's Garden. Second prize went to Phyllis A. Levine for her colored pencil work, Flowers, Vases and Spaces, and honorable mention went to Lisbeth Koopman-Wyman for her pastel, Michael.

Only a first prize was awarded in sculpture and 3/D and it was given by Angelo's Supermarkets, Weymouth Savings Bank and the Mariner Newspapers to Dennis Kowal for his acrylic and stainless steel scuplture, American Ikon Series.

Jurors selecting the show were George Nick, professor of art at Massachusetts College of Art; John Arthur, art consultant, independent curator and author; and Catherine Mayes, abstract painter and printmaker, and director of the Museum School at the Brockton Art Museum.

Jurors in the photographic competition included Jean Caslin, assistant director of Photographic Resource Center and Steve Nelson, award-winning photographer and commercial advertising photographer.

Receiving first prize in color awarded by Cohasset Chamber of Commerce and Bank of New England-Hancock was James Dyrek for his photograph, Doors. Second prize went to Mary Schiess for her piece, Dog and Job. First Honorable Mention went to Tom Johnson for his piece, Winter Benches and honorable mentions were given to William Berchen, Linda Getgen, Tessa Frootko Gordon, and Peg Newman.

First prize in black and white awarded by Pilgrim Cooperative Bank, Quincy Savings Bank and Bay Bank/Norfolk Trust, went to John Goldie III for his photograph, Valentine's Day Party. Second prize went to Jame Dyrek for his piece, Bags. First Honorable Mention was given to Tracy Rogers for her piece, Potholes, and honorable mentions were given to Hy Sansoucy and Julie White.

Quincy Cooperative Bank awards were given by the South Shore Art Center to four of its member artists during the weekend Art Festival.

The members show offers an opportunity for artist members of the Center to exhibit their works during the festival on the Common.

Awards went to Rosalind Farbush for an acrylic piece, Santa Prisca; Ottilie Brown, for a watercolor, Children at the Zocalo; Patricia McCarthy for a watercolor, Fruit and Flowers; and to Janet Blagdon, for an acrylic on paper, Dover Field.

Honorable mentions were given to Patricia Gray, Jean Sawyer Railton, Helen Gallop, Page Railsback, Marion Bush, Joan Appel, Judith Rossman, and Neal Kupferman.

Jurors for the members show were artist Mary Lizotte and Mary Reardon.

pledges start flowing in, and the $20,000 grant is matched, the project will officially be underway.

The architectural work for the barn reconstruction has been done free of charge by the firm of St. Don and associates of Marshfield. Bob Booth has donated all site plan work.

The approximate cost of the "barnraising" will total $125,000. The center expects to raise $85,000 of entirely through fundraisers and bank loans.

The Cohasset Community Center has been a fixture in this town for just about 40 years. Its first president and founder, is Nate Hurwitz, the father of Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray. The center was originally at the corner of Sohier and North Main Streets and moved to its current location in the late 1940s.

Today, more than 500 families hold memberships to the center. Residents of Cohasset, Norwell, Hull, Hingham and Scituate participate in many of the center's programs.

The year-round program offers diverse activities such as Tumbling Tots for toddlers, to gourmet cooking for adults. Next year, there is a possibility of locating a Senior Citizens drop in center within the Community Center.

The renovated barn will accomodate up to 200 persons, according to Volungis. At its completion, the barn will be available for rental use.

Currently, gymnastics, ballet and karate occupy the nursery school classroom every afternoon from September through June. Because there has been a a need expressed for fulltime nursery school care, the center would like to open the facility to a full class day, Volungis said.

By holding these other activities in the barn, the classroom would be free for the entire day.

The center employs six nursery school staff persons, and an office manager. There is a custodian for the building, and a manager of the four bowling alleys. Most courses are taught by separate instructors.

Volungis explained that the foundation beneath the barn must be reconstructed before any other work is begun. The barn will include a two-story level in the middle, where gymnastic apparatus, such as rings, will be available for classes.

With the added room and facilities, there will be expanded instruction, including volleyball, basketball, wrestling and aerobics. The center is also hoping the new area will accomodate more dances for local students, according to Volungis.

"It has taken a long time to get things rolling," she said this week. "But as soon as we can get $20,000 together, we're going to start construction. We want this completed as soon as possible."

Anyone wishing to contribution to the "barnraising" should send a check payable to the Community Center of Cohasset, Inc. and mail it to 3 North Main Street, Cohasset, 02025.

The Law and You

by Richard Price, Attorney-at-Law

GARNISHMENT

Before you have filed petition in bankruptcy, your creditors may decide to ask a court to "garnish" your wages. If granted, this means that your employer will be required to withhold a portion of your paycheck each pay period and turn the money over to the creditor who petitioned the court. Such tactics are perfectly legal when you are behind on your payments. Take note, however, that creditors are not allowed to harass you in other ways. If a creditor comes to you with threats, veiled or otherwise, that he will go to your employer directly or that he will do physical harm to you, he has violated the law.

The best approach to any legal consideration is an understanding of your rights and responsibilities and clear-cut documented agreements before the fact. Thus, if differences arise, the intentions of all concerned can be clearly evidenced. In this fashion your interests are best protected. For the consideration you require in anticipation of such matters and in the preparation of needed valid documents, consult an attorney. LAW OFFICES OF RICHARD PRICE, 760 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy., Rt. 3A, Cohasset, 383-9882. I am available daily by appointment.

Seminar helps sensitize officer to rape victims

Officer Maureen Healy

Officer Healy thinks a physical examination at a hospital is vital for the health of the victim.

A rape victim is under no obligation to decide whether she will defintiely prosecute, even after an exam has been completed. After the exam, she will probably want to talk some more about the process involved in prosecuting her rapist, Healy says.

All results of the physician's exam are confidential and will not be discussed with the police, although it may be used as evidence during a trial.

Although a doctor may not discuss the exam with the police officer, it is crucial that the victim's clothing, and all tests conducted during the physical exam be properly contained. All clothing and tested materials must be wrapped in specific containers and stored in a precise manner. The accurate preservation of the evidence is important, should the victim decide to prosecute her assailant.

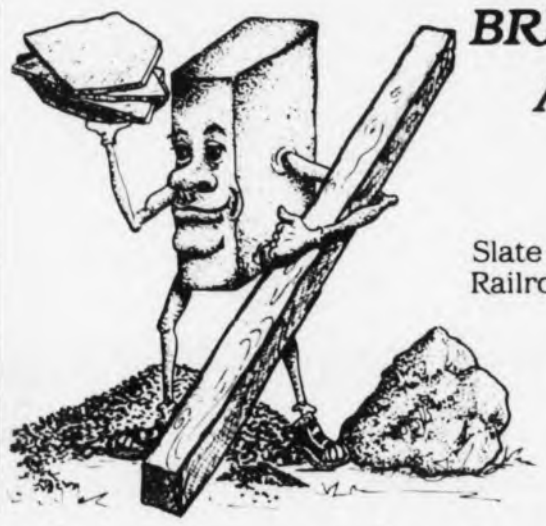
"Without that physical evidence, certified by a physician, rape is very hard to prosecute," Healy continues. "To prove rape in court, you must prove there was an assault or penetration of the body by an object. Without the hospital evidence, you can't 100 percent guarantee that there was penetration. You must have traces of semen or saliva to get a blood type of the assailant, and then the courts can prosecute. And once that evidence is gone, it's gone forever."

The legal definition of rape, which surprised even this two-year Cohasset Police Department veteran, is the penetration of any orafice of the body with any object, without the consent of that person. The bottom line, according to Officer Healy, is that the victim did not give his or her consent to the sexual act.

"If a couple has been dating for three years, and she says no this particular night and he assaults her, that's rape," she explains. "If the victim gives consent under duress, that may also be construed as rape. A mugger holding a knife to her throat and she says, 'do anything, but don't kill me.' That's considered rape."

The victim of rape has six years in which he or she can decide to prosecute the assailant.

Sexual assault to anyone under the age of 16 years is statutory rape.



Another startling statistic Officer Healy acquired at the seminar is the fact that more than 70 percent of all rape victims know their assailant. "Whether he is a neighbor, ex-boyfriend or husband, or someone who works at the local store, most rapes are committed by acquaintances," she states.

When Officer Healy arrives at the home of the victim, or at the scene of the assault, her first responsibility is to attempt to calm the victim. "I will talk about whatever she wants to talk about, letting her know that an examination is an important choice to make at some point. Although the victim should not have anything to drink at this point, I would let her do that if she would calm down a bit. I would give her the option of seeing a counselor. Much of the time, after the physical bruises have disappeared, there's still the mental trauma to deal with. Even months and years later," Healy explains.

It's important for the officer to be sensitive to the feelings and needs of the victim throughout the investigation. Initially, the officer must never question the victim in a harsh manner. "Why were you walking down that dark road by your self? Why were you wearing such a short skirt? Those kinds of questions must never be asked of the victim. We must try to be as sensitive and understanding as possible," according to the officer.

Because the experience has been so negative, often the victim will fail to remember any details.

scoring weight of each question will depend on the number of applicants being interviewed, the members decided.

The committee briefly reviewed the qualifications for the position, as given them by selectmen. According to their understanding, the position requires graduation from an accredited high school and completion of college level courses in fire science and fire administration. "Has a minimum of ten years of firefighting experience, three years of which have been in the capacity of Lieutenant, Captain, Deputy Chief, or Chief, or any combination of education and experience which demonstrates possession of the knowledge, skills, leadership and management abilities to plan, direct and administer the operation of the department," the qualifications stated.

There are also a list of 15 separate qualifications which will be reviewed for each candidate. The list was given the committee by selectmen, although Bobo said they could make suggested changes for selectmen's approval.

Ralph Perroncello said he would prefer at least five years experience as an officer, not three. "Maybe some 25 or 26 year-old bookworm can surpass a guy with a lot more experience, just because he beat him the test," he said.

Cohasset firefighter Paul Bilodeau said the town was looking for "an adminstrative-type guy, not just someone with firefighting abilities."

Bobo agreed that hiking the experience level would limit the field of otherwise qualified applicants.

The board members decided that the advertisement for the position will be sent this week to the Patriot Ledger, the Boston Globe and two fire chief association journals. They also decided that all eligible applicants should travel to Cohasset for a personal interview with the committee.

They also agreed to have their next meeting Monday, July 8 at the fire station. The meeting will be open to the public. The main purpose of holding the meeting there, according to Bobo, is to "give the firefighters an opportunity to have some input to this committee that is selecting their next boss. We will describe for them what we are trying to do and then open the meeting for their questions."

Award to Dahlin

At a State House ceremony in June, State Auditor John Finnegan presented Warren F. Dahlin, Jr. of the South Shore Elder Services, Cohasset, with a certificate for completing the Management Development Course offered by the Auditor's Institute.

The Institute, a training program for public and private sector human service professionals, is sponsored by Auditor Finnegan's office in conjunction with the University of Massachusetts/Boston's Division of Continuing Education. Instruction is offered in several areas of financial management, including contracts, records management, and audit policies and procedures. In all, 47 human service professionals received certificates for attending the Institute's third, seven-week session.

The Institute is the cornerstone of Auditor Finnegan's "Blueprint for Reform," the document that offers 23 major reforms for the state's purchase of human services.

Library family story hours

"Family Story Hour" has become a popular summer tradition at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. Guest storytellers from the New England area will once again present a series of evening programs for family enjoyment. The Children's Room is pleased to offer these story hours on Monday evenings, beginning on July 8 at 7:30.

Ms. Elaine Weischedel, Children's Librarian from the Turner Free Library, Randolph, will be our first guest storyteller. Ms. Weischedel became interested in the art of storytelling as a librarian in the Wilmington, Delaware, area, where she was also a member of the Wilmington Storytellers. She recently moved to the South Shore, where she has also become a member of the South Shore Storytellers.

Her program will include a "Story Hat." This is a straw hat which has numerous items pinned to it. Ms. Weischedel will ask members of the audience to select "Story Hat" items about which she will then tell stories. Her program will last about 45 minutes.

Cosby at fundraiser

Bill Cosby headlines a Coastal Community Counseling Center fundraiser evening on Saturday, August 24. The evening begins at 7 p.m. with a cocktail party at the home of June and Paul Verrochi. Jerusalem Road, Cohasset, catered by J. Bildner and Sons of Boston (and soon to open in Cohasset).

The guests will then be entertained at the South Shore Music Circus by Bill Cosby at 9 p.m. The special event is on the occasion of the retirement of Coastal's Board President, James C. Worcester.

Tickets are available for $100 per person and are tax deductable. For your reservation, please call Michael Ruben at 849-1220.

Coastal Community Counseling Center is a private, non-profit mental health center serving the coastal towns south of Boston. Coastal's comprehensive program includes individual, group and family counseling, plus specific programs tailored to meet identified needs of the population.

Pre-school story hours

A summer story hour series for children 3½ years to six years of age begins Friday, July 12, at 10 a.m. in the children's room of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

Each of the six programs will consist of three picture book stories, a finger play or song and a simple craft. There is no registration for this series. Each program will last approximately 40 minutes.

Volunteer story sharers who will present the stories are Weezie Welz, Nancy Connolly, Cissie Cullivan, Martha Equi and Lee Jenkins. These women have completed the library's story sharers' orientation program.

Anyone who is interested in being a volunteer in this program should contact the children's librarians. Registrations are being taken now for the fall pre-school programs for Thursday afternoons and Friday mornings.

Museum

A piece of the South Shore's maritime past is being brought back to life at the newly opened Hull Lifesaving Museum. At the door of the Museum, you enter the world of turn-of-the-century lifesavers, men who risked their lives to save the shipwrecked. The building you are in is the 100-year-old Point Allerton Life Saving Station, whose first Keeper, Joshua James, was the most famous of America's lifesavers.

On Saturdays at 2 p.m., you can watch and participate in a breeches buoy rescue drill. On Sundays from 1 to 3 p.m., there are maritime and turn-of-the-century craft demonstrations. Special events, on land and on water, for adults and kids, are scheduled throughout the summer. The Museum is open Wednesday through Sunday, from noon to 5 p.m., and by appointment for groups. Admission is $1 for adults, $.50 for kids 5 to 17, members and children under 5 are free. The Museum is located at 1117 Nantasket Ave. in Hull.

Admission is $35 per person and includes: lobsters, clam chowder, steamers, etc., a silent auction on many exciting items, and a square dance.

There is limited seating so call Debbie Cook, 383-6313 or Mary Larson, 383-0775 by July 20.

A sneak preview of items for auction and bids will be accepted at the Parish House Friday, Aug. 9, from 2 to 5 p.m.

Sunday carillons

The 1985 Summer Carillon recitals will be held Sunday afternoons from 4 to 5 p.m., June 30 through September 15 from St. Stephen's Church.

The Carillonneurs for the 61st season are:

June 30, George Matthew, Jr., Stamford, Conn.; July 7, Andre Wagemans, Tienen, Belgium; July 14, Beverly Buchanan, Bloomfield Hills, Mich.; July 21, James R.Lawson, New York City, N.Y.; July 28, Carolyn Reiser, Jacksonville, Fla.; Aug. 4, Sally Slade Warner, Andover, Mass.; Aug. 11, Daniel Kehoe, Hartford, Conn.; Aug. 18, Frank Pechin Law, Valley Forge, Pa.; Aug. 25, Richard M. Watson, Cincinnati, Ohio; Sept. 1, George Matthew, Jr., Stamford, Conn.; Sept. 8, Janet Dundore, Whitemarsh, Pa., and Sept. 15, Sally Slade Warner, Andover, Mass.

Andre Wagemans was born in Tienen, Belgium, in 1922, and has been Municipal Carillonneur there since 1954. He was graduated "with great distinction" from the Royal Carillon School in Mechelin, and has won many awards in carillon performance in Belgium and The Netherlands. Mr. Wagemans has played recitals in Belgium, The Netherlands, France, the United States and Canada, and has recorded for Belgian Broadcasting and Television. He has been active as conductor, and as director in the music theater.

Chiropractic for HEALTH

by Dr. Kevin M. Neill, Chiropractic Physician

A SLIP UP

The term "slipped disc" is actually a misnomer. Discs are firmly attached to the vertebrae above and below them and, as such, cannot "slip". They can, however, become wedged due to the misalignment of one or both of the neighboring vertebrae. It is this condition that is often termed a "slipped disc". A common cause of such wedging is a sudden injury to the spine from a fall, strain, jolt or auto accident. The result is often indescribable pain. With severe symptoms, range of motion may also be limited. A chiropractor does not try to simply stop the pain with drugs. He will analyze the problem and correct any vertebral misalignment with chiropractic methods. The disc is then freed to resume its natural position and function.

The science of chiropractic offers a natural, knifeless and drugless approach to many painful problems one is exposed to. From such disc discomforts to other painful as well as annoying situations, relief may well be found from effective chiropractic applications. At the COHASSET CHIROPRACTIC OFFICE, 760 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy., Suite 12, we offer the exam and analysis of your circumstances that will allow for an approach directly to the source of your discomfort and problem. We deal with the source....not the symptom of the problem. Tel. 383-1211, 1214. Daily by appt.

HINT:

The most common age for experiencing the rupturing of an intervertebral disc is between 40 and 45 years of age.

around town

☐Even though there wasn't a lot of sunshine in Cohasset last week, there were smiles to be seen on their faces. . . I am talking about Ben and Anne Curley and Polly Litchfield, who are brand new grandparents. Peter and Linda had a boy recently, and no one has been the same since. . .who can blame them! What is more exciting than a brand new baby, especially when it is a grandchild!

☐In honor of their 25th anniversary, Pat and Maria Plante renewed their vows a while ago. They are a wonderful couple. Here's to their next 25 years!

☐Another couple celebrated their 25th anniversary last weekend, rain and all! The children of Mr. and Mrs. Don O'Neill had a luncheon to honor the occasion, held at their home. The grounds looked lovely, the pink and white tents were so festive. No one even cared that it was raining. They were having a wonderful time. Congratulations to Don and Sally.

☐Laura Hines, a junior at Holy Cross College, has been named to the Dean's List for the second semester of the 1984-1985 academic year, college officials have announced. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Robey of 12 Ledge Way, and is majoring in Psychology. Founded in 1843, Holy Cross is the oldest Catholic college in New England. It is a coed, Jesuit, liberal arts college, with an enrollment of 2,500 students.

☐Cari Golden, daughter of Doris and Jack Golden of Bound Brook Lane, graduated from Northeastern University's School of Nursing cum laude recently. Cari is now working at Beth Israel Hospital, and is planning on going to graduate school for her master's degree in Business Administration. Congratulations to Cari — she has the kind of manner that will make her patients feel better by just being there with them.

☐Sam Durant received the Class of 1917 award during the honors convocation at commencement of the Massachusetts College of Art.

☐The Edmonds girls are home again. Mrs. Bruce Edmonds and her daughters, Bonnie (Ritter), Sheila (Long), and Joan (Lawrence) arrived home after a trip to Ireland and England. They had a super time, hated to leave. All of the driving was done by Joan while they were in Ireland. Here's hoping that she'll remember which side of the road to drive on when she returns home! Home for Joan is the mountains of Colorado, and for Bonnie and Sheila, the flat lands of Texas are what they call home.

☐Best of luck to Mike Mahoney as he begins his freshman year at college — West Point, to be exact. It's "a given" that he will excel in whatever he does.

☐Shawn Megathlin, son of Dr. and Mrs. Keith Megathlin, was here last weekend to dedicate the new elevator in the Second Congregational Church. His grandparents, Evie and Norm, were special members of the church, which is one of the reasons that the project was named for them. Gifts in their memory were a major source of the funding for the elevator. Now there is a way for everyone to be able to attend services. Shawn did a magnificent job representing his Dad, who couldn't get away because his "doctor duties" came first.

☐Cheryl Turner was one of 50 Southeastern Mass. teenagers honored for their completion of one to four years of a Christian gospel study course conducted by the Church of Jesus Christ of the Latter-Day Saints. The exercises were conducted and planned by the students, and Cheryl was one of the five senior grads that was presented with a silver pen and pencil set.

☐Congratulations to Jeff and Amy Loughran who celebrated their wedding anniversary recently.

☐William B. Henry, son of William and Carol Henry of 94 North Main Street, recently received a bachelor of arts degree at the 119th Bates College commencement.

An art major, Henry spent a semester of his junior year studying in Florence, Italy. He was employed at Bates in the art department's slide library and by the college's Treat Gallery.

He is a graduate of Cohasset High Scho[illegible].

☐I[illegible]vid Barcomb, the son of Mr. and [illegible]rs. Wayne Barcomb of Aaron River Road, recently graduated from The Williston Northampton School, an independent, coeducational college preparatory school in Easthampton. Barcomb was also the recipient of the Walter Miller Baseball Award in recognition of his contributions to the boys' varsity baseball team. He was voted as the team's Most Valuable Player as well. Barcomb will be attending Trinity College in the fall.

☐Don't forget the summer reading program at the library this summer. Go to the library and find out the details. It is really fun for the children. And, if the weather keeps up as it has been, it looks like it will be a grand summer to read!

☐That's the news for this week . . .Keep it coming. There should be plenty around now that summer is here!

The elevator for the Second Congregational was dedicated in ceremonies Sunday morning. Participating in the service was Shawn Megathlin (grandson of Norman and Evelyn Megathlin, for whom the elevator was dedicated), Rev. John Benbow Richard J. Silvia, chairman of the elevator committee, and Rebecca Jordon. (Sarah Lewis)

Long-awaited elevator for church

The long-awaited elevator within the Second Congregational Church was dedicated in a special service and reception last Sunday morning at the church.

In grateful acknowledgement of a major gift which covered the cost of the elevator mechanism and equipment, the elevator committee designated the new installation the Megathlin Elevator, in memory of Norman and Evelyn Megathlin, long-time members of the church.

The dedication service was a happy conclusion to many years of planning and the cooperation of dozens of people within and outside the church membership. The project included not only the elevator and extensive renovation of the building to accomodate it, but the concrete access ramp, new landscaping and planting near the fron the church. There is also a new restroom accessible to people in wheelchairs.

In addition, rooms displaced by the elevator are being relocated in other parts of the church, with a new nursery and choir room to be completed this summer.

Editorials

Positive alternatives

It's not often that we care to take up our readers' time with two consecutive editorials regarding the same issue. It detracts from the other events occurring throughout our town, and often affects only a certain segment of our population.

But we have a few things to say about our editorial last week regarding the sixth grade students and parents, and the response which has been overwhelming.

There is a letter to the editor in today's pages which was signed by several parents. They discredit our editorial of last week, and object to the 'flash' approach we took after attending only one public meeting held last week.

In response, let us state that had we had one full week to editorialize on this timely issue, we could have used it well. Opinions on all sides of this matter (for there are two sides, we are told), could have been gathered in a more leisurely manner.

But, newspaper deadlines as they are, we had only 24 hours following last Monday's meeting to gather our words together for publication. The parent who wrote the reply to our editorial had that full week to write and gather signatures.

Second, let us state that as objective reporters sitting at that public meeting last week, we only heard and saw what occurred before us. That is what we wrote about in our story, and what we observed in our editorial. That is the perception the parents' group gave to the public; a public not privy to information discussed previously among parents and teachers.

We ask that, in the event an extra teacher is not made available, these parents produce some meaningful alternatives.

We agree that children should be reinforced with affirmatives, not negatives. Let's continue to work on those.

Not once was it ever mentioned at last week's meeting how "wonderful, creative and talented" these kids are. It is something we might have assumed,but it was never stated at last week's meeting before the school committee.

We heard from many parents last week, dismayed and angered by our editorial. It aroused many feelings, but in the end, we believe it will also help to destroy the label that this is the class with problems. Perhaps we must all become sensitive to this issue, and always, considering our children first, work constructively. We must continually acknowledge how bright these children are, and participate in ways in which they will realize their potential.

Realizing how bright these students really are, and how dedicated their parents are to resolving the situation, we are sure alternatives can be discussed and devised.

For the public's benefit, we would like to know what alternatives to a fourth classroom teacher are being discussed by parents, teachers and administrators.
